At a Meeting of the COUNCIL OF THE SURTEES SOCIETY, held in Durham Castle, on Tuesday, March 9th, 1871, it was ORDERED, That the CHARTULARY OF WHITBY should be edited for the Society by the Rev. J. C. ATKINSON, of Danby.

Secretary.

PREFACE.

THE source from which the material part of the contents of the present volume is derived is an ancient manuscript book in the possession of Sir Charles Strickland, and obligingly placed by him in the hands of the present editor, in order to enable the Surtees Society to add the Whitby Chartulary to its series. It is a small volume,  $8\frac{3}{4}$  inches long by 6 broad, and, inclusive of its oak boards, about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches thick. In Dr. Young's description of it,<sup>1</sup> it is said to contain "144 leaves of vellum, with an appendix of strong paper. The greater part of it," he continues, "is beautifully written, with the initial capitals illuminated or painted. About seventy leaves have been written in one hand, beginning with the charter of the first William de Percy on the leaf now marked 8;" which, as he remarks in a note, has been, as is quite obvious, originally intended to be the first leaf. "The seven leaves immediately preceding the one marked 8 have been filled up before the leaves were numbered, and are chiefly occupied with small charters. Six blank leaves still remained in the front of the book. Of these the two next before that marked 1 contain an ancient index to the volume ; in the other four we find a catalogue of the library, a long memorial of the founding of the Abbey, and of its possessions, a copy of the questions put to the abbot at his consecration, and the memorial respecting Benedict and his successors." But this historian does not note the fact that the four leaves, the contents of which he thus specifies, are considerably narrower than those that follow them, and had evidently been written long before the volume itself was formed or bound, and that all the leaves which follow up to that now marked 8 are, as clearly as their four predecessors, likewise insertions before that which he rightly describes as originally intended to be the first leaf. Neither does he notice the fact, that six leaves have been cut out out of the nine which intervened between the last page of the index and that which is numbered 1. The leaf marked 71 is the first in a different hand from that of its sixty-eight predecessors, and the reverse is in yet another and later hand ; and then follow from 72 to 114 in a hand distinctively different from, and at least a century later than, that of leaf 8 et seq. ; a fresh hand again, and not much later than the last, begins at the foot of leaf 114, and continues to the foot of leaf 124. From this point to the end of the parchment part of the book the entries are in several different hands, and several blank pages and some excisions occur.

Young notes that " the charters in this register are not arranged in the order of time ; that the plan pursued is to place together the documents relating to the same subject,"—which, with some reservations, not unimportant, is true. He also remarks that "a number of the charters belonging to the Abbey are not to be found in this volume," as also that "this book is not the only Whitby Register; for we find in Tanner's Notitia (p. 632) that there was another bought at a sale by the Earl of Kent; besides others consulted by Dodsworth."<sup>1</sup> Both these statements are also correct; and in the second of the present volumes will be found upwards of 150 charters mainly derived from another copy of the Chartulary preserved among the "ADDITIONAL MSS." series in the British Museum, several others also coming from original sources or from Dodsworth's Collections.<sup>2</sup> As regards the copy purchased by the Earl of Kent, it has, so far, been found impossible to trace it. No clew even to what may possibly have become of it seems to be obtainable. This is unfortunate, for, to judge by what has been given up by the Museum copy—even when the existing lacunæ in it are allowed for—several of the important early charters known to be missing might possibly, or even probably, have been recovered in it. Unhappily too much that must have been in existence in Charlton's time, and even in Dr. Young's, has now disappeared; while from entries in Dodsworth it is apparent that, at a date about a century earlier than Charlton's, other important historical documents were in possession of the lords of Whitby. Possibly, or more than possibly, the entries in the foremost page of Sir C. Strickland's copy, dated respectively 1671 and 1683, may suggest that up to that time suchlike ancient relics were carefully preserved, and from time to time officially inspected. The thanks of the Society are specially due to Sir Charles Strickland for his kind courtesy in placing his book, and whatever other ancient documents he still retains, in the editor's hands for the purposes of the present volumes. The editor has also to thank the Rev. W. Greenwell, Canon Raine, Professor Stubbs, and another friend who does not wish a public acknowledgment, for their kind and valuable assistance in compiling the present volumes. But especially are his thanks due to William Brown, of Arncliffe Hall, Esq., for his unwearied kindness and diligence in transcribing, collating, and working up references. It was by this gentleman that the editor's copy was collated with the Museum copy so far as the charters, etc., in each were coincident, and that copies of the charters not in the Whitby copy were made for future collation by the editor himself. Overburdened as the editor is by the toils and cares, clerical and secular, of a very large parish, the present volumes could not have seen the light for many a day—perhaps even years—had it not been for Mr. Brown's disinterested, painstaking, and most efficient, as well as long-continued help.

<sup>2</sup> The Museum copy, which is marked "Add. mss. 4715," will be more specifically dealt with in the second volume, where the conclusions arrived at by the editor as to the other possible or supposed copies assumed to have been available by Dodsworth or the writers he copies from, will also be stated.

CHAPTER I.

THE first authentic mention of the place now called Whitby appears to have been made by Bede in his History of the Church, and from his mention of the place its name in 656 was Streanæshalch:—at least, I think it is a fair inference from his words that that name had been already imposed before the foundation of the Anglo-Saxon monastery took place.

That this name had—like all other place-names—its own proper signification, is a matter of absolute certainty: what that signification may have been is, however, almost equally uncertain. Certainly, as I have said elsewhere,<sup>1</sup> Bede's interpretation—"Streanæshalch, quod interpretatur Sinus Fari"—ought to be satisfactory; but it is not, for the name consists of two elements, neither of which, as it would seem, can possibly mean sinus, or bay. Touching this, Young, the Whitby historian, remarks—"I am fully persuaded that this interpretation must be erroneous; but as it is not likely that Bede himself could mistake its meaning, I am disposed to think that the passage is an interpolation by some ignorant transcriber, or rather that 'Sinus fari' is not the true reading;" and he adds that, though Henry of Huntingdon, Matthew of Westminster, and other ancient authors, have quoted Bede's explanation of Heortea or Heoruteu, none of them, save Roger Hoveden alone, have quoted the translation (of Streanæshalch, namely) 'Sinus fari.'"

For myself, after a good deal of patient investigation bestowed upon the derivation of the place-names of the district, I have no doubt that the first element in the name is what so large a majority of the prefixes in our local nomenclature clearly are, and that is the name of a person. Such a name existed in the eleventh century, in the form of an agnomen or nickname—Mr. Freeman calls it a surname—in the case of Edric Streone, and we find it as a prefix in the name Streonbercht, which occurs in the Liber Vitæ. But as to the meaning of the suffix, that is clearly uncertain. There can be little doubt, however, that -healch, -halch, or -halc, is the true form, and I look upon the forms -halh, -hcalh, -heale, quoted by Young, as merely worn forms, or, in other words, forms from which the c has dropped out by usage. While, from the occurrence of the same suffix in a local name met with in some early documents contained in the Whitby Chartulary, in the twofold forms -halc, -halef,<sup>1</sup> I am inclined to think that the final ch was dealt with in pronunciation precisely as it was—and is—in other words in which it is found; and I specify Old Anglian gruch, which is printed “grudge” in our Prayer-book version of the Psalms, and is sounded gruff in the Cleveland vernacular.<sup>2</sup> And if this be so, it is as nearly certain as can be that there may be a close connection, if not a perfect identity, between the -halch in Bede’s “Streanæshalch,” and the word of such common occurrence in North Britain, which is written by Jamieson heuch, hewch, heugh, and sounded nearly as heuff is.

And in support of this view I would remark that the name Streanæshalch or Streoneshalc was, beyond all doubt, applied to the site of the Monastery—that is, to the level space environed on two sides by the steep precipices of the cliffs whereon Hilda’s “Holy house” undoubtedly stood. For there is no question that, at the period of Domesday, Whitby—then written Witebi—and Prestebi were two distinct places. Indeed, soke of the latter appertained to the Manor of Witebi. While, at the very outset of the most ancient writing in the volume, called indiscriminately "The Abbot's Book," "The Whitby Register," or "The Whitby Chartulary"—which writing dates most likely not much, if at all, below 1160, and is described as the "Memorial of Benefactions," whereas the newly-founded abbey is spoken of as situate "in loco qui olim Streoneshalc vocabatur, deinde Prestebi appellabatur, nunc vero Witebi vocatur," still the first donation by William de Perci, the founder, of two carucates of land—inclusive necessarily of the site itself—is stated to have been at Prestebi; a statement which, as is apparent, not only involves a contradistinction between Witebi and Prestebi in 1070—the latter being merely the ancient (or Anglian) Streneshalc under a newer (namely a Danish) name—but also proves that the name Witebi of 1150-1160, when the restored Abbey had become the great distinguishing or characterising feature of the district, had come to be a name absorbing within itself, and so superseding, the older distinctive local name of Prestebi, just as the latter had itself, some two or three centuries before, superseded the still older name of Streneshalch.

For, as already intimated, there is no doubt where the Anglo-Saxon Monastery stood, and therefore no doubt where "the place which used to be called Streneshalc" had its locality, even if the point were not settled by the short Latin extract given a little above. The great "kitchen-midding" which is known to exist in so many places at the foot of the bank above which slopes the "Almary Field," is quite sufficient as an index to the site of the domestic buildings of the elder monastery; and, indeed, a very cursory glance at the brae of the said bank, even without the remembrance of the runed Anglo-Saxon comb found there (and now in the local museum), would go very far towards enforcing the same conclusion; it is full of the matters which go to constitute what is understood by a kitchen-midding.

Setting, therefore, side by side the certainty that the ascertained site of Streanæshalc was a level space girt in for many hundred yards with precipitous cliffs—in other terms, a "heugh"—and the philological probability, or more, that halch, halc, halef, heuch, heugh, are only differing forms of the same word, I think we have a more reasonable derivation of the old name for Whitby than those that have hitherto been suggested.

I have thought it well to give so much space to a notice of the possible signification of the name and of the "local habitation" of the ancient Streanæshalch, because no small portion of the interest attaching to the ancient history of Whitby—and it is hard, if not impossible, to separate between the ecclesiastical and the secular history in those old days—of necessity connects itself with the elder monastery.

It has been noticed elsewhere that the materials for compiling anything like a connected history of the pre-Norman Monastery at Whitby are not only sufficiently scanty, but are also such as not to be clear of many elements of doubt and uncertainty. Here, however, it may be sufficient to state that the main facts of its foundation by Hild or Hilda, and of the date of the foundation—namely, about two years after the battle of Winwidfield (which was fought in November 654), may be looked upon as resting on the positive testimony of Bede. It is not clear how the lady Hild acquired possession of the land on which the Monastery was built. Young says she "purchased a possession of ten hydes of land in a [he should have written the] place called Streoneshalh," but admits in a note that "purchased" may not be the right word to employ, notwithstanding that (as he adds) "the Saxon version clearly states that she 'bought' it;" the fact really being that the Saxon version employs a word which no doubt means "bought," but also as certainly means "procured;" while the Latin version employs the terms, "comparata possessione decem familiarum" (having become possessed of ten hides). Now Oswiu had vowed, before Winwidfield, to give twelve possessions, if victorious, for the building of monasteries; and, the victory won, he gave them, six in Bernicia and six in Deira; of which last district Cleveland was a constituent part. And as King Oswiu's daughter, with whom these "possessions" were given, entered the Monastery of Heoruteu, of which Hilda was then abbess, there seems to be every antecedent probability that the "decem familiæ" at Streoneshalch were a part of Oswy's original grant for monastery-building purposes.

The character, the dimensions, and the precise site of the early church thus presupposed, and of its connected buildings, are all concealed in utter obscurity. Probably it was originally a rude, rather than merely a plain, structure; very likely, in the first instance, framed of split trunks of trees adjusted side by side so as to give a partially smooth surface within, with thatch of straw or rushes, and side-lights only partially secured by slight lattice-work of split wood. And, no doubt, the dwellings for the abbess, her nuns, and the servants of the house, would be in accordance with the early rudeness of the church itself, not better but rather worse, or more rude and inartistic.

Still it must be borne in mind that the place was neither unknown nor unnamed. Although discarding, as utterly without support, Young's ideas that "there cannot be a doubt Whitby was a place of some importance under the Roman Government" (conceding, however, that "their coasting vessels may have frequented the harbour"), and that Dunsley Bay is the Dunum Sinus of Ptolemy<sup>1</sup>—for the scarcity of Roman relics at Whitby, in common with the rest of Cleveland, is so marked as to call for special regard,—I hold it to be a reasonable supposition that the seafaring folk who occupied the district subsequently to the departure of the Romans from Britain (even if not for some considerable time before) would not be slow to note, and to improve, the natural advantages presented by the harbour as well as the soil. In other words, I cannot but think that Streoneshalch, when Hilda availed herself of Oswiu's pious donation, was already a place not only of some importance, but one in which what in these modern days is implied by the word "progress" was certainly by no means unknown. And from other considerations I think it was, as elsewhere remarked, already a place of some celebrity. For, although after the disastrous battle of Hæthfelt, in which King Ædwin lost his life, the head of the slain monarch was taken to York, and eventually deposited in the Church of St. Peter, which he had himself begun, yet his body was in the sequel buried at Streoneshalch. The year of his death was 633; that of the foundation of the monastery 656 or 657. The inevitable conclusion therefore is, that the burial took place many years before the foundation of the religious house, and consequently that the place itself, and the Church (of St. Peter) in which he was buried, were both already places of mark. Certainly Bede states that Ædwin, as well as Ealfleda, with her father and mother, Oswiu and Eanfled, and many other noble persons, were buried "in St. Peter's Church in the monastery;" but while it was natural enough that Oswiu, who died about thirteen years after the foundation, and his queen, and not a few among the principal nobles as well, should be buried in the monastery, still as no hint is given that Ædwin's body had been removed from a former resting-place in order to its deposit in the newly-built monastery, the strong presumption is that he had been buried at Streoneshalch immediately after his death, and consequently that Streoneshalch was already a place of note.

At all events, no long time elapsed before the place became both famous and important. According to the statement of William of Malmesbury, it was "the largest of the monasteries founded by Oswy's bounty," and, as Dr. Young well remarks, its "increase might naturally be expected both from the rank and character of the Abbess and the dignity of her youthful charge. Every one who adopted the monastic life would be eager to enter an abbey where a lady so illustrious presided, and where a young princess was a disciple. Oswy and his queen would be the first to patronise an establishment which contained an object so dear to them. The fame of the lady Hilda was spread abroad; she was visited by persons of the most exalted station, and her monastery became the scene of important transactions."<sup>1</sup>

The "important transaction" specially in the mind of the Whitby historian as he penned those words would naturally be the famous Synod of Streoneshalch in 663 or 664, summoned for the purpose of settling the disputes which agitated the early Northern Church touching the precise time for keeping Easter, the priestly tonsure, and one or two minor matters. King

Oswiu himself presided at this council, and besides him were present his son Alchfrid, who was also a reigning prince; Bishops Colman and Agilberct, each with a train of clergy; Romanus, the Queen's chaplain; the venerable James, long associated with Paulinus; and of course the lady Hilda herself. There is no need here to dwell on the issue of the Synod. It is the fact of the Synod itself which arrests the attention and fixes our thoughts for a moment as we proceed, helping us to realise one little scene in the veritable life and action of those days, and to localise it as having been enacted on a stage, the scenery of which our own eyes may be familiar with as belonging to one of the pleasant places of modern seaside resort.

Nor was it only thus that Streoneshalch was a place of importance and distinction. The institution from among whose foster-children a poet like Cædmon (setting altogether on one side the old-world fable of his miraculous inspiration), and bishops like Bosa and John (both of York), could have been furnished forth, must have been one in which there was real life and activity in intellectual as well as in spiritual and religious matters. That Hilda herself was an extraordinary woman, and would have made her mark in any age, is a matter which scarcely admits of two varying views. And the presence of such a woman, in such times and under such fostering circumstances, might alone have been taken as a guarantee that much and wisely-organised labour and effort would be steadily brought to bear on the great objects of early religious life. We may doubtless, without much compunction, discard the tales of Cædmon's strangely-timed "inspiration," and John's miraculous performances, as simply due to the legend-loving temper and quality of the times wherein the record was compiled; but there will still remain more than enough to show that good men and true were working with brain and pen and hand and life, and that their spirit, and will, and energy of working were fostered and guided, as well as inspired from the fountain-head of Hilda's monastery at Streoneshalch.

Hilda appears to have died in the year 680, and she was succeeded by her royal pupil Ælfleda, who, for several years after she became Abbess, had not only the benefit of her mother's presence and support in the discharge of her onerous duties, but also the counsel and aid of the wise and pious Bishop Trumwine, who took refuge at Streoneshalch when driven from his own district by the inroads of the Picts, and other Northern enemies. Her death took place in the fifty-ninth year of her age, and consequently in the year 713.

After the death of Ælfleda a blank in the history of Streoneshalch occurs, so complete, that during a period of a century and a half no record at all of its work or progress—or, it might well be eventually, according to an apparent law in such matters, of its falling off and declension—is known to have existed. It seems strange that such should be the state of the case, for we have the amplest assurance from the bare outline of facts already stated, that a period of extraordinary diligence and activity in the special work of a Seminary of Ecclesiastical learning and discipline had, as of necessity, witnessed the rearing of a succession of devoted and able men, rising one after another to posts of the highest dignity and importance. Independently of the accessions to the number and influence of the inmates of the Monastery which would be made in such cases as that of Bishop Trumwine and his attendants—quite possibly a by no means singular case in those days—there must have been a large body of duly taught and trained men there, long after Ælfleda's decease; and it seems hard to believe that no one among them all should have been found willing and able, and even zealous, to chronicle the annals of his House. But so it seems to be. If any record was kept, the writings were lost or destroyed, and we hear no more of Streoneshalch until we hear of it in its ruin under the incursion of the Danes. The accounts given of the destruction of the Monastery, and the attendant ravages in the adjacent district, by the different annalists who record the circumstances, are not altogether consistent; and they consequently need close sifting and comparison if we seek to elicit the truth. For this there is no space here, and we must be contented with the bare statement, that from about 867-870 the place was laid waste, and the desolation of the once "Holy House" was a lasting one. "Streoneshalh," says Young, "lay desolate for 207 years."

But I think we must be careful to limit the force of this expression as in our last sentence. The Streoneshalh which "lay desolate" was merely the once "Holy House," or Monastery, and moreover, the desolation was merely that of the "Holy House" and its adjuncts. In point of fact, the "Memorial of Benefactions," already once referred to, defines the consequences of the ravages of the Danish host with very sufficing precision, namely, thus:—"Thenceforward, for two hundred years and more, the holy service of the monks and pious nuns was in that place discontinued."<sup>1</sup>

I am quite aware that such views on this subject are likely to be regarded as quite heretical. Dr. Young, in so many words, states not only that "when the Abbey was ruined by the Danes, the town of Streoneshalh shared the same fate," which is, I suppose, fairly certain; but also, that "when, after the lapse of two hundred years, the monastery was restored, the town revived also." And a more recent writer takes precisely the same view, inasmuch as in his little book about Whitby and its Vicinity, we find him distinctly stating that while "the town of Streoneshalh and its monastery were destroyed by the Danes in 867, both lay desolate for two hundred years;" and again, and repeatedly, that when the town did revive, it "arose, like its predecessor, Streoneshalh, as a dependency on the Abbey."

It is difficult to understand how such views as these, inconsistent alike with common sense, reason and experience, and contradictory to historical facts and inferences patent to the most superficial student, could ever have obtained credit or currency, or indeed have found admission into an "historian's" mind.

For we find ourselves, the moment our attention is turned to the matter, face to face with a numerous, and, we cannot doubt, important colony of Danes and Northmen. For, passing by, for the present, the Domesday entry touching Whitby and its dependencies, the following is the corresponding list of place-names afforded by the "Memorial of Benefactions,"—"Witebi, Overbi et Nethrebi, Thingwala, Leirpel, Helredale, Gnip, Normanebi, Fielinga et alia Fielinga, Bertwait, Setwait, Snetune, Hugelbardebi, Sourebi, Risewarp, Neuham, Stachesbi, Baldebi, Breccha, Flore, Dunesleia,"—every one of them, twenty-one in number, save only Neuham and Dunesleia, demonstrably of Danish origin and imposition. "In other words, Streoneshalh and its envioning district had, long before the Norman Conquest, become the seat of a number of separate and independent Danish settlements—a fact which, while it testifies, on the one hand, to the eligibility and material wealthiness of the district surrounding and including the monastery itself, tells us also, on the other, that the same active, enterprising, energetic spirit which wrung far more than a mere scanty subsistence from the difficult soil and inhospitable climate of Iceland, was little likely to let the fair and fertile slopes of Fieling, Gnipe, Normanby, Prestebi, Netherbi, Overbi,<sup>1</sup> Dunsleia, Newham, Sneton, and the rest, be uncompelled by the labours of the agriculturist, or the harbour and mart of Whitby remain unfrequented by the keel of the merchantman, the boats of the hardy fishers, and the thick-coming visits of chapmen from more distant havens as well as the nearer.”

In this connection I wish to draw especial attention to the great fact involved in the name which stands fourth in the list of Whitby place-names given a few lines above—I mean Thingwala.

It seems to have been reserved for me even to notice, and much more to direct attention to, this very noteworthy and significant name.<sup>2</sup> For there can be no more question of what it was, and meant, than in the case of the Cheshire Thingwall, the Shetland Tingwall or Dingwall, or even the Icelandic Thingvalla itself. As Worsaae says of the former, our Whitby Thingwala “affords a very remarkable memorial of the Court—or Thing—which the Northmen settlers were accustomed to hold in close connection with their sacred offerings to their gods.” Its site, however, is now uncertain. All we know is that it existed, and that down to the beginning of the thirteenth century certainly, and probably very much later, it was identifiable.

But to us the significance of the name and of the fact is not the least lessened by the difficulty, or worse, of identifying the site. The Old English “marks,” “tythings,” “hundreds,” “frithborhs,” had all been swept away—save only the name of a great conical hill in Cleveland,<sup>1</sup> near Moorsom, which remains to tell where the mearc-mót of its district used to be held—and the “Wapentake” and “Thing-stead” remain to tell us of the pervading change which had come over the institutions of the fair country which had been re-named Clifflönd by its new lords; and, in telling us of this, the Whitby Thingwala tells us, incidentally it is true, but also most emphatically, that Whitby, under the occupation and rule of the Danes, was, out of all Cleveland, by far the most important and the most frequented town, as being the seat of all their principal civil and religious procedures and observances.

But this fact, as it seems to me, is not very consistent, any more than that of the tolerably well-established character of the hardy Northmen as vigorous farmers, persevering traders, adventurous navigators, with the notion that the town of Whitby, as well as its monastery, lay desolate and in ruins until the restoration of the Abbey in Norman times.

But the matter is placed quite beyond dispute—and my marvel is that such a painstaking and careful man as Young undoubtedly was should have overlooked the testimony I am about to quote—by the direct evidence of the Domesday returns, which I will give as briefly as I can. The geldable value of the manor of Whitby then, with the Berewic of Sneton, containing fifteen carucates, but having soke also in Fyling, Gnipe, Prestebi, Ugleberdesbi, Sourebi, Brecca, Florum, Stachesbi, and Newham, to the extent of  $28\frac{3}{4}$  carucates more, was, in the time of King Edward, £112. On looking over corresponding entries, connected with the more important Cleveland localities, we find the following:—in the manor of Lothusum (now Lofthouse), with 4 carucates, and soke in various other townships and parishes, amounting in all to nearly 47 carucates besides, the geldable value was £48. At Stocheslaye (Stokesley), with a manor of 6 carucates, and soke of  $34\frac{1}{2}$  carucates more in seven other places, the value is set at £24. At Hoton (Hutton Rudby), with 6 carucates, and soke of 20 carucates more in other places, the sum set down is £24. On comparison then, Whitby, with a total of  $43\frac{3}{4}$  carucates, is rated at £112; Lofthouse, with nearly 51 carucates, at £48;

Whitby, then—and if we remember that the value of money then was at least twenty times, probably very considerably more than twenty times, its present value, we shall perhaps be better able to realise the absolute condition of prosperity and wealth enjoyed by the district specified—Whitby, with sensibly less acreage (or carucatage, if such a word be admissible), was considerably more than twice as valuable, as regards taxation to Danegeld, as Lofthouse; with a little more extent than Stokesley was nearly five times as productive; and with nearly twice as much acreage as Hutton Rudby, was again nearly five times as productive. Or, putting it another way: Whitby was geldable to the amount of upwards of £2, 10s. for each carucate in the estimate; Lofthouse at not quite 18s. 10d.; Stokesley at 11s. 10d.; and Hutton Rudby at not quite 18s. 6d.

Of course, in the face of such statistics as these, it is simply absurd—not to say somewhat discreditable to the historian who had these historical facts under his eye, and failed to notice them—to speak of Whitby, both town and monastery, as “lying desolate for nearly two hundred years,” and only “reviving” after the refounding of the Abbey by the Norman in 1075, or later. For, really, after making all possible allowance for the probably greater value of land, in those days also, when near a place like Whitby, in contradistinction to mere inland and country places like Lofthouse, Stokesley and Hutton, still we are obliged to leave a large margin for value of another kind—such, namely, as would depend on civil and mercantile considerations. Or, to put it in other words, Whitby must have been, at the time of the valuation taken in King Edward the Confessor’s reign, an important, prosperous, and wealthy town and harbour. Less than this surely cannot be said of a place which was entered as geldable at, at least, £2000 to £2250 (and, most likely, a much larger sum) of our present money.

But in order to confirm this conclusion with even more convincing force, we will enter upon one other calculation, both brief and a little rough perhaps, but in the main neither inaccurate nor misleading. Assuming Freeman's statement as to the amount of the last assessment of Danegeld during the Conqueror's reign<sup>1</sup>—namely, 6s. per hide—to be valid, and that for such practical purposes as the present calculation the carucate contained about three hides, and that, in Freeman's words, "along with the Danegeld, a tax which was strictly a tax upon the land, came the aids of the towns, an impost which has been held to be in effect the Danegeld levied on those parts of the kingdom to which the reckoning by hides could not apply;" then we have this remarkable result:—Lofthouse, with its 51 carucates containing about 153 hides, each rated at 6s., was geldable at £45, 18s. the balance making up the £48 named in Domesday, being, it is presumed, due on the town. Stokesley, with 40½ carucates, or about 121 hides, at 6s. a hide, ought to have been rateable at £36, 6s., but was actually geldable at only £24 (however that fact is to be accounted for): Hutton Rudby, with its 26 carucates, or 78 hides, was rateable at £21, 18s., leaving a balance of £2, 2s. to make up the Domesday value of £24; while Whitby, with 43¼ carucates, equivalent to about 130 hides, at 6s. a hide, would return £39, leaving a balance of some £73 to be made good by the aid from the town and port; a conclusion which sorely militates against the idea that the town, as well as the monastery, lay in ruin and desolation all through the two hundred years alleged.

Before finally leaving the question thus discussed, there is one other remark I would fain make, somewhat retrospective in its nature, and founded on a statement which is met with in the "Memorial of Benefactions," touching the last condition of ruin which had undoubtedly befallen the monastery. Speaking of the grant of the "hallowed place" to Reinfrid, the first Prior, by William de Perci, the writer mentions a fact which is not without significance as to what the foundation had become before that great ruin had fallen upon it. "There were at that time," he says, "in the said vill, as ancient countrymen have delivered to us, about forty cells or oratories, only the walls of which, however, together with the disused and shelterless altars, remained." Now, from this we may gather something as to what the early monastery had come to be, before destruction came upon it, both in magnitude and extent; and also as to the massive nature of the buildings which had, sooner or later, replaced the hasty and rude structures glanced at some pages above as more than possible during the earlier part of the existence of the "Holy House." Walls and altars, which still retained their form and consistency after two centuries of exposure and neglect, over and above the violence of the original havoc, must have been strong and well-built as well as massive.

It would be but to little purpose to speculate on the religious and ecclesiastical condition of Whitby and its district during the period of Danish occupancy. Dr. Young remarks, that "all we know with certainty on the subject is that there were sixteen churches in our district when Domesday was compiled. Several of them were without pastors. . . . It is observable too, that most of them were near the extreme limits of the district; that there was no church at Streoneshall, nor in the vale of Esk: the nearest churches were those of Seaton and Easington on the one hand, and those of Hackness on the other." But it may be remarked that such conclusions as these are open to grave doubt. The fatal word "waste" is not applied in the Domesday entry touching "Hagenesse et Sudfelt et Evrelai," as it is in the case of Whitby; and it is almost impossible to suppose that, for two hundred years, such a district as Whitby clearly was, lay churchless, and therefore practically, in those days, religionless. Nay, if one ventured to speculate at all, it would be in the direction that not only did a church, or churches, rise in Whitby itself, but that more than one or two among the "oratories" on Prestebi heights found holy occupants, and, most likely, continuously. If the name Prestebi had a meaning at all, if it was not simply a case of lucus a non lucendo, the fact it reveals is that one priest or more settled on or near the site of the ruined monastery subsequently to the Danish occupation; and, certainly, there can be no doubt that the country had become Christianised long before the date of the Norman Conquest.

But whatever the ecclesiastical condition of Whitby and its dependencies during the Danish supremacy, a time soon came under the Norman occupation for the restoration of the one-time famous Religious House of Eastern Cleveland. Reinfrid is named as the first restorer, and then as the first Prior of the restored House. He is described in the Memorial as having been an active soldier in the Conqueror's service—"miles strenuissimus in obsequio domini sui Willelmi Nothi, Regis Anglorum"—and as having turned aside from the direct line of a journey, or march, through Northumbria in order to visit Whitby, where he was struck with compunction at the sight of the desolation caused by the ravages of "the merciless pirates, Ingwar and Ubba, leaders of the Danes." There is a species of suppression here which is rather amusing. Domesday also speaks of the desolation caused in and near Whitby, under the ravages of a leader of the Normans, and it says of 28 carucates, averaging probably 100 acres each, "pene omnia wasta"—the only exceptions being the Church-lands held by the Abbot of York in Prestebi and Sourebi. It may have been a tacit consciousness on the part of the memorialist which held his pen, making him feel that it might be quite as well to leave the immediate authors of the nearer, or more recent, wasting unnamed. Nay, it may very well be, even, that Reinfrid himself—"strenuissimus miles in obsequio domini sui"—knew only too much about the ravages of the Conqueror, and might have good personal reason for compunction. Any way, he became a monk at Evesham, and there was well trained in monastic practice and discipline. After a space he returned into Northumbria with the clearly conceived design of reviving monastic religion there, and, coming eventually to William de Perci, was well received by him, and put into a favourable position for carrying out his plans by a grant at that baron's hands of "the ancient monastery of S. Peter the Apostle, together with two carucates of land in Prestebi, as a perpetual alms." In no long time several others, like-minded with himself, were collected together, and the new Abbey, in some sense or other, became a fact. The precise date of the commenced restoration is not known; but, according to Dr. Young, it could not be later than 1078; for "in that year Reinfrid was joined by one Stephen, who afterwards became Abbot of York, and is usually called Stephen of Whitby, because Whitby was the place at which he began the monastic life."

But, speaking plainly, the history of matters connected with the restoration of Whitby at this time is a muddle. The account given in the Memorial is inconsistent with, and in parts contradictory of, that left by Stephen of Whitby; while the Domesday statement that the two carucates in Prestebi and Sourebi were held by the Abbot of York of William de Perci (the latter holding all Whitby of Hugh Earl of Chester) is hard to accommodate with either account. What can be attempted towards a possible reconciliation has been attempted in the second of these Introductory Chapters, to which therefore the reader must from this point be referred.

This, however, may be said: that it seems very doubtful whether, at the date alleged—nearly coincident with that of the Domesday returns—there was much living or actual monastic work going on at Whitby at all. The residence of the monastic party would seem to have fluctuated between Whitby and Hackness, to say nothing of Stephen's mention of Lastingham as at one time a resting-place or refuge; and it was not until some time after Serlo de Perci, brother of William de Perci "hote Lesgernuns," had become Prior, that Whitby became in reality the monastic head-quarters. From this time forth the growth of the Abbey in material means, and it is to be presumed also in the accretion of the necessary buildings, became steady, and eventually rapid and very considerable. Passing by the obscure transaction of the alleged original grant at Prestebi and Sourebi, the more certain grant of the Church of St. Peter at Whitby, with all its appurtenances, by Hugh Earl of Chester, and (by the same charter) the grant of the Church of Middlesburg with its tithes French and English—passing all this by, we find the grant by William de Perci to his brother Serlo of the vills of Whitby and Stainseker, of Newham and Stakesby, of Hakaness and the Port of Whitby, and of the Churches of St. Mary and St. Hilda at Hackness, together with Northfield, Suffield, Everley, Brochesay, and Thornley, with the tithes also of Uplethum, Wilton, Chevermund, Ludeford, Covenham, Immingeham, Sumerledeby, Semar, with half the fishery of Ergum, and all forests, woods, waters, etc., belonging to the said Church of Whitby; and, thereafter, gift and confirmation from Alan de Perci, son of William aforesaid ; from William de Perci, and from divers others, members of the family of Perci, or connections of it by marriage, or subfeudatories ; and no less from a host of others in no way related or connected with the family of the founder and patron, who follow one another in rapid succession until at last, in Abbot Roger's time (1222-44), the summit of wealth and prosperity seems to have been reached.

A moment's pause here to note the fact that the port was given by William de Perci, the founder, to the Abbey in Prior Serlo's time, and to remark—and I think there is ground for calling attention to the fact after what we have above had occasion to notice in connection with the money, and therefore with the mercantile, importance of the port—that this was, there can be no doubt at all, as weighty a part as any of the whole grant, at least potentially and in the future, if not actually and at the time then present. It should be noted too, that, what with Earl Hugh's grant and William de Perci's, no small part of what was afterwards known as “Whitby Strand,” and accurately defined by well-known meres and boundaries, had already, before the year 1100, become the property of the Abbey. There would be no deficiency then, even at this early period, of means for carrying on whatever works might be considered desirable.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps more distinct reference should be made to the fact, adverted to in note 6, p. 93, to No. 108, that as early as Prior Serlo's times there was at Whitby an official whose style and title was “Magister Operis ejusdem loci,” and to the inevitable inference derivable from such a fact. Constructive work of a systematic character was of necessity being pushed forward, and under the guidance and direction of a competent or scientific designer and surveyor. This may also be the place for calling attention to one noteworthy fact connected with the existing remains of the Abbey Church. That buildings of early Norman date once existed, there can be no question ; but the questions what were they, where were they, what became of them, are questions which may be asked—perhaps must be asked—but cannot be answered. Indeed, no attempt at answering them can now be made. What may be regarded as a mere legend tells of a chapter-house as existing in early Norman times, but there is no tangible trace either of it or any other structure of the same style. The east end of the existing ruined church is the earliest part of what is left, and it cannot be assigned to an earlier date than the former half of Abbot Roger's incumbency, and it is to the point to observe that no examination, however close and curious, serves Serlo de Perci was succeeded in the rule of the new Abbey by his nephew, William de Perci, who became the first of a long series of abbots, and in whose time naturally many Perci gifts and grants would be bestowed. He must have become Abbot very early in the twelfth century, and, according to Young (whose conclusions here I do not greatly question, though I have been obliged to do so in several of the matters touched upon in preceding remarks), "governed the Monastery for about twenty years or more." Abbot William was succeeded by Nicholas, and Nicholas by Benedict, who, in consequence of internal troubles, resigned his office, and was succeeded by Richard, till then Prior of Peterborough, about the year 1148 or 1149. It was during Abbot Richard's time that a plundering visit by sea was paid by the King of Norway, who laid hands on all that was portable and wasted the rest, "so that they who, by the management of their Abbot, had grown very rich, now became very poor; the rapacious Norwegians having left them nothing."

Richard of Peterborough died in 1175, and was succeeded by Richard de Waterville, then Prior of Monk's Kirby. At the date just given there were, it appears from a curious and interesting document in the Chartulary, which records the circumstances of Benedict's resignation, of Richard's own election and appointment, his wise and prosperous rule, his death, and the appointment of his successor, thirty-eight monks, whose names to detect anywhere about it a single fragment of stone on which are impressed the features of an earlier architectural style. In the scanty remnant of the once magnificent conventual church of Gyseburn such stones abound, and alike in the rubble of the walls still standing, the foundations where they have been laid bare, and the plentiful débris arising from the ruin and demolition of the rest of the building. But at Whitby there is nothing of the kind to be met with—not even in the extensive walls which on all sides of the Abbey have been built out of its old materials. The fact is a very singular one, but it is unquestionably a fact, however it may be accounted for. If the precincts were to be dealt with in the same carefully inquiring and conservative spirit as has been manifested at Fountains, no doubt many and interesting discoveries would be made, and some solution of some part at least of the uncertainty indicated in the former part of this note might be satisfactorily arrived at. Hopes of the institution of some such work have once or twice of late years been shyly expressed. Perhaps there may be a good day coming even yet.

are all given. This number, which includes the Prior, and with the Abbot makes up thirty-nine, was no doubt the full complement.

To Richard de Waterville, Peter, John de Evesham, and Roger de Scardeburg succeeded, each in his turn. The last is said to have spent some of his younger years in the cell at Middlesburg. In his time, as already noted, the Abbey received a great accession of territory and wealth, and reached the zenith of its prosperity. And in his time, too, so far as the style of the existing remains of the Abbey can testify, it seems probable that the conventual church was put through a course of entire reconstruction. The commencement of his rule may have well seen the commencement of the eastern portion of the present ruins, and the close of his reign—he died in 1244—cannot have been very distant in point of time from the completion of the third bay west of the central tower. But this is a subject too wide to enter upon at the close of such a chapter in such a volume as this.

CHAPTER II.

THE history of the earlier steps taken in the refounding of the Monastery of Whitby is involved in very great obscurity and beset with much perplexity, not because there are no ancient records treating of the subject, but because these ancient records are so hopelessly inconsistent and irreconcilable with each other, that even a probable approximation to the truth becomes extraordinarily difficult. We have—

I. The narrative (No. 1) printed in the text, usually described as the “Memorial of Benefactions,” clearly the most ancient writing in the chartulary preserved at Whitby and locally called the “Abbot’s Book.”<sup>1</sup> This memorial is certainly of earlier date than 1180, and may moreover claim to be considerably earlier than either of the other records in question except that of

II. Symeon of Durham, a copy of which is appended here:—

His temporibus quidam in provincia Merciorum Presbyter, ac Prior in Monasterio, quod in Wincelcumbe situm est, habitu et actione monachus, vocabulo Aldwinus, habitabat, qui voluntariam paupertatem et mundi contemptum cunctis sæculi honoribus ac divitiis prætulera. Didicerat ex historia Anglorum quod provincia Northanhymbrorum crebris quondam choris monachorum, ac multis constipata fuerit agminibus sanctorum, qui in carne non secundum carnem viventes, cœlestem in terris conversationem ducere gaudebant. Quorum loca, videl. monasteria, licet jam in solitudinem sciret redacta, desideravit invisere, ibique ad imitationem illorum pauperem vitam ducere. Pervenienti ergo ad Eoveshamense Monasterium, desiderium suum quibusdam ex fratribus patefecit, e quibus duos mox in sui propositi societatem sibi adjunxit; quorum alter Diaconus, postea Presbyter, Elfwius, alter ignarus litterarum vocabatur Reinfridus: quibus Abbas ipsorum non aliter abeundi licentiam dare voluit, nisi prius Aldwinum eis præponeret, et curam animarum illorum ipsi commendaret. Perrexerunt itaque simul pedibus incedentes tres monachi, unum tantummodo secum ducentes asellum, quo libri necessarii et vestimenta sacerdotalia ad divinum celebrandum mysterium ferebantur. Et primo quidem super ripam Tini fluminis ad plagam septentrionalem, in loco qui dicitur Munecaceastre, quod monachorum civitas appellatur, habitare cœperunt; qui locus licet ad episcopatum Dunhelmensem pertineat, juris tamen Northanhymbrorum Comitatus habetur. Quapropter venerandus Pontifex Walcherus ad illos mittens rogavit ut ad se venirent, et sub jure potius ecclesiæ quam sub potestate sæcularium manendi locum acciperent. Quos advenientes multo cum honore et gaudio suscepit, magnasque Deo gratiarum actiones retulit, quod in hac provincia monachicæ professionis viros ad habitandum suscipere, et sub suo regimine meruisset habere. Dedit ergo eis Monasterium beati Pauli Apostoli, a Benedicto quondam Abbate constructum in Gyruum, quod stantibus adhuc solis sine culmine parietibus vix aliquod antiquæ nobilitatis servaverat signum; quibus culmen de lignis informibus et fœno superponentes, divinæ servitutis officia ibidem celebrare cœperunt; factaque sub ipsis parietibus casula, ubi dormirent et manducarent, religiosorum elemosinis pauperem vitam sustentarunt. Ibi pariter in frigore ac fame, et rerum omnium penuria pro Christo residentes debebant; . . .

Cum autem famulus Christi Aldwinus ibidem, sicut jam dictum est, aliquatenus fructicasset, ad alia quoque loca cogitavit transire, et simile opus Domino adjuvante perficere. Igitur constituto fratribus quem communiter ipsi elegerant Priore, proficiscens inde reliquit ibidem socium suæ peregrinationis, de quo supradictum est, Elfwium, virum simplicitatis et innocentiae merito prædicandum, orationibus et lacrimis jugiter intentum. Tertius vero illorum socius, videl. Reinfridus, ad Streoneshalch quod Hwhitebi appellatur, secessit, ubi advenientes suscipiens, monachorum habitationem instituere cœpit, qui post ejus obitum migrantes Eboracum, Monasterium in honorem Sanctæ Mariæ semper Virginis, quod nunc Abbas Stephanus strenue regit, construxerunt.—(Sym. Dunelm. pp. 198-201, 203, 204.)

III. Then we have the story given in the narrative alleged to be by Stephen of Whitby of the foundation of St. Mary's Abbey at York, a copy of which follows: <sup>1</sup>—

Quamvis sancta una et universalis Mater Ecclesia per universum <sup>2</sup> orbem longe lateque diffusa, a filiis suis quos sibi virgo mater per aquam baptismatis generat, honoretur et prædicatur, multæ tamen ecclesiæ in unitate fidei catholicæ ex eo tempore quo ex latere Jesu Christi in cruce dormientis fabricata est, secundum devotionem fidelium ædificantur, atque a fundamentis jaciuntur, ut quos unius ecclesiæ sinus propter ampla spatia terræ et maris nequit comprehendere, in multis ecclesiis fidem rectam tenentes operari studeant, quæ post hanc vitam venientes cum exaltatione a Domino centuplicata recipiant.

Unde ego frater Stephanus, hujus Sanctæ Matris Ecclesiæ filius, nullis meis præcedentibus meritis, sed sola Dei gratia fratrumque meorum unanimi mihi faventium electione abbas constitutus, qualiter ad hunc gradum pervenerim, vel qualiter Ecclesia Sanctæ Mariæ Eboraci cui, Deo auctore, primus Abbas datus sum, fundata sit, ad posterorum memoriam literis mandare curavi, ut sciant præsentis et futuri posteris nostri, qui vel quales hujus nostræ Ecclesiæ fundatores, de quantis invidorum turbini-

Is quippe apud locum qui Gerva dicitur, in Northanhymbrorum partibus, prius aliquanto tempore commoratus, ibique divinæ contemplationi vacans solitarius extitit, necnon postea multis sibi sociatis fratribus, qui ejus desiderio ad eum confluxerant, Deo nostro sub districtione regulæ viriliter aliquandiu deservivit. Locus autem ille, quamvis ad ejus introitum fuisset ferarum et avium habitatio, olim tamen in eo extitit servorum Dei inibi degentium fertilis constipatio, inter quos etiam venerabilis presbiter Beda floruit, qui multa scripturarum sacramenta per Spiritum Sanctum disserens ad ædificationem fidelium imperpetuum dereliquit.

Prædictus ergo Renfridus, desiderii sui non immemor, cum fratres qui cum eo morabantur in disciplinis regularibus instructos vidisset religionis monasticæ præceptis inhærere, deputans labores vitæ præsentis parvissimos ad comparisonem æternæ retributionis, ipsis mærentibus valedicens, solitariam vitam ducendi gratia Wyttebeiam<sup>4</sup> venit, sed ibi quoque audita ejus fama, plures ei sociati sunt, cum eo perpetualiter manere cupientes, quibus ego quoque conjunctus habitum sanctæ religionis, soli Deo vacare cupiens, sub ejus magisterio et prioratu in eodem loco suscepi. Evolutis autem paucis diebus, totius Monasterii procurationem, Renfridus pariter omnisque congregatio ipsius annuens consilio et imperio, mihi imposuerunt, ac demum, nescio quo Dei judicio, me invitum diuque repugnantem, tam Regis præcepto quam Archiepiscoporum venerabilium, Lanfranci videlicet Cantuariensis, Thomæ quoque Eboracensis, obedientia Abbatem sibi elegerunt.

Electus igitur ego Abbas, cum vellem locum illum noviter inceptum nullisque rerum mundanarum redditibus refertum, auxiliante Domino, in pristinum honorem renovare, cœperunt multa adversa hujus mundi contra me exolescere, et desiderium meum a cœpto opere retardare. Nam quidam ex baronibus regiis, nomine Willelmus de Percey,<sup>1</sup> qui locum ipsum nobis donaverat, videns locum nostrum nuper desertum in multis meliorari, multa adversa, tam per se quam per suos, nobis ingerebat, ac boni pœnitens si quo modo nos ab eo effugare possit arte qua poterat laborabat. Ex altera vero parte, piratæ maris, ac latrones regionis, quorum multo tunc habebatur copia, longe lateque discurrentes, nobis vim inferebant, quæ habere poteramus rapiebant, atque ad ultimum una nocte conglobati, facto impetu, omnes nos in fugam convertentes, omnia nostra diripuerunt, ac sublatis omnibus, quosdam ex nobis captos ad ignotas terras perduxerunt. Ob quam rem usque ad mortem contristati, imminens periculum aliquo modo vitare cupientes, quæcumque nobis molesta erant Regi intimare decrevimus, qui benigno satis ut erat miserationis affectu, necessitatibus nostris propter Deum compatiens, promptum se ac voluntarium nobis ad subveniendum exhibuit.

Cumque post hæc op[p]ortunitatis tempus adesset, quo manus pontificalis impositionem et Abbatis benedictionem suscipere deberem, subiit animo ut ad Lestingham irem, quia sub sola Regis potestate erat monachus professus, ejusdem quoque loci Abbas consecraret. Quæ res pariter etiam congregationi nostræ et ipsi Regi, dominoque Thomæ Archiepiscopo nostro, necnon et omnibus quorum inde consilium quærebam, bona et utilis visa est, ac tandem, auctore Deo, illisque volentibus, usque ad actum perducta. At vero sæpedictus Willelmus, sicut antea consueverat, et postea quoque molestior nobis et adversus vehementer existebat, atque ut dictum est, de prædio suo in quo adhuc conventiculum nostrum degebat, modis omnibus expellere laborabat. Unde ego, nimio dolore perculsus, justiciarios regni hujus frequenter adire, miseriam nostram et oppressionem multorum auribus insinuare, et auxilium versus opprimentes nos flagitare compulsus sum ; sed neque ita quicquam proficiens, tandem usque in Normanniam, in qua Rex simul et Willelmus de Percey tunc forte morabantur, transfretare, et qualiter nostra in pace alterius haberemus, precibus apud Regem, et modis quibus poteram, satagere curavi, et ita demum, accepto pacis chirographo, ad propria reversus, non longo tempore cum nostris et de nostris pacem optinui. Exarsit quippe ex eo tempore multo vehementius adversum nos animus et ira Willelmi, et quoad usque penitus nos de Wittebeya effugasset, pacem diuturnam vel quietem habere non permisit. Quid multa ? Hiis namque exigentibus causis, postremo tam ingruentium pressurarum longa molestia attriti, quam inevitabili totiens memorati Willelmi violentia coacti, jam publice et injuste ablata nobis Wittebeya, ad prædictum locum qui dicitur Lestingham, ibi saltem manere cupientes, per jussionem Regis transmigravimus. Sed quia non est via hominis in manu ejus, aliter de nobis omnipotens Deus disponebat, et quæ corporibus animabusque nostris profutura in perpetuum erant salubriter præparabat. Nam ibi quoque, nescio quo Dei judicio, latrones circumquaque debac[c]hantes nos persecuti sunt, et res nostras sæpe rapientes, mœrore inedicibili corda nostra perfuderunt.

IV. There is next the relation of the troubles which befell the rising community in the time of William Rufus, printed by Dugdale, and derived from Dodsworth's MSS., vol. 159, p. 115<sup>b</sup>,<sup>1</sup> copy of which I give next.

Tempore Will'mi Regis Anglorum Secundi, filii Willihelmi Nothi, Regis Anglorum, exorta est Monasterio de Whitby et Serloni Priori et fratribus ejusdem loci magna tribulatio et angustia et persecutio, quales habuerunt annis transactis in diebus Ranfridi Prioris nostri de Whitby. Veniebant namque latrones et raptores die nocteque de nemoribus et de latibulis in quibus latitabant, et deripiebant omnem substantiam eorum et depopulabant eum sacrum locum. Ita similiter et piratæ veniebant et devastabant illum locum, ita ut nullius miserabantur. Qua de causa Serlo Prior et monachi de Whitby ostenderunt Willihelmo de Percy calamitatem suam et miseriam, et petierunt eum ut daret eis locum manendi apud Hackenas. Dedit eis ecclesiam Sanctæ Mariæ de Hackenas, ut ibi construerent monasterium, quia in eadem villa Sancta Hilda Abbatissa monasterium construxerat. Concessit vero eis libenter petitionem eorum, ut pace facta, iterum ad Whitbeiam redirent ad prædictum monasterium. Cœperunt itaque monasterium construere ad prædictam Eccl. S. Mariæ, et ibi aliquandiu remanserunt, et religiosam valde vitam duxerunt. Deinde exorta discordia maxima inter prædictos duos fratres Willihelmum de Percy et Serlonem fratrem suum, Priorem de Whitby, quia Willihelmus de Percy dederat villas de Staxbi<sup>2</sup> et de

<sup>2</sup> The marginal note, p. 116, in Dodsworth's hand to these names is "Stachesbi juxta Whitby : Everley juxta Hacknes, vulgo Erley." In vol. 118, f. 87, however, Dodsworth gives the same narrative with the following preface :—"Out of sundry notes touching foundations of Abbeys in Yorkshire and other places in the province of Yorke, which I had of Mr. Starchy, a diligent Searcher of Antiquities, att his house in Bloomisbury in the upper end of Holborne 15 9bris 1621." "Touchinge the foundation of Whittby Abbey, Ebor. Tempore Will'mi Regis Anglorum," etc.

"The King is founder of Whittby, Ebor. Copied by y<sup>e</sup> Abbot Bensted out of the Register and orignal afore Thomas Lo. Darcy and many others," and in this copy the place-name is Scaxby and not Stachesby.

Everley Radulpho de Everley, armigero suo, qui ei annis multis serviebat. Voluit vero Will'mus de Percy aufer[r]e Serloni fratri suo omnes terras et villas quas dederat præfato monasterio de Whitby. Cum Serlo Prior hæc comperisset, festinanter venit ad Regem Will'mum Angliæ, quia familiaris ejus et socius amantissimus [fuisset] cum ipsi juvenes milites essent in domo et in Curia Will'mi Regis patris ejus, et hæc illi omnia demonstravit. The statement in the Memorial<sup>1</sup> is that Reinfrid, while he was yet a very energetic soldier ("miles strenuissimus")<sup>2</sup> in the service of the Conqueror, during a journey or march through Northumbria, turned aside to visit Streoneshaleh, and that he was pricked to the heart at the tokens of ruin and desolation which obtruded themselves on his notice there; that thereafter, having become a monk at Evesham, and having been well trained at that convent in monastic discipline, he finally returned under the Divine guidance into Northumbria, in company with Aldwine, Prior of Winchcombe, and the monk Elwine, and with the avowed intention of reviving the monkish profession in the aforesaid district.

I pause here to remark that all this is perfectly consistent with the narrative of Symeon of Durham, according to whom Aldwine, a Mercian presbyter, and prior of the monastery of Wincelcumbe, animated by a desire to visit a scene so famous as Northumbria had been for monastic piety, and to become himself an emulator of the ancient solitaries in the same district, repairs to Evesham monastery, and induces two members of the society there to join him in his plan and undertaking. One of these was the presbyter Elfwy, the other a man named Reinfrid, who is described as being "ignarus litterarum"—a character which precisely suits the man whose career had been such that he could be fittingly spoken of as "miles strenuissi-

<sup>1</sup> For myself, and for the reasons briefly stated here, but which will become more apparent as we proceed, I am disposed to attach almost complete credit to the statements in question. They are quite consistent with each other; they are consistent with, or corroborated by, those in other writings which are known to be worthy of credit; they are to a very great degree corroborated by the existing Charters and other like documents connected with the Abbey, and in no case discredited by them; and they are contradicted by, or inconsistent with, only the statements made in a writing which is of doubtful authority, if not uncertain origin, the said statements or assertions involving issues which are not consistent with each other, with known facts, or with common sense and reason.

<sup>2</sup> I do not dwell on the possible force of the word "miles," or intend to claim for it the meaning it would undoubtedly bear two or three generations later. But I would ask attention to the fact that the same term is applied, in the course of the self-same Memorial, to Alan de Munceus, who was certainly no mere parvenu, but a man of distinction.

mus in obsequio Domini sui.”<sup>1</sup> These three, with their scanty equipment borne on the back of a single ass, reach Monkchester, and eventually settle, for a time at least, at Jarrow. Having seen his efforts here crowned with a measure of success, Aldwine, contemplating a repetition of like efforts elsewhere, departs from Jarrow, leaving one of his two chosen associates in the holy work—namely, Elwy—there, and taking with him the other—that is, Reinfrid—who in the sequel separates from him, and betakes himself to Streoneshalch, “which is also named Hwiteby,” and there proceeds to organise a society of monks.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The following is the account given by Freeman (Norm. Conq. iv. 665) of the series of events which resulted in the restoration of Whitby:—“But it now came into the hearts of certain monks in a distant shire, who had read in Bæda how full Northumberland once was of holy places, to set forth on a missionary enterprise to the benighted land (of the North, namely). The leader of them was Ealdwine, who forsook a high position as Prior of the great house of Winchcombe to go forth and revive religion in the North. In the neighbouring house of Evesham he found two brethren likeminded with himself—Ælfwine, a deacon, and Regenfrith, seemingly a lay-brother. The three set forth on foot, with an ass to carry their books and vestments. In this guise they reached York, and prayed the Sheriff of the shire, Hugh the son of Baldric, to guide them to Monkchester, the future Newcastle. But as Monkchester in no way answered to its name, they were glad to accept the invitation of Bishop Walcher, who offered them the ruined monastery of Jarrow for their dwelling-place. There they patched up the dismantled church, and built a poor dwelling-place for themselves beneath its walls. The pious example spread; a few of the natives of Northumberland, and a larger number of proselytes from Southern England, joined the humble brotherhood. The Bishop, marking their zeal and energy, gave them the lordship of Jarrow and other possessions, the revenues of which enabled them to build the tower and monastic buildings which still remain. But the flame, when once kindled, spread far more widely. The restored house of Jarrow became the cradle and centre of a whole crowd of monastic foundations. Ælfwine remained in the dwelling-place of Bæda as Prior of the revived monastery. But Regenfrith, now, we may presume, no longer

It is important to notice the correspondence—coincidence almost—as to all material points between the two accounts so far collated. For they are both nearly, though not quite, equally ancient, and, as it would appear, independent. Of course it is possible that the Whitby scribe may have seen and perused Symeon's History, but it is by no means incumbent on us to assume it as probable. There is certainly nothing in the Memorial to suggest such a probability; and, moreover, assuming the earliest date alleged for the composition of the History, and the latest for the penning of the Memorial, still the interval is only short. Besides all which, the transactions recorded in the former had taken place not so long before that the recollection of them in their very birthplace and theatre was likely to have become dim, or the memory of their reciter to require refreshing from the stores of another man's knowledge, who, at the most, besides not being an eye-witness himself, could scarcely have been much more than a generation nearer the time of their happening.

To resume:—The Whitby Memorialist goes on to say that Reinfrid came to William de Perci, who gave him the old Monastery of St. Peter and two carucates of land in Prestebi, in perpetual alms, the former being in much the same state of ruin as that described by Symeon in the case of Jarrow—nothing left, that is, but roofless walls and unsheltered altars. Reinfrid, however, diligently and patiently availing himself of the means at his disposal, succeeded within a short time in gathering about him a band of pious and prudent men as ready as himself to adopt the monastic habit and submit to monastic discipline under his immediate rule as Prior; and after several ignorant of letters, went forth as the reviver of the monastery of Whitby, once, under the older name of Streoneshalh, the holy house of Hild, the daughter of the Bretwalda Oswiu. From Whitby sprang another famous house; under the care of Earl Alan, and under the government of its first Abbot Stephen, the church of Earl Siward at Galmanho grew into the great Abbey of Saint Mary without the walls of York." It will be observed that Mr. Freeman in every case adopts the true spelling of the personal names involved—Regenfrith, Ealdwine, Ælfwine, Oswiu, in place of Reinfrid or Renfrid, Aldwin, Elfwy, Oswy. In a book which is little more than a transcript of charters it may be better to adhere to the forms which alone are found in them, indicating from time to time, as occasion may arise, the true form from which the more uncommon names that occur have been changed.

years thus spent, he is further stated to have lost his life by an accident, while assisting some workmen in the construction of a bridge over the Derwent, at a place called Ormesbridge.

Symeon's narrative, however meagre in its details, up to the period of Reinfrid's death, is not inconsistent with all this. He simply says that Reinfrid received those who, after his arrival at Whitby, came to him with the object of embracing a monastic life; adding this however at that point, that after his death they removed to York, and founded there the Abbey of St Mary's, "which," he concludes, "is now energetically ruled by Abbot Stephen."

But Stephen's narrative would appear to be irreconcilably inconsistent with this history; indeed, directly contradictory in some of its details. Before, however, proceeding to notice it more precisely, it may be not inexpedient to try and ascertain whether the charters themselves, or any among them, add anything to our stock of information. And, at the outset, I remark that, while there is no doubt that confirmatory as well as concessional charters were granted by William the Conqueror<sup>1</sup> to Whitby in Prior Serlo's time—which, of course, assumes previous grants and charters by one benefactor or more—there is little reason to doubt that copy of at least one such charter, conveying a grant to Prior Reinfrid, is extant. I refer to the charter by Hugh, Earl of Chester<sup>2</sup> (No. 25), which occurs on f. 7

<sup>1</sup> It must be remarked here that Young (Hist. of Whitby, p. 253) doubts the existence of any charter by the Conqueror:—"Were we to suppose, with Charlton, that the charter of King William, on the 47th leaf of the Whitby Register, is a charter of the Conqueror, then Serlo must have been Prior before the year 1087. But that charter, compared with other authentic documents, contains intrinsic evidence that it was obtained after the possessions of the Monastery were far more considerable than they were in the Conqueror's reign, and that it must therefore have been given by William Rufus." But I think it will be seen as the inquiry proceeds that Young had not duly examined the evidences which are available, and that it is merely an unsupported assumption on his part that the possessions of the Monastery were so inconsiderable in the Conqueror's time.

<sup>2</sup> Here again, attention must be claimed for Young's commentary on the charter noted in the text. "The authenticity of this charter is partly confirmed by 'Domesday,' where we find that Flaneburg or Flambrough belonged to Earl Hugh; yet it must be observed that no mention is made of a church there. Independent of this circumstance, the charter is a little suspicious, of Sir C. Strickland's MS., and in which, with greeting to Archbishop Thomas of York, William de Perci, and He[nry] 'Vicecomes Ebor.,' he grants to Prior Renfrid the Church of S. Peter at Whitby, with all its appurtenances, and to that same church, the Church of Fleinesburg also, "cum omnibus decimis Francigenis et Anglicis;" the witnesses being Earl Alan (of Bretagne), Ralph Paganel, Aschetil de Bulmer, Robert de Bruis, and Gislebert fitzAdelard.

The mention of the church of Fleinesburg in this charter is held to throw doubt on its authenticity. But there are matters and considerations connected with or involved in the charter itself of such a nature as necessarily to infer its essentially genuine and authentic character. And in this connection I ask attention first for the specified grant of tithes—"cum omnibus decimis Francigenis et Anglicis"—accompanying that of the church, and then to the fact that just such a grant was assuredly made by Earl Hugh to Whitby, of a church with its tithes, if not at Fleinesburg yet at Midelesburg, which specific grant, however, seems to have missed any particular notice at the hands of either Charlton or Young.<sup>1</sup> For the language both because no notice is afterward taken in our records of the Church of Flamborough, . . . and because the charter in question has not been among those that were first written in the Whitby Register, but has afterwards been inserted in a different handwriting on a blank space that has been left at the bottom of a page."—(Whitby, p. 252, n.) The consideration or objection last named does not carry much weight with it: it is equally valid—or the reverse—against every other similarly inserted charter in either of the two copies in the Chartulary (or indeed in any other); and the number of such inserted documents in either volume is very considerable, as surely was to be expected when one remembers the way in which these transcripts were made, and the avowed exclusion, at the time of copying, of many documents in their proper places. The other objection is dealt with in the text.

of the Conventio between the houses of Gyseburn and Whitby, made in the presence of Robert de Brus (No. 271), and to which, moreover, the same baron, conjointly with the Convent of Whitby, was a party, is sufficiently remarkable. The dispute was touching "totam decimam et omnes parochianas consuetudines ad ecclesiam de Midlesburg pertinentes de xii carucatis

Latin—"Hunc finem et concordiam inter prædictos canonicos et monachos concessit et confirmavit ex sua parte Capitulum Canonicorum de Giseburnia, et Capitulum Monachorum de Wytebi et Robertus de Brus ex parte sua"—in the following words:—"This conclusion and agreement between the aforesaid canons and monks was allowed of, and confirmed on the one part (!) by the Chapter of the Canons of Giseburn and the Chapter of the Monks of Whitby, and on the other part (!) by Robert de Brus." Surely ignorant and blundering misconception could no further go, and we may hold ourselves quite prepared to find that Charlton (p. 52) notices the charter hitherto more immediately in question, thus:—"Also Hugh Earl of Chester granted them the following charter," appending a translation which is slightly incorrect in two particulars, and then proceeding—"By this charter it appears that the Earl of Chester did not at first surrender to Lord William de Perci all right and title he had to those lands, etc., that lay about Whitby, nor convey them to him absolutely as freehold; but either reserved a part, or else, as Lord Paramount, received some quitrent, homage, or service for the whole." Then follows one of the author's characteristic reckless and utterly baseless statements to the effect that, on these grounds, may be partly understood the residence of "Percy for many years at Sneton before he granted anything by charter to the Monastery of Whitby!" After which he proceeds to say—"However those lands were all ceded to him as freehold before he entered into the crusade, and they are mentioned as such by his son Alan not long after that time. As for Flambrough"—and again we meet with an utterly groundless assertion—"Earl Hugh, soon after the Conquest, settled a colony of Flanderkins or Flemings in those parts, who built a church and town there; and from them it took the denomination of Flammenville, Flammeville, Fleinesburgh, or Flamborough, by some of which names it has been known ever since." And this, to say nothing of the gratuitous confusion between the two names Flammavilla and Fleinesburg—Flaneburg in Domesday—notwithstanding the distinct statement in the record just named that the place in question not only had its name and local designation in Edward the Confessor's time, but was then a thriving manerium, geldable in no less a sum than £24, and held by no less a personage than "Harold Comes." Moreover, all the special notice conceded to the most noteworthy matter in the whole transaction—the alleged grant of a church and its appurtenances, which transparently never was so given—is the following sentence:—"The church there (at Flamborough) was in the next century ceded (!) to the Priory of Bridlington, but on what consideration does not appear."

terræ," of which four were of John Ingram's fee in Arusum (held of Brus);<sup>1</sup> a fifth of Malet's fee in Levingthorp<sup>2</sup> (held of Roger de Moubray); a sixth belonging to Whitby itself in Midelesburg;<sup>3</sup> three more of Alvered's fee (held of Brus) in Aclum; a tenth, also in Aclum, of Robert Esturmith's fee; an eleventh of Malet's fee (and, like the last, held of Brus); and the twelfth, in Arusum, belonging to Gyseburn itself, and derived from the same benefactor. These places are all part and parcel of the manerium of Aclum, which not only includes Midlesburg and its appertaining vills, but is also noted in Domesday as constituting part of the fee of the Earl of Chester: and, besides this, an equitable partition and settlement having been agreed upon between the contending parties, the monks of Whitby "clamaverunt quietum et solutum" to the canons of Gyseburn "quicquid poterant calumpniare adversus parrochias illorum"—necessarily those affected by the said equitable partition and settlement—" propter donum Hugonis Cestrensis Comititis." It appears to be transparently clear that, when the <sup>1</sup> The presumption—if not, indeed, the certainty—is that John Ingram was a subfeudatory of Brus. The confirmation by Peter de Brus II. of all the donations of his "men" within his fee, by mentioning William Engelram as lord of the lands in Arusum, is all but conclusive. Arnald de Perci held some land in Arusum, but not much, and it is certain that the Kildale Percies not only originally, but mainly, held under Brus.

<sup>2</sup> Robert Malet, in Domesday times, held ten bovates of land in Newham, three carucates in Tollesbi, one in Aclum, two in Stainton, and one and a half in Tormozbi (Thornaby), all in capite. But although the quantities specified in the Brus fee in the places here named are suspiciously alike—e.g. in Tollesbi, three carucates, in Tormozbi, one and a half—it is difficult to conceive of any transference from the Malet fee to the Brus fee before 1086 (whatever of the kind may have happened in the 1st and 2d of Henry I.), and still more to account for the lordship of Roger de Moubray, supposing such transference to have taken place. It is at least possible that this carucate in Levingthorp—a vill not separately mentioned in Domesday, but with Arusum (also unmentioned) included in the Manerium of Aclum—was a part of the smaller manor in Aclum included in the Domesday Record in the "Terra Regis."

<sup>3</sup> This is beyond question the carucate specified in the Charter of Confirmation by Stephen, which we meet with in Edward II.'s Inspeximus (No. 582)—"et de feodo Roberti de Brus ecclesiam S. Hildæ de Midelesburgo et unam carucatam terræ, et in Neweham ii car. et ii bov. terræ"—and which in the original grant, and in Rob. de Brus's confirmation, is comprehended in the phrase, "cum omnibus rebus quæ ad eandem ecclesiam pertinent."

Convent of Whitby was able, in virtue of the grant of Earl Hugh of Chester, to allege a claim to the whole tithes and all parochial customs (save only certain burial fees) belonging to the Church of Midelesburg and arising out of the aforesaid lands in the manerium of Aclum, and Robert de Brus, the then owner of all, or nearly all, the Earl of Chester's late interest in the said manerium, and besides that the munificent founder and special patron of one of the contending Houses, is himself a party to "the part" of the other house<sup>1</sup>—under such circumstances, I think it must be abundantly clear not only that the original grant was sufficiently notorious and important, but even so much so that any modification of its tenor required the formal consent and co-operation of the original grantor's successor and representative. And thus, taking into consideration also, that not only did not the Church of Flamborough, with its tithes, ever belong to Whitby—in fact it belonged to Bridlington<sup>2</sup> in the next century—but that no reference, however slight, is ever again made to the subject in the records of the Abbey, I arrive at the conclusion that, in the charter now under notice, although the name Fleinesburg is written, it was so written, by a slip of the copyist's pen, instead of Midelesburg, and that the church of the latter place, with all its tithes and parochial customs (save only the exception noted above), and other appurtenances (the endowment carucate of land, of course, included), was granted<sup>3</sup> by Hugh Earl of Chester, together with the confirmation of the Church of St. Peter at Whitby, to Prior

<sup>2</sup> At p. 226 (Mon. Ebor.) Burton notes the gift of the Church of Flamborough to Bridlington by William FitzNigel; and at page 72, in a note to the statement in the text that Hugh Earl of Chester gave the said church and its tithes to Whitby, he adds—"But I can't suppose it could mean Flamburg, because that church was given to the Priory of Bridlington."

<sup>3</sup> Of course it may be alleged that the charter of Robert de Brus (No. 111) involves the original gift and conveyance of the Church of Midelesburgh, with all its appurtenances. It is probably sufficient to remark in reply that, admitting the indisputable grant of that church and its tithes by the Earl of Chester, the charter in question is but a deed of renewed gift and confirmation made requisite by the grantor's accession to what was part and parcel of the Earl of Chester's fee, as well as a conveyance of the new donation of Reinfrid, and necessarily some time before the Conqueror's decease.

For that the confirmations ascribed to William the Conqueror—one of which moreover is so ascribed in both the Strickland and Museum copies of the Chartulary<sup>1</sup>—are correctly assigned to him there really can be no reasonable doubt at all, Dr. Young's authority notwithstanding. In the first place, to give but one instance of the kind, Henry I., in a charter of confirmation granted by him between 1133 and 1135,<sup>2</sup> confirms to the church of Whiteby—"omnes terras et ecclesias et decimas, et omnes possessiones quas Willelmus Rex, pater meus, et Willelmus Rex, frater meus, eidem ecclesiæ dederunt et per cartas suas confirmaverunt." It is therefore absolutely certain that William the Conqueror, as well as William Rufus, not only made concessions, but granted charters to Whitby. But further it is certain that, granting that the Conqueror conceded one of the confirmations ascribed to him, he granted the other also; for in the Inspeximus of Edward II. (No. 582) after recital of the confirmation which, as above noted, is ascribed to William I. in both chartularies, the document continues "Inspeximus etiam quandam aliam cartam quam idem progenitor noster fecit eisdem Abbati et monachis in hæc verba:—Willelmus Rex Anglorum T[homæ] Archiepiscopo et Alano Comiti et R . . . . Paganello, etc." rehearsing the charter found on f. 153 of the Additional ms. Chartulary (No. 555), the witnesses to which are Archbishop Lanfranc, Osmund Bishop of Salisbury, and William de Perci, and the object of which charter is to secure to Whitby the same privileges as those enjoyed by the several churches of St. John at Beverley, St. Wilfred at Ripon, and St. Peter at York, besides granting and confirming the Church of St. Peter at Hackness, two carucates of land in the same vill, four more in Nordfeld, and two others in Briniston.

But further, even if we were not prepared to find charters of confirmation by William I., the names we meet with in this charter—two of them (without including those of Archbishop Thomas and William de Perci) viz., Earl Alan and Ralph Paganel, having been already met with in the Earl of Chester's charter to Reinfrid—and the use of the local name Prestebi would at once lead us to assign an earlier date than that of the reign of the second William to the document; and this too, without specially noting the presence of Lanfranc, who died in May 1089, Earl Alan himself having died the preceding year. And besides, the general character of the charter itself, as well as of that just now referred to as ascribed to William the Conqueror in both chartularies—Charlton says of it that it “contains as ample and extensive privileges as it was in the power of any English King to grant”—taken in connection with the Red King's notorious character, is such as to make it a priori tolerably certain that the gifts and charters in question were the father's and not the son's.<sup>1</sup>

That William Rufus was, however, in one instance a benefactor to Whitby it is of course not intended to dispute. He is mentioned once and again in the existing Whitby records as the donor of the Church of All Saints in Fishergate at York, with a special condition attached;<sup>2</sup> and although no copy of his deed of gift was known to either Charlton or Young, still the charters of confirmation by later monarchs made it certain that such a charter existed. A copy of it is given in No. 579, and it will be noted that, in the first place, the King confirms "Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hildæ de Prestebi et de Witebi et Serloni de Perci, Priori de Witebi, et monachis, etc." similar rights and privileges to those of Beverley, Ripon and York; the Port, with wreck, etc.; full and free dominion over all their possessions; all the donations of William de Perci, founder of the monastery; the remission of Danegeld on the lands of royal gift in Hackness, Nordfeld and Burniston; and then, lastly, he bestows the church of All Saints in Fishergate, York, "ad abbatiam constituendam, cum soca et saca et toll et team et infangenetheof, et cum omn. pert. suis, et cum omn. libertatibus quas meæ propriæ abbatiae habent, ut ibi monachi libere, et in pace, die ac nocte, Deum deprecentur pro me et pro hær. meis, Regibus Angliæ."<sup>1</sup>

While reserving the character and quality of the benefactions specified in the charters so far noticed for fuller consideration in the sequel, it may not be inexpedient here to give a few moments' thought to one circumstance in connection with them which appears to demand attention. I mean that, while the historical statements before us mention Reinfrid as applying to William de Percy, the charter actually conceded is conceded by Hugh of Chester. Probably it is enough to remark that in Domesday William de Percy is named only as a sub-infeudatory at Whitby of Earl Hugh (although a tenant in capite at Hackness, as it may be important to note), and that, of course, as long as this condition of affairs lasted that baron's confirmation of any gift by de Percy would be requisite.<sup>1</sup>

Omnium Sanctorum de Fishergate, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, quam dederat Serloni Priori et Monasterio de Witebi in elem. perp., ea pactione ut ibi monachi predictæ Ecclesiæ Deo servirent, et pro eo orarent, et pro hæredibus suis." And again on the first paper leaf, (No. 384), "Dotata est Ecclesia monasterialis de Whitby, ex dono Willelmi Ruffi filii Willelmi Bastardi Regis Anglorum, in Eboraco ecclesiam Omnium Sanctorum de Fishergate, cum omn. pert. suis, quam dederat Serloni Priori et Monast. de Whitby in elem. perpetuam."

Let us now revert, still bearing in mind the conclusions arrived at as to the fact and the nature of the grants by Hugh, Earl of Chester, to Reinfrid, and not losing sight of the further fact that there were certainly two charters of donation and confirmation by the Conqueror, to the narrative professedly left by Stephen of Whitby. The statement therein involved is that, in the year 1078, during the Archiepiscopate of Thomas at York, having cast away all fleshly pleasures and cares of the world, he assumed the monastic habit and profession at Whitby, among a company of brethren who were zealous in their desire to restore that place to something of its pristine condition as a holy house. At the head of these brethren was a certain Reinfrid, a man strong in goodness and conspicuous for his heavenly virtues.

Examination of the narrative professing to be by Stephen of Whitby, ultimately Abbot of St. Mary's, York.

Reinfrid is then described as having resorted to Jarrow, and remained there some time, intent on leading the life of a solitary; but many others, induced by regard for him, having joined themselves to him, a religious society was formed, with whom, for a space, he served God manfully under the discipline of strict rules. Seeing the brotherhood, after a period of such training, strengthened and confirmed in the habits of a religious life, and still mindful of his original desire, he bids them, grieving sorely over his departure, a final farewell, and comes to Whitby "for the purpose of leading a solitary life."<sup>2</sup> But there also his fame was spread abroad, and many resorted to him with the desire of remaining permanently associated with him in the duties and practice of a life of religion. Among these Stephen himself, anxious to live to God alone, took upon himself the habit of holy religion, "sub ejus (Renfridi) magisterio et prioratu." But, a few days only having elapsed, Reinfrid, and no less all the rest of the "congregatio," who in fact were only assenting in what they did to his counsel and command, imposed the direction or government ("procuracionem") of the entire monastery on Stephen's shoulders; and, although he manifested long-continued unwillingness and opposition, eventually, and in obedience alike to the command of the King and the two Archbishops, chose him—not simply for their Prior, but—their Abbot.

Now, either Symeon of Durham and the Whitby Memorialist are utterly and entirely mistaken in their statements, or the alleged narrator of the above story is making mis-statements: and, of course, if we look upon the narrator as also certainly the actor, inasmuch as he tells the story in the first person, he makes them knowingly and purposely. He makes Reinfrid go to Jarrow to lead the life of a solitary. Symeon states that he was not allowed to leave Evesham on any other condition save that he and Elfwy both should be under the control and spiritual charge of Aldwine; and when he goes to Jarrow he goes on just the same conditions. A monastery, with its band of brethren, having been constituted there, two of the brethren set forth again "to work a like work elsewhere, the Lord assisting them," and, in the sequel, Reinfrid withdraws from his companion to go to Whitby; where, receiving those who came to him, he commences the institution of a monastic settlement. The alleged Stephen makes him go there, as to Jarrow, simply out of special desire to lead a solitary life, and with no reference to any ulterior monastic project at all.

But, again, the alleged Stephen describes himself as assuming the monastic habit at Whitby, having gone thither after Reinfrid had already gathered together, "under himself as Master and Prior," a considerable number of monks, and habituated them to the rule of religious living. Notwithstanding which, raw novice as he, Stephen, was himself; tried, practised, trained, experienced as Reinfrid was, by his Evesham initiation, by his maturer Jarrow endeavours and labours and successes, by his still further continuance in the same toils and cares at Whitby; the whole brotherhood, with Reinfrid at their head, and at Reinfrid's suggestion and desire moreover, solicit the former to become their head and ruler, and elect him not simply into the place assumed to be vacated by Reinfrid, but as Abbot, and that by the command of King and both Archbishops alike.

But, setting aside the preposterousness of a statement such as this in its various parts, and not least in its last part, especially taken in connection with the fact that the next superior of the establishment, namely Serlo de Percy, was indisputably Prior and not Abbot, it will be well to give a measure of regard to the question as to who and what Reinfrid really was. Mr. Freeman, in his brief notice of the revival of religion in the North, speaks of Reinfrid or Regenfrith as "seemingly a lay-brother,"<sup>1</sup> and adverts in a note to Symeon's description of him as "ignarus litterarum," and on the next page goes on to say—"But Regenfrith, now we may presume no longer ignorant of letters, went forth as the reviver of the Monastery of Whitby." In some way or other—perhaps owing to the misconception so easily and unsuspectingly associating itself with the phrase, "an illiterate man"—the idea tacitly connected with Reinfrid seems to be that he was a common sort of a man, and, as a soldier, just what we should speak of now-a-days as a "common private," or one of "the rank and file." If the Whitby Memorialist may be assumed to have really known something of the man he speaks of as the first Prior of the revived Monastery, he was neither a lay-brother nor a common soldier. He describes him as "monachus de Evesham,"<sup>2</sup> and as having been "miles strenuissimus in obsequio domini sui Willielmi Bastardi;" and moreover, with sufficient independence of action to be able to turn aside to Whitby when on his road—whether simply journeying or professionally marching—through the province of Northumbria. Surely the least that can be made of such a description is that he was in some sense or other a distinguished soldier, and in the direct service—a personal follower—of the King himself, in contradistinction to any other or meaner "lord." No one who bears in mind the nature and terms of military service in those days can suppose, when such terms are employed, that he was other than "a man under authority, having soldiers under him;" and that his rank was not a very subordinate one there are other considerations tending to show.

For instance, his son<sup>1</sup> was obviously a man of some distinction as well as wealth. Charlton himself makes him out to have been Dapifer—that is, as he explains it, "butler, or cup-bearer"—to the family of de Arcubus; and this not only with no better authority than the fact that he holds under Osbert or Osbern de Arches (whose confirmation of his grant to Whitby of two carucates in Tholestun is given in two separate charters, Nos. 88 and 235),<sup>2</sup> but in the face of a direct statement to the contrary made in the body of the Memorial. To myself, even in the absence of such direct statement, yet from his frequent presence at the execution of important charters by members of the Percy family, it would always have appeared more probable that he was Dapifer to the head of that great family, in other words to Alan de Percy himself; but the question is set at rest at once by the simple entry in the Memorial just referred to—namely, "ex dono Folconii, Dapiferi Alani de Perci, duas carucatas terræ in Thoulestune."<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Charlton's sagacity led him to infer that Fulco filius Raynfredi was a son of Reinfrid the Prior (Whitby, p. 60), a fact that is placed quite beyond doubt by the entry of his name in full as "Fulco Dapifer filius Reynfridi Prioris de Whitby" among the witnesses to two of the charters rehearsed in the Inspeximus of Henricus filius Henrici de Percy, found on f. 6 (or f) in the Museum Chartulary.

"In Neuton et Oglestun, habuerunt v taini iiii carucatas terræ ad geldum. Terra est ad iiii carucas. Ibi Fulcho, homo Osberni, habet i carucatam et vii villanos, cum ii carucis, et xvi acras prati et sectam i molendini."

These are the Domesday entries touching the maneria in the fee of Osbern

The facts then are patent that Prior Reinfrid's son held an office of distinction in a great family, and that he was sufficiently well feoffed under another great family to be able to bestow a donation of two carucates upon the rising Abbey of Whitby: both of them facts not very consistent with the foregone conclusion as to the poor estate of the father, antecedently to his becoming Prior of the reviving monastery of that place.<sup>1</sup>

Passing these several considerations under review, it is seen to be very difficult to accord our belief to several of the statements in the narrative of the alleged Stephen. On the face of or Osbert de Arches, held of him by Fulco filius Reinfridi Dapifer. But besides, the following is to be noted :—

“In Suechintune habuit Blacre i carucatam terræ et dimidiam ad geldum, et i caruca potest ibi esse. Nunc habet Fulco de Willelmo (de Perci). Ipse ibi i carucatam et v villanos; dimidiam carucam et ii acras prati.

“In Ingilvestvet habuit Gamel viii carucatas terræ ad geldum, ubi possunt esse iiii carucæ. Nunc habet Fulcherus de Willelmo, et wastum est.”

Thus Fulcho appears to have held largely under both families, de Perci and de Arcis.

“Rex omnibus etc. Inspeximus cartam Henrici Regis, patris nostri, in hæc verba :—Henricus, Rex Angliæ, etc. Sciatis nos confirmasse ecclesiæ Sanctæ Mariæ et monialibus de Appleton etc. Ex dono Aliciæ de Sancto Quintino scitum loci etc. : Ex dono Roberti, filii Roberti filii Fulconis, filii prædictæ Aliciæ de S. Quintino, terras in Immingham : Ex dono Roberti Dapiferi et Roesiæ uxoris suæ ecclesiam de North Elkington : Ex dono Willelmi de Kyma xxx acras t'ræ in Elkington, cum communi pastura quantum pertinet ad ii bovas t'ræ ejusdem villæ. Has autem xxx acras t'ræ dedit eis pro ii bovatis quas Robertus Dapifer, pater Margaretæ, uxoris suæ, eis dedit die obitus sui. Dat. A<sup>o</sup> regni nostri xxxiii.”

To this Dodsworth appends a short genealogical table, showing that Alicia de St. Quintin was daughter to Aymer de Arches, founder of the monastery of Keeling, and that her son Fulcho was father of Robert and Gilbert. But Fulcho filius Reinfridi is father of Robert and Gilbert also; and the probability is, as Roesia was a widow in 4 Henry III. [H.H.H. 55] (1220), and thus the dates would accommodate themselves fairly well, that the Fulcho mentioned in the above Confirmation is also the son of Reinfrid, and that thus some further clew to the condition and connections of Prior Reinfrid is given us.

them they are not consistent with either reason or probability;<sup>1</sup> and inasmuch as they are inconsistent with the statements of other writers whose accuracy and acquaintance with the facts concerned, apart from the narrative itself, there is no reason to suspect, there can be little hesitation in rejecting them as incredible, perhaps even in discrediting them as fictions, if not falsehoods.<sup>2</sup>

On the whole, then, we assume the material truth and accuracy of the statements of the Whitby Memorialist touching Reinfrid, his priorate, its unbroken continuity, his death as recorded, and, what should not be omitted, his burial at Hackness; and, continuing to pay attention to the said narrative, we are informed that, after Prior Reinfrid's death, Serlo, the brother of William de Perci, was invested with the vacant office, and remained in it until their nephew, William de Perci, was created Abbot.<sup>3</sup> And it is also noticed that the creation in question took place at some undefined time before William de Perci went to the Holy Land.

Dr. Young, in speaking of the events here recorded, simply says, "Serlo was succeeded by his nephew, William de Percy, who obtained the title of Abbot," having at a previous page <sup>1</sup> It may be remarked that the same character appertains to several of the statements made in that part of the narrative which bears immediate reference to the proceedings connected with the foundation and endowments of St. Mary's Abbey at York. There is much of inconsistency and improbability involved, which this, however, is not the place to expose.

<sup>2</sup> The view I am inclined to take of this composition is perhaps indicated in the terms employed in describing it in the text, as that of "the alleged Stephen." In other words, I do not feel inclined to look upon it in its existing form as emanating from Stephen at all, or as originating in Stephen's time, or indeed at any period very near his time. On the contrary, it looks much more like the production of some admirer of Stephen, whose object it was to add distinction to his name, and who, with some amount of real knowledge—whether derived from tradition or from written sources—drew upon his imagination also, and was besides not too careful to avoid local and other inaccuracies and inconsistencies. Regarded, therefore, as in connection with Stephen as its author, I look upon it as a forgery.

noticed the obscurity involving the precise date of the death<sup>1</sup> of the former, and it is quite evident that he regards the succession of William de Percy as consequent on the death of Serlo; that, in fact, it never entered into his mind to suppose any other sequence of events. Charlton's language is as precise as possible in delivering the same view, and still with his characteristic dogmatism in the affixing of dates. "Serlo," he writes, "continued to preside with great reputation as Prior in the Monastery of Whitby, for almost twenty years, and died about the year 1102. . . . He was succeeded, as Prior of Whitby, by his nephew William."<sup>2</sup>

Only a small measure of attention to the terms actually employed by the Memorialist—the only authority I believe either assumed or available by these two writers—will be sufficient to prove that if any statement of the kind is made, it is that Serlo remained Prior only until he was superseded by William as Abbot. Whether William was put over his head in the new dignity acquired for the House of Whitby, while he still remained in the now subsidiary post of Prior, or whether he resigned the office altogether and ceased to bear any prominent part in the rule of the House, we may have no absolutely positive grounds for deciding; although, as will be more fully seen in the sequel, we are not quite without means for arriving at a fairly satisfactory conclusion.

<sup>2</sup> Whitby, p. 62. The author continues his statement thus:—"Who had for several years lived as a canon or monk there, and was unanimously elected by the whole fraternity." Charlton has no authority whatever for making the latter part of this statement. It may be true, or it may not, but it rests on no testimony. And it is one of a thousand others in Charlton's volume of which the same may be said. As to the former part of it, he overlooks the difference between monk and canon; he is without authority for stating that "William de Percy Canonicus" had lived at Whitby for several years; and he further overlooks the fact that Will. de Percy Canonicus was still described in those terms in the time of Robert, son of Fulco Dapifer son of Reinfrid, the Prior, or, in other words, long after (even according to Charlton's autocratic mode of dating, and much more according to the statement of the Whitby Memorialist) Abbot William de Percy had commenced his period of headship. There is very little doubt that William de Percy, the canon, was a brother of Alan de Percy, and son of William de Percy hote Lesgernuns "The Founder," and consequently cousin to Abbot William. See note 3 to No. 89.

But, however this may be, it is by no means impossible that this circumstance—what I have termed the supersession of Prior Serlo by Abbot William—may help to throw a little light on more than one obscure point in the early history of the resuscitated monastery. The alleged or pseudo-Stephen states that, after a measure of success and prosperity had begun to wait on his efforts as Prior—that is, after he had relieved Reinfrid of that office—to repair and restore matters in and about the monastery, “one of the barons of the king, namely, William de Percy, who had been the original donor of the place”—Stephen says, “to us,” though admittedly he only joined the community some time after the gift had been made to Reinfrid, and taken advantage of by him moreover—seeing the improvements effected, began now to assail the brotherhood directly and indirectly, and even strove to drive them forth by every available means; and he repeats the charge in still wider terms a few lines further on.

Yet another writer<sup>1</sup> is there, moreover, who enlarges on the violence and injustice of William de Percy displayed towards the rising Whitby community, but, from our entire ignorance of who he was and when he wrote, it is difficult to estimate the measure of authority which might be supposed to go with his statements. He says that, after the temporary retreat of the Whitby monks to Hackness (of which more at a later page) “a very great strife arose between the two brothers William de Perci and Serlo, Prior of Whitby,” occasioned by the circumstance that the former had given the vills of Stachesbi<sup>2</sup> and Everley to Radulphus de Everley, “armigero suo qui annis multis serviebat,” and that really William de Percy desired to take away from Serlo all the lands and vills he had previously given to the monastery. He says further that Serlo, on ascertaining this, goes with all speed to the king, trusting to his former intimacy and friendship with him when both were young soldiers in the house and court of the Conqueror. He states that Rufus gave strict charge to William de Percy, “ut

<sup>2</sup> I give the reading Stachesbi, principally because Stachesby represents a known place, and Scaxby does not. The legend, if legend it be, would connect itself with some place in the Whitby possessions.

Serloni fratri suo, Priori de Whitby et de Hackenas, et monachis ibidem Deo serv., suam omnimodo firmam pacem teneret, nec eis ullam molestiam inferret;" and further, that in the desire to put some sensible distance between himself and his brother and to abide within the king's fee, Serlo begged the king to give himself and his monks, in perpetual alms, six carucates of land in his demesne, namely, two at Hackenas and four in Northfeld, with all their appurtenances.

Now there is, I think, in this story, as in that by the alleged Stephen, certainly a mixture of fact and of fiction; only, that the latter proceeds rather from misconception, or imperfect information perhaps, than from that vein of misrepresentation which, it seems to me, is the leading feature in the Stephen narrative—

1. In the first place, I doubt, and on divers grounds, the accuracy of the statement concerning Ralph de Everley.

2. In the second, I doubt the accuracy of the statements—there is one preceding the extract I have given—touching the royal donations at and near Hackness.

3. And in the third, I doubt the statement—as it stands and is meant to imply—about the wish of William de Percy to take all the lands and vills he had given to Whitby from his brother Serlo.

That there was a dispute between the brothers I think possible, and more than merely possible; that William de Percy adopted the alleged line of conduct in the Priorate—Stephen's according to the pseudo-Stephen, Reinfrid's according to the Memorialist—preceding Serlo's, and again in Serlo's, I do not think probable. That we may be led on to think the difference arose during the latter period, and that the pseudo-Stephen wrongly puts it in the earlier period, I deem to be consistent with the facts which we are certain of, and which are such, when taken together, as to lead on to probable presumption as to the nature of the dispute or difference, as well as to the facts of its being: and to a full consideration of these matters we shall come in due time. For the present, other matters must claim our attention.

1. First, as to Radulphus de Everley. His name occurs as witness to a charter by Alan, son of Radulphus de Ferlington, which could not have been granted earlier than about 1135 ; he is also witness to two charters by Alan Buscel (son of Reginald Buscel), who was a nephew of Abbot William de Percy, and probably a grandson of the man whose "armiger" Radulph de Everley is said, and through many years of service, to have been. But besides all this, which tends to make the alleged Armiger a much younger man than the date of the assumed grant to him would require—to belong, in fact, to the generation next in succession—the language of the charters is hardly consistent with any such grant. For we find William de Percy, early in the reign of Rufus, conveying and confirming, among many other large grants, "Nordfeld, Sudfeld, Everlaye et Brokesaye et Tornelaye;" his wife Emma de Port, his sons Alan, Walter and Richard, his kinsman Ernald de Percy (lord of the Kildale and Ormesby maneria), the Archbishop Thomas, Fulco Dapifer, Gilebert fitzAdelard (a witness to Earl Hugh's grant already noticed) being among the witnesses. Also, towards the close of Rufus' reign, or at the very beginning of Henry's, and certainly between 1097 and 1101,<sup>1</sup> we have a charter from Alan de Percy confirming the vills of Filing, Haukesgarth and Normanby, which Abbot William had bought of Tanchardus Flandrensis, to which Radulphus de Everley is himself a witness ; and early in the reign of Henry I., other two charters by Alan de Percy, in the second of which he formally confirms to Whitby Hackness and the two churches of St. Mary and St. Peter there, with the vills of "Nordfeld, Sudfeld, et Everlaye, Brocesaye et Torenlaye," precisely as in his father's charter, and without the slightest hint or reference to intimate that there had been any alienation, or was now any restitution, of the vill of Everley. In fact, there can be no reasonable doubt that, just as this same Abbot William granted to Ascetil or Ascatin, son of William de Newham, the vills of Haukesgarth and Normanby in exchange for Newham, hitherto held of the Abbey by his said father, and he from that time forth was called Ascatin de Haukesgarth. So Everlaye was held of the Abbey by Radulphus, the grant having been made to him not long after the acquisition, in virtue of the grant which was formally confirmed in the charter of William de Percy just now quoted.

II. To turn next to some consideration of matters connected with the statements touching the place called Hachanes, Hachanos, or Hackness. I suppose the first distinct mention of this place in relation with Whitby is that made by Bede in his Historia Ecclesiastica. After having mentioned the death of Hild (which took place November 17, 680), he goes on to mention an incident alleged to have taken place, coincidently with her death, in the monastery at Hacanos, which monastery Hild had herself established in the course of that very year.<sup>1</sup> This monastery or cell was destroyed by the Danes in 869, but it is remarkable that no sooner is the work of restoration heard of at Whitby, than we hear also of coincident connection of Hackness with the reviving monastery. In the Memorial, Reinfrid is stated to have been buried in the cemetery of St. Peter at Hachanos, at the middle point of the east end of the church; and a little below, among the early gifts to Whitby, occurs the significant mention of "the church of St. Peter at Hachanesse, where our monks served God, died, and were buried."<sup>2</sup> And it is further to be observed that in the charter by William the Conqueror, to which Lanfranc, Bishop Osmund and William de Percy are witnesses, the King explicitly concedes and confirms to the church of Whitby and Prior Serlo, over and above like liberties with those of the churches of Ripon, Beverley and St. Peter of York, the church of St. Peter at Hackness, as well as two carucates of land in the same vill, four more at Nordfeld, and two in Briniston, together with "saca and socna," and immunity from Danegeld as to the said lands; the language as regards the church being unmistakably that of a confirmation, and not of an original grant.<sup>1</sup>

It is almost idle to say that it seems by no means improbable—for the inference is almost forced upon us—that Hackness, or, to speak more specifically, the church of St. Peter there, with its patrimony or appurtenances—of whatever extent the latter may have been—was looked upon from the first as among the matters of property or possession appertaining to St. Peter's of Whitby. Hugh of Chester confirms, or at least concedes, to Prior Reinfrid and his convent, the church of St. Peter of Whitby and all things which pertain to it;<sup>2</sup> and it is certainly easier to connect the grants by the Conqueror and William de Percy<sup>3</sup> of land at Hackness with a monastic church already

<sup>2</sup> The wording is, "et omnia quæ ad eam pertinent," in place of the customary "cum omnibus suis appendiciis," and so far the verb is "concessi;" and then to the said monks and their church he further makes the gift or grant of ("dedi") the church of Middlesburg (written Fleinesburg) and its tithes. The words "omnia quæ ad eam pertinent" are of wide extent, and may well include not only (as they, I think, certainly did) the Port and its accompanying rights, etc., but what had been one of the most important portions of the property of the old foundation—namely, Hackness and its monkish church, which one, at least, of the three named in Domesday as still in being then, clearly was.

<sup>3</sup> I think it is important to note that from the language and tenor of the charters themselves, quite independently of any other source of information or deduction, there were at least, so to speak, two periods of benefaction on the part of William de Percy—the first, which is marked by the, in part, confirmatory charter of the Earl of Chester; the second, which is designated by his own charter, to which his wife, his heir Alan, and his other sons Walter and William, as well as Archbishop Thomas of York, are described existing there, and possessing lands and rights, than to suppose the old connection between Whitby and Hackness had been lost sight of, and was now, for the first time since 869, recalled to mind and acted on.

At least thus much is incontestably clear—that when Domesday was compiled there was land at Hackness which was definitely the land of St. Hilda. The entry, among the lands of William de Perci, involving Hackness is as follows:—“MANERIUM. In Hagenesse, et Sudfelt, et Evrelai sunt viii carucatæ terræ ad geldum, ubi possunt esse v carucæ. De hac terra sunt ii carucatæ in soca Walesgrip; et aliæ sunt de t’ra S. Hildæ. Nunc habet Willelmus ibi ii carucas et xiiii villanos, et iiii bordarios cum iiii carucis. Ibi iii ecclesiæ et presbiter. . . . T. R. E. valebat vii libras, modo xx solidos.” And in the summary at the end there is this further addition to the information thus conveyed:—“In Sudfelt et Evrelag,” held by William de Perci, were “vi carucatæ,” and in “Hagenesse iiii carucatæ.” The sum thus given is ten carucates as against eight specified in the earlier entry. But without troubling ourselves with the question whether the discrepancy is due to a mistake of the scribe, or to some other cause, it is clear that in 1086, while two carucates are still in soke of the Royal manerium of Walesgrif, and two are in William de as not only “Testes,” but “Concessores.” In the first case he grants the church of St. Peter at Whitby, “et omnia quæ ad eam pertinent,” which grant I look upon as in part expanded and explained, as well as confirmed, by the Charter of William the Conqueror (No. 184); for, besides the Port and its waters, forest and forest rights, a variety of other privileges and liberties are named, only consistent with the possession of considerable domains and ecclesiastical endowments. In the second he confirms the former gift, with fuller details as to what really and specially appertained to the church of St. Peter, inclusive of the port, and with the addition of St. Mary’s Church at Hackness, and a variety of tithes and other profits elsewhere. And it is to be remarked in reference to “other sources of information or deduction,” that the memorialist speaks with entire precision of just two such periods of benefaction on the part of William de Perci. His words are: “Omnes terras, possessiones, forestas, ecclesias, decimas et libertates quas sæpenominatus idem Willelmus de Perci, cum Alano de Perci filio suo, Monasterio de Witebi dederat in primis, necnon in ultimis temporibus suis antequam Ierosolimam peteret.” This last clause is important as going near to fix the date of the later and fuller donation.

Perci's demesne, the remainder (whether four carucates or six) is specifically St. Hilda's land and of the fee of William de Perci.

How long this had been the case there is of course no means of ascertaining, so far as the Domesday Record itself is concerned; the fact remains nevertheless: and assuming the date alleged in the Stephen narrative to be a probable one—which I think it may be affirmed to be by the common assent of all writers on the subject,—and that the first donation followed hard on Reinfrid's initiatory proceedings at Whitby, we have but a period of seven or eight years to assign as the period of possession previously to the Domesday inquiry.<sup>1</sup> Beyond all question, however, the grant of the two carucates at Hackness by the King—and these of course must be the two in soke of the Walesgrif manerium—must have been made subsequently to the year 1086, and thus, I think, a date approximate to within a few months, is arrived at for the Royal grant, of the specified lands at Hackness, Nordfeld and Briniston. For, from the considerations already advanced, and which appear to me to be of such a nature as to be altogether conclusive, it is entirely apparent, first, that the charter in which the gift of the said lands is specified, and by which it is formally conveyed, is a charter of the Conqueror's, and not of his son William's; and second, that the charter of the latter—proved his beyond question by the specified grant of the church of All Saints in Fishergate—deals with the aforesaid lands as already in the possession of the monastery in virtue of a former grant by another than himself—"de terris quas de dominio meo possident," being the terms employed. The fact that remains, then, is that the lands in Hackness and Nordfeld, alleged by the unknown writer whose statements are under examination to have been granted by Rufus, at Prior Serlo's petition, to him and his monastery, were not so granted by him, but had been given by his father in the interval between the date of the Domesday inquiry and that of his death. And this being so, the doubts as to the accuracy and trustworthiness of this unknown writer, suggested by his statements made in reference to Radulfus de Everley, are still further provoked, and greatly augmented, by this detection of a direct historical misstatement—possibly unintentional as it may really have been.

But there is yet another historical misstatement involved in the same narrative which still further diminishes any confidence we might even wish to feel in the writer in question. Hackness was not only not "in feudo Domini Regis," but was in reality in that of William de Percy, at a distance from whom and whose territory the petitioner for these lands is represented as wishing to remove himself and his monastery; a circumstance which inevitably discredits either the writer's honesty or his qualification as a trustworthy historian.

We have still the statements touching the desire manifested by William de Percy to take from his brother all the lands and vills he had hitherto bestowed on the monastery to inquire into; but before doing so, there are other matters which it will be better to pass in review and consider—matters which depend on an entry in Domesday of such a nature as to introduce new perplexities. It is this:—speaking of Whitby with its soke, these latter amounting in all to twenty-eight carucates liable to Danegeld, the compiler says—"Hæc habet Hugo, et Willelmus de Perci de eo. Pæne omnia wasta. Tantummmodo in Prestebi et Sourebi quæ de Willelmo habet Abbas Eborcensis, sunt ii carucatæ in dominio, et viii sochmanni cum i caruca, et xxx villani cum iii carucis, et i molendinum x solidorum, et xxvi acræ prati per loca."

The Domesday statement then is, that the Abbot of York holds of William de Perci (William de Perci himself being a subinfeudatory of Hugh of Chester, who is the tenant in capite) Presteby and Soureby, containing, the former two carucates, and the latter four, liable to Danegeld, and by as purely secular a holding as any other sub-tenant mentioned in the account of the entire fee. Further, in these two villas there were two carucates "in dominico," which alone, out of all the forty-three carucates comprising the capital manor of Whitby itself, its berewic Sneton, and its various sokes, formed an exception to the miserable "omnia wasta" applicable to the rest; and on these two carucates eight sochmanni, with the apparently pitiful equipment of one plough,<sup>1</sup> and thirty villanes with the more pitiful equipment of three ploughs in all, are returned as finding employment and maintenance.

In the territory of Prestebi and Soureby then, comprising in all six carucates, there were, according to Domesday, two carucates not waste, and, in so far, unlike all the rest in the entire manor; but there is no specification as to the precise locality of these two carucates, as being situate in one of the two villas rather than in the other, or jointly in both; least of all, any allegation that they were exclusively in that of Prestebi, and just as little that these two were held by the Abbot in frank almoigne.

The statement in the Memorial, in one place, is—"dedit autem illi (Renfrido) strenuissimus prædictus Willelmus de Perci antiquum monasterium S. Petri Apostoli, cum duabus carucatis terræ in Prestebi, in elemosinam perpetuam," the earlier mention of the same fact having been thus expressed:—"in loco qui olim Streoneshale vocabatur, deinde Prestebi appellabatur, nunc autem Witebi vocatur, Willelmus de Perci, cognomento Lesgernuns, tempore Willelmi Bastard (nothi) Regis Anglorum ibi fundaverit Monasterium in honore Sancti Petri Apostoli et S. Hyldæ Abbatissæ, atque Reinfrido monacho de Evesham cum sociis suis, quos sibi adquisiverat, ipsum locum commendaverit, et primo duas carucatas terræ in Prestebi illi tradidit."

Dr. Young, while remarking on one page<sup>1</sup> that "the lands at Whitby," namely "the six carucates at Presteby and Soureby in the manor of Whitby," "were scarcely considered as church property, being held by the Abbot Stephen as a vassal or tenant under the lord of that manor," at another<sup>2</sup> makes "no doubt" that these "lands of Presteby and Soureby in Whitby manor are the same which William de Percy gave to Reinfrid and his fraternity," and more explicitly still, in a third place,<sup>3</sup> adds, "The lands of Prestebi, consisting of two carucates, are obviously the same which William de Percy first gave to Reinfrid and his fraternity, as stated in the Memorial; and unto these had been added the lands of Sourebi (supposed to be Sneaton-Thorp), consisting of four carucates." He omits, however, to notice the discrepancy between the statement of his authority, the Memorialist, as to the nature of the gift to Reinfrid—"in elemosinam perpetuam"—and that of the tenure by the Abbot of York previously noted by him. It would appear to me that the gift in free alms to Reinfrid, and the grant in ordinary tenancy to the Abbot of York, must be two distinct matters, and that the lands concerned in either, at least most probably, must be as distinct as the gift and grant themselves. That there was a gift to Reinfrid there can be no doubt whatever, and, admitting that gift, it must, in order to its validity, have been confirmed by the tenant in capite, or Hugh of Chester; and yet further, admitting the authenticity of the said Earl's charter to Reinfrid—and for doing so we have seen not simply weighty, but I think conclusive, reasons—then we must also admit not only the grant of the church of St. Peter but also of "omnia quæ ad eam pertinent," and it will be hard, in the face of all the preceding considerations, to limit the meaning of this phrase so as to exclude everything save the ground the ruined monastery stood upon. It will be remembered that the Abbess Hild, "comparata possessione decem familiarum in loco qui dicitur Streuneshalch ibi Monasterium construxit." Taking the usual estimate of about 30 to 33 acres<sup>1</sup> to a familia or hide, we have between three and four carucates to allow for, as a part of the original "appurtenances" of the Anglo-Saxon monastery, and it is surely not too much to assume that at least a portion of this—and a half of it would very nearly make up the two carucates specified as the amount of the original gift—would be given with the site of the ruins, still leaving a balance of nearly two carucates to be subsequently granted—on whatever grounds or for whatever reason—to the person who either was at the time of the grant Abbot of York, or subsequently became so.

Doubtful as the narrative attributed to this person essentially is, as to both its truthfulness and its authenticity, there can be no reasonable doubt that Stephen of Whitby was the man designated by the Domesday title "Abbas de Ebor'," and that he actually held the vills of Prestebi and Sourebi in the manner noted in Domesday must be regarded as a fact; and a remarkable fact it is as co-ordinated with more than one of the statements involved in his alleged narrative. For, not to dwell upon the various allegations concerning William de Perci's open, active and inveterate hostility,<sup>2</sup> persevered in with the unconcealed object of driving the fraternity from Whitby, we find the alleged Stephen declaring that the place was publicly and unjustly wrested from them, "jam publice et injuste ablata nobis Wittebeya,” and that consequently, “inevitabile totiens memorati Willelmi violentia coacti,” and under the direct orders of the King, moreover, they migrated to Lastingham.

But before proceeding to deduce any inference from this—from whatever point of view regarded—somewhat startling inconsistency between this part of the alleged Stephen narrative and the Domesday returns, it may be well to try and ascertain whether disparity of date may be suggested as affording a possible explanation, whether more or less satisfactory or reasonable, of the said inconsistency.

The alleged Stephen states that in 1078, the twelfth year of the Conqueror's reign, he assumed the monkish habit at Whitby; that a few days after, as already noticed, he was compelled by the urgent solicitations of Reinfrid and his fraternity to assume also the Priorate, and that ultimately (demum) he was made to be, through the combined pressure of the King and both Archbishops, Abbot instead of Prior of Whitby; that time having been allowed for the working of visible improvement in the place assigned to them, William de Percy became their enemy, and that pirates and robbers attacked them; whence originated an appeal to the King for succour, the result of which was that Lastingham was given them, and they began to build there; that then, they themselves abiding still at Whitby, on the arrival of a suitable opportunity for receiving the imposition of pontifical hands and the benediction as Abbot, he resolved to go to Lastingham and be consecrated Abbot of that place also, and that at length, with the full approbation of the Archbishop, this scheme was duly accomplished. It would seem that, allowing for the necessarily gradual progress of improvement such as that adverted to; for the full commencement of other work elsewhere after the wrecking of the aforesaid improvement; allowing also for his appeal to the King, and the working out of his new plans, and obtaining the consent and approval of the Archbishop and others consulted; and finally, for the consecration and benediction,—we can hardly suppose so short a period as three or four years would suffice. It seems nearly imperative on us to ask a longer space. However, four years would bring us to 1082, in which year William came to England from Normandy to arrest the Bishop of Baieux, returning thither again not long after. I note this because the next important feature in the tale, as told by the alleged Stephen, is that William de Perci, after this double consecration of Stephen as Abbot, became more virulently and actively hostile than ever to these unhappy religious, and strove by all possible means to expel the community from Whitby; on which account the Abbot had repeated recourse—"frequenter adire compulsus est"—to the justiciars, dinning his troubles into the ears of many, asking of them help against his oppressors, actually crossed over to Normandy in order to have an audience of the King, and finally, confronting William de Perci there, besought the royal succour against him. And so, at last, having accomplished his purpose—"accepto pacis chirographo"—he returns home. But the peace was of short duration. William de Perci showed himself more fiercely hostile and bent upon their ruin than ever; and, in the issue, succeeded in openly effecting their expulsion.

But surely all this must carry us on a year or two further in the passage of time; and thus, on our very modest assumptions as to the space of time required, we come to an epoch which can certainly with no reason be supposed to antedate the Domesday inquiry by much more than a couple of years, within which period the appointment and consecration as Abbot of York must necessarily be made, and moreover the grant and concession, and by the very baron represented as so implacably hostile, of the lands of Prestebi and Sourebi, he formally made to the object of his hitherto persistent and bitter persecution.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The suspicion has certainly crossed my mind that there might be a possible connection between the Domesday statement and the mention in Stephen's narrative of his appeals to the justiciars and others. But independently of the fact that the whole narrative appears to me to be open to so much and so grave suspicion, I cannot see any good ground for entertaining any such idea. In other words, I have no doubt that the Domesday entry records a bona fide tenancy, and that it is, if understood to apply to the grant of lands by William de Perci, entirely destructive of any faith in the veracity of that part of the alleged Stephen's narrative which speaks of the church-lands at Whitby as being publicly and unjustly torn from the community of religious so recently revived.

Thus the inconsistency between the statements of the alleged Stephen narrative and that of Domesday is seen to be only the more glaringly and hopelessly manifested, and it becomes more than ever apparent how little of weight or credit such a story can carry with it. And this is the more unfortunate because it is entirely evident that a connection of some kind did exist or had existed between the early monastic settlers at Whitby, or some of them, and that other monastic community which eventually became the Abbot and Convent of St. Mary's at York.

For it is not only this perplexing entry in Domesday that indicates such a connection; there is the distinct statement by Symeon of Durham that the monks of Whitby, after Reinfrid's death, migrated to York, and there set up—"construxerunt"—a monastery to the honour of the Virgin Mary, which monastery, at the date of the said Symeon's History, was strenuously administered by the Abbot Stephen. We have seen, as it would seem, insuperable objections to the assertion that Stephen superseded Reinfrid in the rule of the nascent Whitby Community of Religious, as made in the narrative we have had under examination. There is, however, no apparent reason for supposing that he did not join the said community as it is stated he did; and it is certain that in one way, if not in a second—and the probability is both in the one way and in the other—he was a man of mark. I mean that he had become so far distinguished as a monk, that his capacity and fitness to become a ruler of monks, or of a monastic establishment, was clearly manifested, whether or no—and clearly, I see no reason to doubt that—he was originally a man of worldly position and influence. Whether we admit the account of his early intimacy with Rufus, or that of his ability to obtain access to the Conqueror's ear with his complaints and petitions, or not, still so much might be safely conceded. And granted his monastic profession at Whitby, his there acquired and displayed fitness for administering monastic discipline, and his more than possible possession of mundane interest, it is possible, I think, to frame a supposition or suggestion, founded on Symeon's distinct allegation concerning the migration to York on the death of Reinfrid, which may really wear some amount of verisimilitude. For naturally, on our threefold assumption, the idea of accession to the Priorate on Reinfrid's death would suggest itself, most probably to Stephen himself, or if not to Stephen himself, yet certainly to such of the fraternity as were more particularly attached to him.<sup>1</sup> And, at least as naturally, there being such a person as Serlo de Percy, a brother of the actual refounder of the reviving House of Whitby, able and willing to become Prior in Reinfrid's place, the appointment would surely fall upon him. There would in this be a prolific source of dissatisfaction and discontent to Stephen and his party; and such dissatisfaction might naturally, perhaps of necessity, lead in such unsettled times to the secession of such party in a body, and its withdrawal towards and ultimate settlement at York.<sup>2</sup>

Assuming that there was such a secession as this, headed

<sup>2</sup> It is necessary to speak with some degree of reserve, inasmuch as while the alleged Stephen narrative states that Stephen and his monks removed from Whitby to Lastingham,—“ibi saltem manere cupientes,”—and were thence, within no long time, translated to York, there to lay, at the church of St. Olave, the essential foundation of what afterwards became the great Abbey of St. Mary of York, Domesday lends some sort of importance, if not confirmation, to the statement in question; for we find that in the vicinity of Lastingham the Abbot of York held, and under precisely the same conditions as under William de Perci at Whitby, several “maneria,” with their appurtenances, under Berengarius de Toden; but at Lastingham itself, only 1 villan with 1 plough. The full entries touching the Abbot's fee in this locality held of Berenger are as follows:—

“TERRA BERENGARII DE TODENI.

“*IN NORT TREDING. In CHIRCHEBI habuit Torbrant ii carucatas terræ et vi bovas ad geldum (t'ra ii car.). Nunc habet Berenger de Toden et Abbas Ebor' de eo. by Stephen, and on the suggested motives, himself being moreover a man possessed of temporal weight and influence, a possible and much more than merely plausible explanation is suggested not only as to the actual foundation of the alleged variance, or rather hostility, between William de Perci and Stephen, but also as to the subinfeudation of the latter to the former at Prestebi and Sourebi. It is clear that Stephen possessed influence enough to obtain a grant from the King in capite of two carucates at Lestingham and two more at Apeltun. It may be, perhaps is probable, that these grants were obtained in transitu, so to speak, between Whitby and York, and that on his translation to York as Abbot of the infant House of St. Mary, they were continued and confirmed to him in that character; and also that William de Perci, contemporaneously with his acquisition of the said grants, may have seen good reason to constitute him his own feudatory at Whitby, to the extent and in the way indicated by the Domesday returns.<sup>1</sup>

"Ad hoc manerium pertinet i carucata terræ in Fornetorp."

The Lestingham entry is noteworthy. There can be no doubt that the construction I have put upon it is the correct one, for there is one precisely similar on the following page, viz.:—"In WESTONE (WESTREDING) habuit Torbrand v car. t'ræ ad geldum. Nunc habet Berengarius ibi iiii villanos cum i caruca, etc." But it is to be remarked that in the Recapitulation, on p. lxxxiv<sup>b</sup>, the entry touching Lestingham is, "In Lestingham ii car. (Abbas); ibid. i car. (Ber. de Toden)"—an entry which does not occur in the previous enumeration of the various manors, etc., comprised in the several fees. The same is true of the almost adjoining entry of "Apeltun ii car. (Abbas)," not to mention other instances of lands which were indisputably church lands. The entry on this same page touching Chirchebi is, "In Cherchebi et alia Cherchebi vii car. B. Toden, et Abbas de eo;" the other maneria named in the extracts above given being named merely as in the fee of de Toden, his sub-feudatory the Abbot not being named at all.

<sup>1</sup> It is abundantly certain that there was some hesitation or uncertainty as to the actual fee of the Abbot of St. Mary's at the Domesday date. Of what nature this hesitation or uncertainty was, or how it came to exist, can

Moreover, there is a further supposition which may be entertained, and in this place, perhaps, without any incongruity, of such a nature as to connect itself with this last, and not with any tendency to invalidate it. I mean that amid all the evident inconsistency with facts and with reason observed in the alleged Stephen narrative, and in that supplied from Dodsworth, there is one matter in which both agree, as to its essential nature at all events, if not in its minor accessories of time and person.<sup>1</sup> I refer to the alleged plundering attacks of pirates from the sea and robbers from the more immediate vicinity which, in the one account, induced the primary retreat to Lestingeham, and in the other led to the retirement to only be surmised. The fact, however, remains that when the list of fees in Yorkshire, prefixed to the full specification of the various manors held by the king and his several tenants in capite, was drawn up, the fourth in the list, the first three being "i. Terra Regis. ii. Archiepiscopi Eboracensis et canonicorum ac hominum ejus. iii. Ep'i Dunelm. et hominum ejus." "iiii. Abbatis de Eboraco," and next to it "v. Hugonis comitis." In the full specification or description of the manors involved after "i. Terra Regis," and before "ii. terra Archiep'i Eboracensis," are four entries under the rubricated heading, not numbered, of "Terra Archiep'i Eborac'." After this comes "iii. Terra Ep'i Dunelmensis," and then "iiii. Terra Hugonis comitis" instead of "v. Terra Hugonis comitis" as in the prefatory list or index. It is to be presumed that the list was made before the specification was completed, and suffered to remain unaltered by an oversight; but even so it conclusively shows that the fee of the Abbot of York was in some sense an entity even then, though not an entity ex post facto as all the other twenty-eight fees named in the list were—that is, as being already enjoyed by the several grantees named. In all probability the entity of the Abbot's fee was dependent on the circumstance that it was in process of formation, but not as yet fully formed, and that a variety of adjustments, re-leases, re-grants, exchanges, or grants in augmentation having to be made before a final arrangement could be come to, it was found impossible, within the limited time allowed by the urgent demands of the king for the completed returns, to give the necessary details, etc., the Abbot's fee was finally omitted as a several or special fee. As to the adjustments, re-leases, re-grants, etc., just named, some explanatory matter will be found in the text at a subsequent page.

<sup>1</sup> The alleged Stephen speaks of one retreat consequent on the attacks of pirates and robbers, and that in his own time and to Lestingham. The Dodsworth authority speaks of two periods of such attacks, one in the time of Prior Reinfrid, the other in that of Serlo, which latter witnessed the retreat to Hackness.

Hackenas.<sup>1</sup> This measure of consentaneity between the two authorities, independently of the intrinsic probability that such raids of robbers by land and robbers by sea would surely be made, renders it as nearly certain as possible that, subsequently to some such act of robbery and devastation, the community did take a temporary refuge, and of course at Hackness, the seat of the ancient cell of the Whitby Monastery. And it surely is not impossible, perhaps not even altogether unlikely, that, in their absence, such a sub-grant as that specified in the Domesday notice, and not in the least necessarily interfering with the bona fide and still valid original grant of the ancient abbey church, with its site and appurtenances,<sup>2</sup> may have actually been conceded, on such considerations as those stated a little above, or on others together with them, to the man who was, it may be, already Abbot-designate of York.

Up to the time of the Conqueror's decease, and taking our information from the Memorial, from Earl Hugh's charter, from <sup>1</sup> I would draw attention here to the discrepancy between the statement in the narrative last referred to and the real facts of the case touching the church of the cell or "monasterium" of Hackness:—"Qua de causa," says this writer, "Serlo Prior et Monachi de Whitby ostenderunt Willelmo de Percy calamitatem suam at miseriam, et petierunt illum ut daret eis locum manendi apud Hackenas. Dedit eis ecclesiam Sanctæ Mariæ de Hackenas ut ibi construerent monasterium, quia in eadem villa S. Hilda Abbatissa monasterium construxerat." Not only, however, does the memorialist expressly state that Prior Reinfrid's body was buried at Hackenas—"in cimiterio S. Petri in medio parietis contra altare," and specify "ecclesiam S. Petri ubi monachi nostri Deo servierunt, obierunt et sepulti sunt," but the Conqueror's confirmation secures to the said monks ecclesiam S. Petri de Hakenessa coterminously with the gift of the two carucates of Royal demesne there, and the two additional carucates at Northfeld.

<sup>2</sup> That the site and precincts of the ancient abbey once given to Reinfrid were ever alienated from any of his successors, or that such an attempt was made, it seems impossible to believe. The original grant may have included, and most likely did include, besides the said site, precincts and buildings or ruins thereupon, a certain amount of territory—adjacens is not an infrequent word in deeds of gift used in description of the land which appertained to the church, or what not, given—and this adjoining territory would be distinctly church land, and would remain such as effectually as the site, precincts, etc. The grant to the Abbot of York might still be easily furnished forth out of lands in Soureby which were not church lands.

King William's confirmations, the possessions of the nascent monastery, so far as we have any certainty, may be thus stated :—The ancient monastery with its site, ruined oratories, the church of St. Peter, and two carucates of land in Prestebi, together with all things which appertained to the said church of St. Peter ; the church of Midelsburg, with all its tithes, “ Francigenis et Anglicis ;” the church of St. Peter at Hackness, certain carucates of land in the same vill, the number not quite certain, of William de Perci's fee, two other carucates, in the same place, of the Royal demesnes, together with other carucates in Nordfeld, and two more in Burniston springing from the same source, with all their various appurtenances, besides the rights of sac and soke, and immunity from Danegeld ; certain forests and forest rights within their own peculiar limits ; the port of Whitby with its various rights ; and also, besides all the various ecclesiastical liberties and immunities like to those possessed by the three great religious foundations of Beverley, Ripon and St. Peter's at York, the fullest rights, liberties, free customs and immunities which the Royal power could bestow in other matters.

Moreover, the mention made in William's charter touching the lands, forests and woodland beasts (“ silvestribus bestiis”) “ intra terminos suos,” and of the “ aquæ eorum in Portu de Wyteby,” lends some tangible significance to the statement made by the Memorialist, that William de Perci, when the number of the monks continued to increase at Whitby, and his brother Serlo had been made a monk there (“ ibi monachus fuisset effectus”), gave them “ villas, terras, ecclesias et decimas in perp. elemosinam.” The fact is so likely in itself, that, uncertain as we are what were the then limits of the lands and other possessions of the monastery, it is quite impossible to treat the statement in question as a mere rhetorical effusion on the part of the writer.

III. And now we come to “ statement, as it stands and is meant to imply, about the wish of William de Percy to take away all the lands and vills which he had previously given to Whitby, from his brother Serlo,” and about the trustworthiness and accuracy of which strong doubts were expressed at a former page.

That Reinfrid died Prior I think there can be no reasonable doubt whatever; that Serlo de Percy joined the Whitby community as a monk during Reinfrid's rule (the donation just named being then made), seems to me equally little a matter of doubt; and that on Reinfrid's death Serlo de Percy succeeded to the Priorate can scarcely be questioned. Nor can any great space of time be allowed for the effecting of the said successions, as Serlo's name appears in both confirmations by the Conqueror. But this fact testifies not only in some measure as to the date at which Serlo must have become Prior, it speaks also in intelligible terms as to the weight and influence already attaching to the Monastery and its acknowledged head, independently of that belonging to the Founder, which no doubt would also be employed in procuring such confirmations and grants. Nor is it only thus that we are enabled to recognise the growing importance of the Whitby Foundation and its Superior, for we have other pregnant proofs of the same in important donations made to the Monastery, and Serlo as its Prior, by men of consideration and importance. Such specially was the gift by Uchtred de Alverstain, filius Gospatric (No. 108), of two carucates of land in Chaitun (Cayton), one of the witnesses to whose charter is Serlo himself;<sup>1</sup> and, to specify but one other instance, that of Aaliza de Percy (niece of the Founder and of Serlo) and her first husband, Hugo de Boitorp.

Now, reference has been made at a former page to the distinct statement of the Memorialist, that Serlo de Percy continued in the office of Prior until William de Percy, nephew of the Founder, was created Abbot, and to the possibility that this transaction—regarded in the light of supersession of the uncle in favour of the nephew—might perhaps afford some measure of explanation as to the alleged variance between William de Percy the Founder and his brother, Prior Serlo.

That such supersession did actually take place I think there can be but little doubt. There is a charter by Nigel de Albini (No. 261), the date of which lies between 1108-1114, by which the grantor restores ("reddidit")<sup>1</sup> to God and the Church of All Saints in Fishergate at York, a certain half carucate of land at Thorp, with the explicit direction that Serlo the Prior and the other monks of that same place ("Serlo Prior et alii monachi ejusdem loci") should have and hold the same. And it is to be remarked that while Whitby is not so much as named, or even alluded to, in the terms employed, the Church of All Saints, which it will be remembered had been granted by Rufus for the establishment of a cell there, is both named and described with more than the usual precision:—"Deo et ecclesiæ Omnium Sanctorum . . . scilicet ecclesiæ quæ est in Fisergate apud Eboracum." There can therefore be no doubt at all as to the position Prior Serlo held at the time of this grant. The phrase "et alii monachi ejusdem loci" can be understood but in one way. Serlo had ceased to be Prior of Whitby,<sup>2</sup> and had become simply Prior of the Cell at the Church of All Saints in York.<sup>3</sup>

Now, such a change as this could have occurred but in one of two ways—either by consent of Serlo, or against his will, and as the result of influence brought to bear upon him of such a nature, whether moral or compulsory, that he was unable to resist it. In the latter case, the fact of the variance,

<sup>3</sup> In close connection with this conclusion it is not out of place to remark that at a subsequent period in the history of the Abbey, in fact not fifty years later, a precisely similar retirement took place. When Abbot Benedict resigned in 1148, we are told that the said Benedict, with the unanimous consent of the chapter of monks, took up his permanent abode at All Saints' Cell—"permansit in ecclesia Omn. Sanctorum in Fishergate apud Eboracum" (No. 3).

its nature and its probable acerbity—which would certainly not be diminished by the recollection that he and his Monastery had become so far important and influential—must all be admitted; in the former, when we take into consideration the strangely loose and inaccurate way—not to say the reckless and mythical, or the intentionally incorrect and mendacious way—in which the writers of such narratives as that of the alleged Stephen and of the Dodsworth memoranda, and even some of the later monastic scribes,<sup>1</sup> put their so-called history together, there is no difficulty in accounting for such tales as those which convey to us all the information we possess as to variance between Serlo and his brother, and particularly as to the desire and attempt of the latter to take back all his former gifts to the Monastery. On the whole, I entertain little doubt that William de Percy did, for some reason or other, press, or perhaps force, upon his brother the resignation of the headship of the Whitby Monastery; and that the pressure so applied was applied at the time he had made, and been enabled to carry out, his plans for the erection of an Abbey in place of the hitherto existing Priorate.

As to the time when this change was finally carried out, although there are no precise dates available to us, still I think there are facts and considerations such that a safe inference may be founded upon them ; and also perhaps a further inference as to a part, at least, of the considerations by which the Royal consent to such a change was induced.

In a note on a previous page it was observed that it seemed much more than simply apparent that there were at least two periods at which donations to the rising Abbey were made by the Founder,—the first on or about the date of Reinfrid's arrival and commenced work at Whitby, which may without violence be held to include the much more than only possible augmentations conceded on occasion of his brother's admission into the number of the monks ; the second, that which is marked by the still extant charter in which his wife, his heir, and two other sons are named as "concessores" together with himself, as well as acting as witnesses to his grant. That this charter was granted after the commencement of the reign of the second William, is patent from the fact that he is named in it as reigning at the time ; but at what particular period in that reign there is nothing in the charter itself positively to indicate. Nevertheless, it would almost seem possible to infer the probable date, at least approximately, from some considerations suggested partly by historical fact, and partly by the wording of the charter. The Founder, it is known—at least the statement to that effect is not disputed—took part in the Crusade of 1096 ; and, according to the Memorialist, died on the march to Jerusalem at a place called "Mons Gaudium," within what he calls "the province of Jerusalem." This would be, of course, after the rendezvous at Constantinople in 1097, but how long after there is no means of knowing, nor is it material. What there is that it is to our purpose to remark is, that William de Perci's last and enlarged grant must have been made before he set out to join the crusading host, and most likely before he began to make his final preparations for so formidable an expedition. Indeed, no more plausible suggestion can well be made than that the resolution to take part in the crusade, and the resolution to erect an Abbey at Whitby in place of a Priory, and endow it with accordant liberality, may have been, probably were, cotemporaneous, or, at all events, due to the same religious impulse. And there are certainly features in the charter which seem to bespeak the presence of more than usual earnestness and solemnity in the grantor's mind and intention. The Archbishop himself, besides the Founder's wife, his heir, also two more of his sons (Walter, the second, and William, the canon), his near kinsman, Ernald the founder of the Kildale family, Gilbert fitz Adelard (witness to the Earl of Chester's charter), are all present, and all—at least all the members of the family named, and especially the Primate in his ecclesiastical capacity—formally joining with himself in the grant, concession, and confirmation of the lordly gift:—"Huic dono affuerunt testes et concessores Thomas Archiepiscopus Ebor', Emma de Port uxor mea, Alanus, Walterus, Willelmus, filii mei," etc. Surely no occasion can be imagined more suited to call forth such unusual manifestation, on the part of a great benefactor, of an earnest solicitude that his grants should have every possible sanction, and especially on the part of those most nearly concerned in the lands and possessions proposed to be, and now actually and formally, alienated, than one on which the said benefactor stood on the verge of an enterprise in which, advanced in years as he already was, he was about to expose himself to all the perils of travel and hardship, sickness and warfare, and from which, humanly speaking, the chances of his return in safety could scarcely, in any sense, be considered hopeful.<sup>1</sup>

But there is still another point in the charter to which attention should be given—I mean the terms in which the object for which the old grants are confirmed, and so largely augmented by new—namely, "ad fundandam Abbatiam olim destructam"—for the refounding of the Abbacy long ago destroyed. The fact being that, unquestionably within the four years next succeeding our supposed date, the Priory was exchanged for an Abbacy, the language here employed appears to be significant;<sup>1</sup> and the circumstance that the grant is made to Prior Serlo, and the monks serving God at Whitby, makes it in so far more probable that the measures which were already taken, or were to be taken in the close sequel, for raising the House to a higher dignity, were designed and carried out with the existing Prior's full concurrence. Probably, too, the appointment of the first Abbot would follow at no very remote date after the execution of the charter and the formal completion of its purpose.

At least this much is certain, that William de Percy had been created Abbot antecedently to the year 1100,<sup>2</sup> and among the charters printed in the text is one by Henry I. (No. 190) addressed to Archbishop Thomas of York, Osbert the Sheriff, Nigel de Albini, and Aschetil de Bulmer, which contains the following remarkable clause:—"Sciatis quod Willelmus, Abbas de Wyteby, et monachi illius loci dederunt michi in forestis suis omnes cervos et cervas et porcos, et ego illos forestavi michi et hæredibus meis." That this gift or concession had been made in the guise of a quid pro quo I suppose must be regarded as an absolute certainty. It is of course possible that it was in return for it that the King grants the full confirmation which the remaining part of the charter conveys. But with the great accumulation of benefactions which had recently flowed in upon the Whitby House from the various branches of the Perci family and their connections (not to mention other benefactors), it is hardly reasonable to suppose that there could have been any difficulty about the customary money acknowledgment for such a concession on the part of the reigning King; and besides, the disproportion between the concession made by the Abbot and monks to the King, and the King's concession to them, is far too great to make the suggested hypothesis even moderately plausible. But it would seem to be otherwise with the supposition that possibly this sacrifice of rights, so highly prized as were the forest-rights which were surrendered to Henry, may have been made conditionally on the erection of an Abbey in place of what before had been only a Priory. It will be remarked too that Henry's charter is an ex post facto one—"et ego illos forestavi michi et hæredibus meis." Not only has the concession been made by the monks, but the King has already acted upon it, by taking all the formal proceedings necessary towards constituting the forests in question a part of the Royal forests—proceedings which were not reversed, it may be observed, until the reign of John, when the reversal was effected by another special charter (No. 191).

Whether the suggestion thus made involves or implies the explanation of the remarkable surrender by the Convent of all its extensive and important forest-rights to the King or not, must be a matter left to the consideration and judgment of such as read these remarks and look upon them as worth entertaining; but there is yet another matter for notice, not entirely unconnected, and already glanced at,<sup>1</sup> which may as well be mooted here. I mean that in the existing documents we have many tokens of rearrangement of fees or of portions of fees, some dependent on a change in the tenant in capite, others on possible exchange or sale, or, it may be, even on an entirely new grant.

Thus it is quite evident that, at the date of the charter by William de Perci, to which not only his wife, Emma de Port, but specially his son and heir, Alan de Perci, is a party, William de Perci himself, as is the case with his son Alan quite early in Henry's reign, has become tenant in capite, although we have no hint as to the time or the manner in which he had become so, or as to any consideration or compensation made to Earl Hugh on that account. But independently of this, which could only have been brought about by the direct consent and co-operation of the King, we find in the same charter evidences of further change, involving similar royal action of even a more direct kind still. In the extract from Domesday given above we have a notice of the manor of

Walesgrif, with the Berewic of Nordfeld, as a part of the Terra Regis, and, appertaining thereto, soke of Tornelai; Sudfeld and Everlaye being mentioned as in William de Percy's fee at Hackness, either as parts or appurtenances. But the charter under note, after detailing the grants and donations made at and near Whitby, and also of Hackness and the two churches there, goes on in immediate connection to specify as follows :—" Et Norfeld et Sudfelt, Everlaye et Brokesaye et Tornelaye cum omnibus ad easdem villas pertinentibus." It is to be presumed, therefore, that in the rearrangement, as it was just now termed, of fees or portions of fees, which must have taken place after the date of Domesday, and probably in the earlier years of the second William's reign, the King had over and above, or independently of, his own royal gift of two carucates in Hackness, four carucates in Nordfeld, and two in Burniston, made over to William de Percy, to be for the future appurtenant to his manor of Hackness, all rights whatever involved in the soke of these geographical portions of that place; and I think there can be but little doubt that such surrender was made with the distinct object of enabling William de Percy formally to make good the Abbey's title to the whole district embraced within the limits of what is now called the Parish of Hackness.<sup>1</sup>

It is scarcely necessary to follow this inquiry much further. From the time Alan de Percy begins to grant charters on his own sole account, and Royal charter succeeds Royal charter, the early history of the restored Abbey, though the materials are meagre, becomes fairly free from the doubts and uncertainties consequent on such inconsistencies and contradictions as these we have had to deal with. Grants, donations and concessions flowed in rapidly and from many different sources during the reign of Henry I., and I think especially during the early part of it, and possibly the later years of William the Second's; and copies of many of the charters conveying such grants and concessions are yet extant, attempts at illustration of which in respect of probable approximate date, noteworthy particulars in the biography of the grantors, features of interest or curiosity involved in them, and the like, have been made in the notes, in the sequence in which they are inserted.

On the whole, I read the history of the renascent Monastery somewhat in this way. At or near the date alleged—some definite but not very long time before 1078—Reinfrid came to Whitby, and before long succeeded in collecting a body of would-be Religious, having already, it may be, ascertained the willingness, or more than willingness, of William de Percy to sanction his undertaking and to further his objects by leave and licence to occupy the site of the ancient Monastery, if not by a formal concession of the said site, its remains and appurtenances. But the concession, if it was not made at first, speedily ensued, and a settlement, having at least more or less of regular monastic form and order, was effected before the year 1080. Reinfrid continued to act as superior of this monastic settlement under the title of Prior for, at all events, some few years; and under his Priorate certain accessions were made to the lands and church already assigned to them, notably the church or chapel of Middlesbrough and its tithes, the latter payable out of a considerable district, and especially the Church of St. Peter at Hackness, or, in other words, that attached to the old monastic cell, which in old days had been a dependency or appurtenance of the Whitby Monastery, and together with this, two or more carucates of land in the same vill. During the incumbency of Reinfrid, there is little or no doubt that Stephen, the future Abbot of St. Mary's at York, joined the community or brotherhood, and being a man of some importance and considerable capacity, conceived himself, and was conceived also by a not insignificant party among the brethren, a suitable successor to Reinfrid when the career of the latter was cut short by his accidental death at Ormesbridge. The Percy family, however, preferred that one of themselves should be promoted to the vacant post, and probably in irritation or resentment at this—possibly even under the impulses of ambition—Stephen seceded from Whitby, and, making a temporary halt at Lestingham, eventually, and indeed only a short time afterwards, became Abbot of York, and perhaps as a sort of peace-offering had a grant, as such, of certain territory at Whitby, which, however, was such as not to interfere with the church lands already granted in free alms to Whitby, Serlo de Percy having become Prior in the room of Reinfrid. Further concessions of property were obtained for the Convent, just as some additions had been made when he took upon himself the monkish profession, and the renascent Monastery and its head became invested—notwithstanding certain temporary checks sustained, at probably an early period of Serlo's presidency, under the attacks of one or more bodies of marauders, which compelled a temporary retreat to the Hackness Cell—with considerable influence and prestige. And it was when this was so that William de Percy the Founder, animated by the same religious fervour which sent him forth as a crusader to meet his fate in the Holy Land, conceived the idea, in its practical form, of elevating what had been hitherto merely a somewhat unimportant Priory into a well-endowed and influential Abbey; and his own grants and donations being largely supplemented by others from various members of his family, and from a number of his "homines" or sub-infeudatories, the proposed change was effected, and William de Percy, nephew of the Founder and of Prior Serlo, was advanced to be the first Abbot. It is quite possible that this was brought about rather by the forcible supersession than in virtue of the voluntary resignation of Prior Serlo, who, it is certain, retired to the Cell at All Saints, York, and continued to be Prior there for several years after the constitution of the Abbey at Whitby. But whether he ceased to be Prior by supersession or by resignation, a foundation might easily be found in the fact of his ceasing to be Prior just when his nephew was advanced to be Abbot for the stories compiled by writers, living probably some generations afterwards, about the variance between the brothers William and Serlo, and the persecution the latter was supposed to have undergone at the hands of his powerful, and, as alleged, unscrupulous brother,—a man whose last recorded action is, notwithstanding, a munificent deed of gift to the self-same persecuted Prior and his monks.

As to the following list of the Superiors of the House of Whitby, it should be observed that the dates of appointment in the first column are those given by Burton,<sup>1</sup> and that it is by no means clear in several cases whether they are the dates of election, induction, or installation; and that the dates of vacation in the last column are those given by Young,<sup>1</sup> it being a matter of great uncertainty whether they are in any respect really independent of those given in the Monasticon. The intermediate column of dates of occurrence are principally from one or other of the two chartularies themselves, a few only being from public documents.

* No date of appointment is, in this case, given by Burton. He merely states that Abbot Peter “occurs in 1192, and in 1200,” adding further that he “also occurs in the 1st of Pope Celestine 3d’s, who reigned from 1191 to 1198.”

† Young’s date here is manifestly wrong. His words are—“Thomas de Haukesgarth, a monk of Whitby, who, like his predecessor, resigned in his old age, in 1352.” The document, No. 474, dated in 1355, at once discloses the error. From an entry in Archbishop Thoresby’s Register, dated 23d March 1374 (printed in the Appendix), it appears that Thomas de Haukesgarth was still living at that date, and abiding at Selby Abbey.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE TO THE READER.

IN editing the present book it was possible to proceed on one of two, or even three, different principles or plans. In the Whitby copy no order of time whatever is observed by the old transcribers, and, as noted in the Preface, order of locality or place is only partially regarded. Order of place is more carefully attended to in the Museum copy, but still by no means without noteworthy or extensive exceptions. Order of subject, again, is not too carefully regarded in either copy. Royal confirmations are by no means all brought together, neither are Archiepiscopal or Papal confirmations. Even the charters by the various members of the Percy family are scattered about in various parts of the collection. An entire rearrangement of all the charters and other documents according to date was, in the case of a series, the majority of which could only be inferentially or approximately dated, obviously so arduous an undertaking as to be practically impossible.<sup>1</sup> An entire rearrangement, on the principle of grouping together all the documents connected with the several different localities concerned, would have amounted, in its execution, to the de facto breaking up of both copies into a series of fragments, and reuniting them with an arbitrary tie, with the result of destroying the identity of either copy. Rearrangement on the principle of juxtaposition of documents of like character seemed open, on the same grounds, to a similar objection. The Editor, therefore, after mature deliberation, deemed it best to print the Whitby copy as it stands, following it up with the additional documents obtained from the Museum copy in due sequence, and with those obtained from other sources next in succession, numbering them all in order, and by aid of these numbers in every case referring the reader to those documents which in any way belonged to the same group. And, on the whole, it is hoped that this mode will be found on experience to have all the advantages of either of the others adverted to above, so far as feasible, without the corresponding drawbacks or disadvantages.

I. MEMORIAL OF FOUNDATION AND OF THE EARLIER BENEFACTIONS.

(138<sup>a</sup>) Notum sit omnibus Deo et Sanctæ Hildæ Abbatissæ servantibus in loco qui olim Streoneshale vocabatur, deinde Prestebi appellabatur, nunc vero Witebi vocatur, quod Willielmus de Perci, cognomento Asgernuns, tempore Willielmi Bastard (nothi), Regis Anglorum, ibi fundaverit monasterium in honore Sancti Petri Apostoli et Sanctæ Hildæ Abbatissæ, atque Reinfrido, monacho de Evesham, cum sociis suis quos sibi adquisiverat, ipsum locum commendaverit; et primo, duas caruchatas terræ in Prestebi illi tradidit; deinde, crescente numero monachorum, cum Serlo de Perci, frater prædicti Willielmi de Perci, ibi monachus fuisset effectus, villas, terras, ecclesias, et decimas eis in perpetuam elemosinam dedit, concedentibus et confirmantibus nobilissima Emma de Port, uxore ejus, cum Alano de Perci, filio eorum. Nam prædictus Reinfridus, cum esset miles strenuissimus in obsequio domini sui Willielmi Bastard (nothi), Regis Anglorum, cum per provinciam Northanymbrorum transiret, divertit ad præfatum locum Streoneshale. Cum vero cognovisset quod sanctus ille locus a crudelissimis piratis Ingwar et Ubba, ducibus Alanorum et Danorum, cum præfata provincia Northanymbrorum, feroci depopulatione esset devastatus; a quibus etiam rex sanctus Edmundus decollatus est; ac deinceps per ducentos, et eo amplius annos, vacabat religio monachorum et sanctimonialium in eodem loco, compunctus est corde. Deinde apud Evesham (in provincia Merciorum) monachus factus est, et monasticis disciplinis bene instructus, divino instinctu cum Aldwino Priore de Winhecumbe, et Elwino monacho, regressus est in provinciam. Northanymbrorum ad suscitandam monachicam religionem, Monastery founded by William de Percy in the time of the Conqueror under Prior Reinfrid.

Original endowment added to when Serlo de Perci was admitted a monk.

Reinfrid turns aside to visit Streoneshale which had been laid in ruin by Ingwar and Ubba, and is distressed in heart.

Became a monk at Evesham, and eventually returns into Northumbria, and comes to

W. de Percy, who gives him the ancient monastery and 2 car. of land in Prestebi. At that time there were almost 40 oratories, but roofless and in ruins. He begins a monastic settlement there, and soon gathers a number of votaries. After several years Reinfrid is accidentally killed.

His body is taken to Hackness and buried there in the burial-ground of S. Peter's. He is succeeded as Prior by Serlo de Perci, who continues in the office until his nephew William de Perci is made Abbot.

William de Percy, the founder, dies in the Holy Land, and is buried there.

venitque ad Willielmum de Perci, et ab eo honorifice susceptus est. Dedit autem illi strenuissimus prædictus Willielmus de Perci antiquum monasterium Sancti Petri Apostoli, cum duabis caruchatis terræ in Prestebi, in elemosinam perpetuam. Erant enim tunc temporis in eadem villa, ut antiqui patriotæ nobis retulerunt, monasteria vel oratoria pæne quadraginta; tantum parietes et altaria vacua et discooperta remanserant propter destructionem exercitus piratarum. Suscepto ergo Reinfridus monasterio, ad idem habitandum vel regendum cœpit regulariter conversari (139) cum sociis suis, in humilitate, patientia, paupertate, et caritate exemplum omnibus tribuens ad bene agendum, et ad Deo serviendum: ita ut, infra breve tempus, prudentissimos viros ad monachicum habitum suscipiendum socios sibi aggregaverit. Transactis igitur plurimis annorum curriculis, cum quoque causa monasterii sui iter ageret, venit ad Ormesbricge, ubi artifices faciebant pontem trans Derwentum; et desiliens equo ut illos adjuvaret, incaute lignum super ipsum cecidit, et confracto cerebro, mox extremum exalavit spiritum. Cujus corpusculum perductum est ad Hachanos, sepultumque in cimiterio Sancti Petri Apostoli in medio parietis orientalis contra altare. Post obitum vero Deo dilecti Reinfridi Prioris, Serlo frater Willielmi de Perci officium ejus suscepit, et in eo permansit donec dominus Willielmus, nepos eorum, Abbas de Witebi effectus est. Denique nobilissimus Willielmus de Perci Ierosolimam petens, apud locum qui vocatur Mons Gaudii, qui est in provincia Ierosolimitana, migravit ad Dominum, ibique honorifice sepultus est.<sup>1</sup> Itaque omnes terras, possessiones, forestas, ecclesias, decimas et libertates, quas sæpe nominatus idem Willielmus de Perci, cum Alano de Perci, filio suo, monasterio de Witebi dederat in primis, necnon in ultimis temporibus suis antequam Ierosolimam peteret, vel quique fideles monasterio nostro de Witebi dederunt vel concesserunt in elemosinam perpetuam, ad monimentum, hic breviter annotabimus:—Villam et maris Portum de Specification of all lands, tithes, etc., given by W. de Perci and his son Alan at the outset, and secondly before the departure for Jerusalem, and by other early benefactors. Vill and port of Whitby, and neighbouring vills. Hermitages, forests, six chapels, mills, vill of Hackness, two mills, the church of S. Mary there, besides the cell of S. Peter, vills of Dales, etc. Vaccaries. Tithes in Upleatham, etc. Of the gift of Emma de Port, a mansura at York, and 2 car. land. From Ric. de Percy de Dunesley, tithes in Staches-tune.

III. RESIGNATION OF ABBOT BENEDICT, AND NOTICE OF THE CIRCUMSTANCES ATTENDING THE APPOINTMENT OF HIS SUCCESSOR.

In the year 1148 Abbot Benedict resigns his office, at Beverley, in presence of Archbishop Murdac, and retires to the cell at All Saints, York. The monks consult the Archbishop as to his successor, who refuses to sanction the resignation except on condition Anno ab incarnatione Domini m<sup>o</sup>cxlviij Dominus Benedictus, Abbas Monasterii Sancti Petri Apostoli et Sanctæ Hyldæ Abbatissæ de Witebi, non ferens molestias a quibusdam suis adversariis sibi illatas, ex consensu totius Conventus, in capite jejunii, apud Beverlacum<sup>2</sup> in præsentia Domini Henrici Eboracensis Archiepiscopi, sponte officium suum refutavit. Permansit vero idem Benedictus, consensu totius capituli, in Ecclesia Omnium Sanctorum in Fischergate apud Eboracum. Deinde monachi de Witebi consilium inierunt quem sibi abbatem eligerent, veneruntque ad Archiepiscopum suum, Henricum Murdac, ut consilio et auxilio ejus fruerentur. Qui respondit eis, se non esse permissurum ut vel Abbatem eligerent vel alium præter dominum Benedictum haberent, nisi totius Conventus providentia se consilio illius committeret, et unum eligerent de tribus personis quas<sup>3</sup> eis nominaret; vide-Fratres vero Witebienses, amicorum suorum consilio corroborati, tandem Priorem Ricardum sibi in Abbatem canonice elegerunt, quia didicerant illum virum esse prudentissimum et ex nobili prosapia ortum. Miserunt autem ad Burgense monasterium Walterum Priorem suum et Dominum Martinum monachum, viros honestos qui ab adolescentia sua usque ad decrepitam ætatem omnem vitam suam in utilitatibus Monasterii sui transegerant. Susceperunt eos fratres Burgenses honorifice in die Sancti Dunstani<sup>1</sup> atque in octavis Ascensionis.<sup>2</sup> Hæ ambæ solennitates eodem anno in una die acciderunt. Vix eum Burgenses in Abbatem promoveri sinebant, ne ejus solatio privarentur. Tandem dimissus secunda die Pentecostes ab Abbate suo Martino a Conventu, honorifice cum suis, et cum duobus monachis prænominatis, apud Eboracum Stephanum Regem Angliæ adierunt; a quo benigne suscepti sunt. Cum ergo Rex audisset electionem monachorum de Witebi, et famam viri Domini Ricardi, jussu illius Abbas de Witebi effectus est, ejusque homagium suscepit. Intravit vero Dominus Ricardus Abbas Monasterium Witebiense, sibi commissum, Dominica<sup>3</sup> prima post octavas Pentecostes nonas Junii. <sup>3</sup> There is some confusion about this date. The nones of June is the fifth day of June. But in the year 1148, Easter Day fell on April 11th; Pentecost consequently would fall on May 30th, and the following Sunday on the sixth of June. Independently of this, the Octave of Whitsunday is Trinity Sunday, and the first Sunday after that in 1148 would have been the 13th, not the 5th June.

<sup>4</sup> There is no doubt at all that the preceding "Memorial," together with the Abbot's profession, and the above notice of the resignation of Abbot Benedict, the election, reign, and death of his successor, and the subsequent appointment of Abbot Richard II., are in the oldest handwriting in the Cholmley MS., or "Abbot's Book." The two documents last named are on the reverse of the leaf which contains the final part of the Memorial, and it may be a matter of question whether they are in the same hand, and of equal date. The ink employed, and the blue and red pigments used on some of the capitals, appear to be of the same, or nearly the same, consistency and quality. If anything, the ink is blacker and more glossy in the Memorial than in the other two documents under notice, though the seeming difference may only depend upon the circumstance that the writing is made larger, and the spaces between the lines much wider in the former than in the latter. On the whole, I am inclined to think that possibly a space of a few years may have intervened between the penning of the larger writing of the Memorial and that of the other two entries, as also that the latter were written very closely upon the date that is last mentioned, namely, in the year 1176. This would throw the writing of the Memorial back to about 1155 to 1165, which is probably not far from the true date.

<sup>1</sup> According to the existing paging of the Cholmley Register, or "Abbot's Book," which will hereafter be designated by the letter A—the Museum copy being likewise indicated by the letter M—the Cartulary begins here; and it may be remarked in passing that the handwriting on f 1, and the upper part of 1<sup>b</sup> is the same as that on f 8, and thenceforward with an occasional blank page or leaf, and a rare insertion or two, to the bottom of f. 71. The hand may probably be assigned to Abbot Roger's time, or 1222-1244.

<sup>2</sup> This deed is the third and last, in point of time, of three, two of which stand together in this place. The next is the first in order, and No. 19 second. The latter, as well as the present charter, is dated, and would of course be executed before this. The next deed, or No. 11, may, and probably does, antedate the other two by several years.

<sup>1</sup> Charlton is very much at sea about matters involved in this deed. At p. 97, commenting on a charter by Will. fil. Ricardi de Percy de Dunsley, in which also this word almario occurs, he says—"It does not well appear who or what this Almary was; our records mention him as a person who lived at Whitby and resided in the monastery, but in what character we cannot positively say, etc. etc." It is almost unnecessary to say that almarium is simply the Latin form of the old English word almarie (in its more modern form Aumbry, "a locker in the north chancel wall"—Hook's Church Dictionary), which is defined by Halliwell as "a cupboard, a pantry, a safe," and claimed by him as a "north-country word" in its form aumbry. He further quotes as an example—"There avarice hath Almaries, and yron-bounde coffres" (Piers the Plowman, Text B., Early E. Text Society Series, p. 249, l. 246). Besides supposing the almary to be the "chantor, or person who provided the monks with such books as were necessary for the celebration of divine service, and perhaps for their library also," Mr.

Charlton assumes the date of this deed to be about thirty years later than that of William de Percy de Dunsley aforesaid, or about 1170 according to his reckoning. The date, however, is at least thirty or forty years later than that—probably more. The widow of William Lambe, the first among the witnesses, gives certain lands to Whitby for the soul of her late husband during the incumbency of Abbot Roger (1222-1244).

t'ræ in Uglebardby<sup>5</sup> pertinentibus, quarum quatuor bovatae t'ræ sunt de dominico præd. Alani, et quinta bovata t'ræ fuit Miliipsam Milisantem<sup>6</sup> et præd. Abbatem coram Justiciariis in banco, per breve rationabilium estoveriorum in bosco prædicto.

Tandem coram Dominis Johanne de Okenton, D'ni Regis Justiciario, et Ada<sup>7</sup> de Seton milite,<sup>8</sup> et aliis fide dignis, ex consensu<sup>9</sup> partium electis, in hunc modum dictæ contraversiæ amicabiliter conquieverunt:—Ita scil. quod prædicti Abbas et Conv. concesserunt præd. Alano et hæ. suis rationabilia esto-construendum, si voluerint, sine vasto, dono et venditione. Et pro hac concessione præd. Alanus concessit pro se et hæ. suis, et in totum remisit omnimoda estoveria bosci ad Bondos suos, Cottarios, et Gresmannos<sup>14</sup> pertinentia.<sup>15</sup> Ita quod nec ipse nec

hæ. sui, nec aliquis ex parte sua, aliquid in præd. bosco de

<sup>2</sup> This is almost certainly Ric. de Perci de Dunsley, who is named together with Will. de Rosels, miles, and Alan de Everley, witnesses to a quitclaim by Will. de Everley, filius Will. de Everley de Ugelbardby, of all rights, etc., to whatever lands he had in Eschedale and Yburne, with the exception of common rights, etc. [No. 455.]

<sup>3</sup> There is a William de Everle who has grant of Everley between 1177 and 1189; a second who lives before and during Abbot Roger's time, 1222-1244; a third and a fourth, both of whom, father and son, are living in 1311, the younger of whom is still living in 1320. This is probably, if not certainly, Will. de Everley, the father in No. 20.

inde projectas, ac arbores et subboscum prædictos, necnon alia bona et catalla sua, ad valentiam viginti librarum ibidem inventa, ceperunt et asportaverunt, et blada et herbam sua, et gramina bosci sui cedui, ad valentiam decem librarum ibidem nuper crescentia cum quibusdam averiis depasti fuerunt, conculcaverunt et consumpserunt, et alia enormia ei intulerunt ad grave dampnum ipsius Abbatis et contra pacem Regis, etc.

Jurati dicunt, super sacramentum suum, quod prædictus Willelmus Brok, Radulfus Jopson et Johannes Jopson, quoad omnes transgressus infra contentos, præter de asportatione bonorum et catallorum præd. Abbatis per se, sunt culpabiles ad dampnum ipsius Abbatis novem librarum; quoad ipsos Willelmum Brok, Radulfum et Johannem Jopson, et quoad asportationem bonorum et catallorum ejusdem Abbatis, dicunt quod ipsi in nullo sunt culpabiles. Dicunt etiam [i]idem Juratores super sacramentum suum, quod prædicti Rogerus Brok, Rogerus Chapman, Johannes Chapman, Johannes Peche, Laurentius et Johannes del'Grene, Johannes Halman, et Willelmus Alkys sunt culpabiles per se de pastu bladorum et graminum bosci cedui prædicti Abbatis, unde infra placitaverunt ad primam.<sup>1</sup> Et quoad de pastu eorundem bladorum et graminum bosci, et de pastu herbæ prædicti Abbatis in clausis et clausturis ejusdem Abbatis tempore confectionis scripti relaxationis de quo infra fit mentio factis, unde per judicium<sup>2</sup> convicti sunt prout patet infra, assident dampnum ipsius Abbatis penes eos per se ad viginti et tres libras. Dicunt etiam iidem Juratores super sacramentum suum, quod prædicti Rogerus Brok, Rogerus Chapman, Johannes Chapman, Adam [Milner], Johannes Peche, Laurentius [et] Johannes del Grene, Johannes Halman et Willelmus Alkys, quoad asportationem bonorum et catallorum præd. Abbatis, in nullo sunt culpabiles. Ideo concessum est quod præd. Abbas recuperet versus prædictos Willelmum Brok, Radulfum Jopson et Willelmum Jopson dampna<sup>3</sup> sua prædicta versus eos, occasione transgressionum prædictarum per se factarum ad novem libras assessa. Et similiter versus prædictos Rogerum Brok et

Rogerum Chapman, Johannem Chapman, Adam, Johannem Peche, Laurentium [et] Johannem del Grene, Johannem Halman, Willelmum Alkys, dampnum<sup>1</sup> sua prædicta ad viginti et tres libras versus eos per se assessa occasione<sup>2</sup> transgressionum. Unde ipsi per se per juramentum patriæ<sup>3</sup> et per judicium convicti sunt. Et prædicti Willelmus Brok, et omnes prænominati, capiantur, etc. Et similiter præd. Abbas in misericordia pro . . . <sup>4</sup> clameo suo quoad residuum transgressionis prædictæ. Unde prædictus Willelmus Brok et omnes alii acquietati sunt et ipsi eant inde sine die, etc. Postea, scilicet in octavis Purificationis Beatæ Mariæ, anno regnorum Domini Regis (7) nunc octavo, venit præd. Abbas per attornatum suum præd. et dicit quod satisfactum est ei de dampnis prædictis. Ideo prædicti Willielmus Brok, et omnes alii eant inde sine die, etc. Et quia transgressio prædicta facta fuit diu ante Statutum de pardonatione hujusmodi transgressionum factum in Parlamento Domini Regis nunc, ideo prædicti Willelmus Brok et omnes alii prænominati eant inde quieti absque fine cum Domino Rege occasione<sup>5</sup> transgressionum prædictarum. <sup>1</sup> The necessary conclusion from this phrase is that the granter of this charter, William de Percy, son of Alan, and grandson of William the Founder, executed it during the reign of Henry I., that is, in other words, before 1135 ; an inference which is materially confirmed by the fact that his cousin founded the convent, Gredale or Handale, in the year 1133.

<sup>1</sup> Charlton has made several mistakes in reading the names of these witnesses, as will appear in noting his "Ernald, Priest of Tendscre" (which, in a note, he says, "is most probably Stainsecre") with the true reading, and again in his "Daniel; Dewine" for Baldewine; "Richard, son of Blacher," for Richer, son etc.; and "Ranfrid," for Gaufrid or Geoffrey.

Several of the aforesaid witnesses number among the "homines," or subfeudatories of William de Percy, the grantor of this charter, as will be seen from the following extract:—

It is not simply that, in this document, we recognise the names of some of the witnesses to the present charter, or of different benefactors of the Abbey of Whitby, but that while the charter, as granted by William de Percy II., helps us to date the document as being certainly due to the latter part of Henry's reign, the document in return tends rather to confirm the inference already made that the charter itself dates between 1132 and 1135.

quam præsentibus, quod ego, Alanus de Perci,<sup>2</sup> concessi et Perci con-confirmavi Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hildæ de Wýteby<sup>3</sup> et firms to Monachis ibidem Deo serv., in elem. perp., villas quas Tancar- Whitby the dus<sup>4</sup> Flandrensis vendidit Willelmo, Abbati de Wýteby, et vills of Monachis illius loci; videl. Figelingam<sup>5</sup> et aliam Figelingam, Fyling, Normanby, and
garth,

ex dono Ernaldi de Perci." Under date 1121, Sym. Dunelm. Hist. Contin. (S.S.), p. 115, we read—"Hæc querimonia, facta Eboraci, media ferme Quadregesima, replicatur paulo post in ebdomada Paschali, feria iv. idus Aprilis, Dunelmi, coram magno conventu principalium virorum, qui tunc forte propter negotia quædam illuc confluerunt, scil. Rodbertus de Brys, Alanus de Perceio, Walterus Espec, Forno fil' Ligulfi, Robertus de Witvila, Odard Vicecomes Northymbrensiū, cum majoribus ejusdem Comitatus, aliique quamplures. Coram horum frequentia cum suas Monachi depromerent querelas, ecce, Harnoldus de Perceio, vir genere et divitiis notus, et in veritate asserenda constans, exurgens, in testimonium veritatis affirmabat coram omnibus, etc." This testimony to the importance of the position held by Ernald de Perci, and the estimation in which he was held, is worthy of note, as also is the fact that though undoubtedly a connection of the great Percies who founded and endowed Whitby—his name frequently appears as that of a witness to important documents executed by them—yet he is, unlike Pichot de Percy and his descendants, not a subfeudatory of theirs, but of the Brus family. There is little or no doubt that, at the date of the foundation of Gysburne, and probably for several years anterior to it, he was, and had been, lord of the Kildale fee, and no doubt at all that he was the founder of the Kildale family. The charters, executed by himself, his sons, and other lineal descendants, copies of which are contained in the Gysburne Chartulary, prove this to demonstration, and effectually dispose of the frequently repeated, but utterly groundless, so-called genealogical statements which attempt to derive the Kildale Percies from the Whitby stock, through Walter, son of Alan, and grandson of William hote les Gernuns, the founder of Whitby.

Thus it would appear that the Th was pronounced as T simply—as it is to this day by the few remaining speakers of the old dialect, as in “t’rone” for “throne,” “Slac-tr’on” for “Sloe-thorn,” etc.; and also that the second syllable in Tordisa, or Thordeisa, was long, a matter by no means without importance in any attempt to settle the derivation of the name. It may be further observed that most of these places and meres may still be clearly identified, many of them being still known by modern forms, but slightly altered by time and wear. Thus Blawick is Bleawyke (Ordnance Map, 1 in. xcv.

Thorphin de Alverstain, with

N.W.), Grededik is Greendyke, Swinestischage is the Druidical Circle, Thornlay is Thirley (in Thirley Cotes), Kirkelac is Kirkless, Coppekeldbroc is lost, but the site is probably indicated by the name, as the highest source of the modern Lindhead brook, the "cilium" is strongly marked, and Theofesdikes remains as Thieves' Dikes. Staincrossegate was probably not very far from Prospect House, near Suffield village, which remains in situ. Greta head would, it is likely, be close to Mowthorp, and then the Derwent is reached. Following the course of the stream, we reach a point at its source scarcely a mile from Lilla Cross, whence the boundary of Whitby Liberty is easily traced to Silhone, and although Scograineshoues are not found now, yet the line passes through a series of "houes" before it reaches Silhone, and these probably are grouped together in these old boundary tracings as Scograineshoues. Once Lithebeck or the Mirk Esk is reached, there is no trouble in tracing out the rest of the meres which are named in the text.

1111, or earlier. On this supposition Cospatric, Uchtred's father, would be the son of Cospatric Comes. On the calculation of 30 years to a generation, we can only suppose that our Cospatric was the Earl himself. It would be, however, almost certain that, as Cospatric the second Earl had a son Uchtred, the former calculation must be the one to be approved, were it not that the grantor speaks of having harassed the monks in the matter of the church in question, which of course compels the conclusion that he was now more than only just of age.

<sup>1</sup> In No. 261 Will. de Romario is named by Nigellus de Albini as "dominus suus et amicus." Dugdale says of him that in 1118 he was governor of the garrison of Newmarch in Normandy, but that in 1122 he was in rebellion, but was reconciled to the king two years afterwards. He founded the Abbey of Revesby in 1142.

The latter is a principal in a matter specified in No. 320, which is dated in 1268. The present charter probably dates between 1220-1240.

<sup>4</sup> Bartholomew was Archdeacon of Richmond at an early period, but the date of his appointment has not been ascertained. (Le Neve, iii. 130.)

<sup>5</sup> There is much uncertainty about this personage, as to the dates of his appointment and resignation. From a charter in the Gisburne Chartulary (Cleop. D. ii. f. 115<sup>b</sup>), it appears that Cuthbert and Roald (or Radulphus), who succeeded him as Prior, were brothers. The same relationship is also stated in a charter on f. 194 of the same volume. Further, it may be advanced on the authority of a third charter (f. 250) that Cuthbert had resigned, and Radulf been appointed in his place, before 1181, inasmuch as, in that deed (a confirmation by Archbishop Roger, who died in 1181), Radulphus is recognised as being Prior. In No. 199 below, Cuthbert is named as being Prior during the archiepiscopate of Henry Murdac (1147-1153), and by Burton, his predecessor, Ranulf, is alleged to have been Prior in 1146<sup>o</sup> (p. 355, note). His incumbency, according to these figures, must have lasted at least thirty years, and probably more.

SUPER EADEM.

Bernard, Bishop of Carlisle, confirms to Whitby,
"in pro-prios usus," the church of Crossby Ravensworth, on vacation by
parson.

Omnibus S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, Bernardus, D. G. Karleolensis Episcopus, Salutem. Noverit universitas vestra nos, divini amoris intuitu, dedisse et concessisse, et in usus proprios confirmasse Deo et Eccl. S. Petri et S. Hýldæ de Wýtebý, et Monachis<sup>3</sup> ibid. Deo serv. ecclesiam de Crossebý Ravenswart, cum omn. pert. suis, in p. et perp. elemosinam: ita quod post decessum, vel cessionem, vel status mutationem Odonis Personæ, liceat eisdem eandem eccl. intrare, et claves ejusdem

<sup>2</sup> Appointed 1203-?1219. Le Neve (iii. 230) says, "Bernard, according to Godwin, succeeded Aldulf as Bishop of Carlisle, but neither the time of his accession nor that of his death is known. Godwin supposes that he died in 1186, as Hoveden states that when Henry II. was at Carlisle in that year, 'he caused one Paul of Leeds to be elected Bishop of Carlisle, who declined the dignity.' The late Mr. King (Handbook of the Cathedrals, p. 220) says Adelulf was bishop 1133-1156, and that, "after the death of Adelulf the succession of Bishops becomes very uncertain. A certain William is named as Bishop of Carlisle in 1174, and for some time the see was vacant, probably owing to its scanty endowment, until 1203, when Bernard, who had been Archbishop of Ragusa, was appointed to it. The year of his death is unknown. In 1219 Hugh, who had been Abbot of Beaulieu, was Bishop, who continued till 1223."

Le Neve, in a note, adds, "There is considerable doubt whether there ever was a Bishop called Bernard. The mistake seems to have arisen from the fact that Bernard, Archbishop of Slavonia, had a grant of the revenues from King John;" and in the text he says, "The See appears to have been vacant until the appointment of Hugh, Abbot of Beaulieu, as Bishop of Carlisle in 1218. But, during the long vacancy, King John granted the revenues of the See to the Archbishop of Slavonia in 1200, and in 1205 to Alexander de Lucy. The custody of the See was also granted to Aymery, Archdeacon of Durham, and afterwards, in the same year, to the Prior of Carlisle." But, from the documents now before us, there can but little doubt be left that there was a Bishop Bernard fulfilling episcopal duties. The date of the present deed, from the facts as to time connected with the witness who stands second in order (Symon, Dean of York), must be anterior to 1214.

<sup>5</sup> "About 1211." (Mon. Ebor.) He was "quondam Prior" 1219-1223, and hence must have resigned his Priorate shortly after the date of the present document. He resigned the chapel of Hartlepool, assigned to him for his support as ex-prior, c. 1238. (Archbishop Gray's Register, S. S., p. 81.)

<sup>8</sup> Charlton's commentary on this document and its predecessor is as follows:—"In the year 1211 died Peter, Abbot of Whitby, and the kingdom of England being then under an interdict laid thereon by Pope Innocent III. on account of some disputes he had with King John about appointing Stephen Langton to be Archbishop of Canterbury, that king seized on our Abbey revenues, and sequestered all its possessions into his own hands, not suffering the Chapter to proceed to the election of a new Abbot. Furthermore, Odo, parson of Crosseby Ravensworth, being old, and in so bad a state of health that no hopes were left of his recovery, the monks of Whitby, apprehensive that after his death their right of nominating a successor to that church would be disturbed by the King, applied to Bernard, Bishop of

"Odo did not long survive the granting of this charter; nay it seems to me highly probable that he had actually paid the debt of nature before the monks of Whitby applied for it. But, whatever expectations they might form to themselves therefrom, both the Bishop and monks were disappointed in their hopes, as will best appear from the following charter,"—that is, the present document. Allowing for the writer's characteristic intimacy with the details of Parson Odo's condition, and two or three other like matters, the explanation given is sufficiently to the point. The fact that the witnesses are the same in both documents is noteworthy.

XXXVIII. CONFIRMATIO H[UGONIS] PRIORIS CARLIOLENSIS.

Universis ad quos hoc præ. scr. perv., H[ugo] Prior Karleol. et totus ejusdem loci Conventus, sal. in Domino. Noverit univ. v. nos, communi assensu et voluntate Capituli nostri, concessisse, quantum ad nos pertinet, et præsentis scripti auctoritate confirmasse viris venerabilibus et in Christo karissimis, Monachis Ecclesiæ S. Petri et Hýldæ de Wýtebý, illam concessionem et confirmationem quam bonæ memoriæ venerabilis pater noster, Bernardus Karliol. Ep'us, eis contulit super ecclesia de Crosseby Ravenswart, in Karliol. diocesi, in proprios usus possidendam. Et ut prædicta rata sint, et illibata, illa præ. scripto et sigilli nostri appositione duximus munienda. Valeat universitas in Domino.

<sup>6</sup> These two bovates were of the gift of Robert de Argentom. See No. 1, p. 7, and No. 26.

<sup>7</sup> See No. 49, and again No. 234, in both of which documents Rob. filius Will. de Aicheton (or Echetun or Ayketon, etc.) quitclaims and abjures South Fyling to the Abbey, and in the latter of which, the special object of which is the said quitclaim and abjuration, it is stated that Abbot Richard, at Robert fitzWilliam's special petition, then and there before the altar solemnly excommunicated all and every who might seek to alienate the property thus abjured and quitclaimed to Whitby. But the presence of the Archbishop is not noted in either of these deeds.

<sup>8</sup> Osbert de Baines was Archdeacon of York in 1140 and 1154, which makes it nearly, or perhaps quite, certain that the Abbot Richard named in No. 234 (and preceding note) is Abbot Richard I., who died in 1175.

Hugo Malet grants to Whithy all his domain in Rothwell, specially two bovates formerly held of him for 3s. a year, with the pasturage appertaining, and private chapel, and all tithes of said lordship, after decease of the chaplain; also grants the toft at the gate of the demesne; also the "boons" he used to have, both of ploughs and reapers out of Croxeby.

<sup>6</sup> Servientibus is repeated, and without erasure. It is not probable that one of the two was intended to be servituris, though the sense requires it, for the reading is the same in both A and M.

<sup>7</sup> There is some measure of uncertainty about this locality. Young, p. 375, making an hypothesis, which is not only unsupported, but contrary to fact—namely, that the name Fleinesburg in No. 25 (see Introductory Chapters) may be read Flesmesburg, for the fact is that the i is plainly dotted, as are the other i's in the document—says, but on what ground I know not, “there is reason to believe that this Flesmesburg was not Flambrough, but some place of the same name near Whitby, and as Fyling was possessed by Tancred the Fleming, it is extremely probable that it was sometimes called Flesmesburg. . . . Nor is it unlikely that it might also be the same with the church of Saxeby, which was in Fyling.” This is surely a very “baseless fabric” indeed. Charlton (p. 135) says—“As for the Church of Saxeby, mentioned in the foregoing charter, . . . I am made to conclude that we are to look for Saxeby in South Fyling ; and what confirms me in this opinion is, the foundation of a church or chapel having only a few years ago been dug up there on the demesne lands of Sir Charles Hotham, Bart., situate in a field or garth called the Chapel-garth . . . which I am pretty confident is the very place given to Whitby Abbey in the above charter.” Young (p. 376, note) commenting on this, writes—“Charlton’s idea that Saxeby was in South Fyling, where there was a field called Chapel-garth on the Hotham estates, is by no means improbable, only we must suppose, in that case, that Saxeby Church was suppressed by our monks, being never otherwise mentioned. Still I am more inclined to reckon this church, as well as Flesmesburg, the same with Fyling.” No lengthy comments are required in connection with these remarks. There is no uncertainty as to the place where Saxeby is to be looked for. The rubricated heading of the present charter, by its explicit notification, “de Sudfilinga,” settles that question at once. Saxeby is in South Fyling or nowhere, and if it were otherwise, Fleinesburg cannot be tortured into Flesmesburg. That Charlton’s supposition as to the site of Saxeby Church or Chapel is well founded is nearly certain. The position, the foundations, and the name of the site all lend confirmation to it, and it may further be noted that the site is hard by Kirk Moorgate, and that Kirk Moor comes close up to the enclosure named Chapelgarth. (O. Map, No. 46, six-inch scale.) The idea of “suppression,” started and repeated by Young, is gratuitous. Probably twenty or thirty chapels in Cleveland have disappeared precisely in the same way as Saxeby Chapel has, some of which have had a very distinct history, but none of which now have more memorial than the names of their sites, Chapel Field, Chapel Garth, Chapel Hill, and so forth.

<sup>5</sup> The large capital at the head of this deed, in red, is R. A smaller capital, G., is inserted close after it. The heading leaves no doubt of what the letter should be. As to the identity of the person intended, it would seem difficult, and perhaps unnecessary, to identify him with the Guy de Baliol named by Dugdale, and of whom he says that, "in the reign of William Rufus, he was enfeoffed by that King in the barony of Biwell in Northumberland," adding further—and by such addition bringing him into local connection with the place named in the charter—that he "gave to the Abbey of S. Mary at York the church of Stokesley and one carucate of land." After another sentence or two, describing other donations to S. Mary's, Dugdale proceeds, "the next was Bernard Baliol, son of Guy, who, in 3 Stephen, upon that great invasion by the Scots, met at Thresk, through the instance of Thurstan, Archbishop of York, with other of the Northern barons, etc." Now the next charter (No. 53) is granted by Bernard de Baliol, but it will be observed that he speaks of Guido de Baliol—doubtless the Guido of the present charter—as his brother, and not as his father. Hence, as Bernard de Baliol is in 1138 the important man Dugdale's notice proves him to be, and as the Guy de Baliol of this charter was his brother, it would appear to be a safe, if not a necessary, inference that the Guy de Baliol of William Rufus's time had a son Guy as well as a son Bernard, and elder than Bernard, but that he died early and without heir, leaving his inheritance to his brother Bernard, were it not that in No. 353 a Guido de Balliolo appears at the head of the witnesses to a charter by this same Bernard de Balliolo. Guido therefore must either have been the younger brother, subinfeudated to Bernard, or have ceded his rights. A further necessary inference is as to the date of the gift by Adam filius Viel or Vitalis, noted in charters 51-54, as well as in others: it must have been before 1138. Dugdale quotes Bernard as still serving valiantly in arms in 20 Henr. II. (1173), as giving certain lands to the Knights Templars, with the consent of his son Ingelram, and as

According to the same authority, Eustace was succeeded by his son Hugh, heard of in 1212, 1216, and 1217, and who is certainly the Hugo de Baliol of No. 54, which dates between 1190 and 1211.

<sup>4</sup> This confirmation is word for word the same as in No. 269. The convention referred to in this document is found in No. 205, and as Abbot Richard is named as the Abbot of Whitby with whom the settlement involved was made, and there were two successive Abbots of that name, viz. Ric. de Burgh (1148-1175) and Ric. de Waterville (1178-c. 1185(?)), it is not at first sight apparent which of the two was the contracting party in this case. Probably, however, the mention of Reiner, Clericus of the church of Ingleby, as still living, leads to the inference that the Abbot Richard in question is the former of the two so named, inasmuch as the said Reiner is a witness to Guido de Balliol's original grant (No. 52), which it is reasonable to suppose preceded the year 1138, or at least could not be long subsequent to that date. Moreover, the fact that the convention with Evesham is mentioned in the Memorial (p. 5) is consistent with the assumption that it took place during the incumbency of the first Abbot Richard, or at some time antecedent to the year 1175. The date of the present deed is therefore somewhat thrown back—a conclusion which is quite consistent with the fairly certain approximate dates of the other benefactions named in this confirmation.

<sup>5</sup> Robertus de Botivelein died Dean in 1186. Robert de Gaunt is named just before him in Le Neve as Dean in 1148. It is certainly possible, therefore, and assuming the conclusion in the preceding note to be sound, that this may be Robert de Gaunt.

gift of Emma de Port, . . . two carucates of land, the one in Ysleham and the other in Sneileswelle." From the terms of this charter, "ego, Alanus de Percy, reddo duas car. t'ræ in Islaham," the necessary inference is that these two carucates had, in some way or other, been withdrawn from the possessions of the convent, and were now given back or restored by the grantor of the deed; and of course he must be the inheritor of that part of the Percy lordships. In No. 211 Alan de Percy, son of Alan de Percy, grants two carucates in Scotland to Whitby, his brothers William, Walter, and Geoffrey being witnesses to the charter. He is quite certainly Alan de Percy le Meschin, and there can be almost as little uncertainty about his being the grantor of the present charter, and as to the two Percies, witnesses to it, being his brothers so named.

<sup>2</sup> As William de Percy, the present Alan's elder brother, succeeded his father between 1132 and 1135, it is possible that this charter may not be many years later than the said date, and that so this Dean Robert is the earlier Dean of that name. The next charter by Gaufridus, brother of the present grantor, dates not later than 1150.

<sup>1</sup> It will be noted that this witness has the same name as the grantor of the charter, albeit his brother—a fact which suggests that one of the two may have been, probably was, illegitimate. Alan de Percy, “magni Alani filius nothus,” present at the battle of the Standard, clearly was so, and the question is raised whether or no he were identical with Alan de Percy, le Meschin. The various brothers belonging to this generation named in A are William, the eldest son and heir of Alan de Percy; Alan, le Meschin; Walter, de Rugemond; Geoffrey; Geoffrey, the clerk; Henry; and Robert.

<sup>1</sup> This must be a younger Pichot de Perci. The elder Pichot is witness to Alan de Percy's grant and confirmation of the Fyling, Normanby and Hawsker vills (No. 28), dating probably soon after Will. de Percy, the founder's death, and to Fulco fitzRaynfred's charter (No. 253). Pichot's son Robert (No. 43), in the presence of his heir, grants the church of Quenre Sutton to Whitby, and is witness to the charter of Will. de Perci (elder brother of the grantor of the present charter), in which he confirms the donations of his father and grandfather (No. 26). Probably the present witness is son of Robert, if not the heir mentioned in No. 43.

I. Term. Trin. Rot. 28, Ebor. Dodsworth, 119, p. 48.) In No. 214 we have the charter of Durand de Butterwick conveying the carucate specified in this charter, and in No. 251 Robert Fossard's confirmation of the same, in which latter document Geffridus is mentioned as uniting with his father Durand in making the oblation. Thus it becomes quite clear that the William Fossard granting the present confirmation can be no other than the successor of the aforesaid Robert, and that is, according to the pedigree given in the above extract, his son, and grandson of Nigel Fossard, the original grantee, under the Earl of Mortain, of the Lythe and Egton Manors, a portion of the former of which Roxby or Rousby is.

the next charter Roger de Argentom, the grantor, speaks of his father as Roger fitzPeter, and not as William fitzRobert, as, according to the memorandum, he must have been. Consequently the Roger of No. 72 must be a member of another branch of the family. In No. 217 a Roger de Argentom quitclaims to the Abbey certain small portions of land at Uplium which he thus describes:—"illam terram quam Juliana, uxor Will. de Argentom, nomine dotis de domo de Wyteby acquisivit illarum duarum bovatarum quas Will. de Argentom, maritus ejusdem Julianæ, dedit Deo et Eccl. de Wyteby." This William is of course the William fitzRobert of the present charter, and the Roger who grants the said No. 217 could hardly speak of him as he does if any very near relationship existed. It may be open to question, however, whether the Roger de Argentom of the charter immediately preceding No. 217 is identical with the Roger of the latter, or the son of William fitzRobert. Among the witnesses to No. 217 are Gregor. de Argentine and Joh. de Argentine, the former being also a witness to No. 72. In the Gysburne Cartulary (Cott. mss. Cleop. D. ii.), ff. 326<sup>b</sup> and 327, a Greg. de Argentom, distinguished as de Ketton, is mentioned in three consecutive charters, having two daughters, Amicia and Agnes, his co-heiresses, owning property in Ugthorp; and, again, in three other charters on f. 322<sup>b</sup>, a Greg. de Argentom is named owning property in Ugthorp, who describes himself as a nephew of a Richard de Argentom, but his father's name is not mentioned. His wife's name was Juliana. But it is not possible to identify the one Gregory with the other; indeed it is more probable they are father and son. There is, besides, on f. 333 of the same ms. a series of charters by William de Argentom of such a nature as in part to discredit No. 425. In the latter Roger de Argentom, son of William, son of Robert, is stated to have left three daughters, co-heiresses,—Agnes, Asmota, and Elizabeth,—the second of whom, Asmota, was espoused to Albert de Crawcestre,—“de quibus exierunt Yvo et Jacobus qui obierunt sine prole.” However, in the third of the charters just referred to, Will. de Argentom makes known “omn. hominibus suis et amicis, Francigenis et Anglicis . . . me d. et c. et conf. Alberto de Crawcestria cum sorore mea Christiana,” five score acres of land in Redker; and it is further certain from other documents in the same Cartulary that there were two sons issue to this marriage, Yvo, called both de Crawcester and de Redker, but the latter most frequently and prevailingly in the end, and William. The latter died s.p., but Yvo had issue Jacobus, who also appears to have died childless. Besides the above challenge of Albert de Crawcestre's wife Christiana as his sister by William de Argentom, Albert's son Yvo is distinctly styled his nephew. The memorandum is therefore undoubtedly wrong as to the name Asmota, and can only be right as to the person on the supposition that the three co-heiresses he mentions became so on the death, without issue, of their brother William. But the entire question of the mutual relationship of these Argentoms, and of their connection with the more famous and somewhat later family, of which Sir Giles was so conspicuous a member, is utterly obscure. It is not quite wide

LXXII. ROGERUS DE ARGENTOM DE UNA BOVATA IN UPLIUM.

[M. 24.]

Omnibus Christi fidelibus, ad quos hoc præc. scr. pervenerit, Rogerus de Argentom, salutem. Noverit univ. vestra me, divinæ of the point to observe that, in a side-note in the list of the knights of the Percy fee adverted to above, William de Argentom is alleged to have held his one knight's fee partly in Uplium and partly in Lofthus, as also that in Burton (Mon. Ebor. p. 353), William de Argentin is stated to have given land in Uplium to Gyseburn with the consent of Julian, his wife, and Roger and Agnes, their son and daughter. This confirms the memorandum as to William's son Roger. It is probable also that the Percys had an interest in Ugthorpe, as the name Percybiggyng is one which occurs in the Gysburne charters in connection with Ugthorpe, and this may indicate the site of the land held there by the Argentoms and of the Percys.

<sup>3</sup> "The Whitsuntide of 1170 was however marked by a more critical event than the inquest of Sheriffs. The heir was crowned as Henry III.; the ceremony was performed, not by Thomas of Canterbury but by Roger of York, and the wife of the young king was not crowned with him. This act, which was intended by Henry as a sign and seal of power, was a most unfortunate mistake. He had, not unnaturally, supposed that it would strengthen the supreme authority to have in each division of his dominions a sufficient representative of royal majesty, he found that he had placed a dangerous weapon in the hands of an undutiful son; the minor irregularities of the coronation day roused his enemies to frenzy; Thomas Becket asserted that the rights of Canterbury, of the English Church, of Christianity itself, were outraged by Archbishop Roger's intrusion; and Lewis VII., hurt at the neglect of his daughter, and backed by the support of the family of Champagne, who combined careful orthodoxy with intense hatred of the house of Anjou, urged the Pope to put the kingdom under interdict."—(Stubbs's *Const. Alan Buscel grants and confirms to <sup>1</sup> This name is written G. Clid', and the abbreviation can hardly be for any name but Cliveland or Clifland, as in the body of the deed. Geoffrey de Muschamp held the office, temp. Henr. II., and became bishop of Coventry and Litchfield in 1198. His predecessor, Jeremiah, was in office in 1170.

<sup>4</sup> Alan Buscel is the son of Aaliza de Perci, described in the Memorial (p. 4) as "Neptis Willelmi de Perci et Serlonis Prioris." Aaliza was twice married, namely, to Hugo de Boitorp, who unites with her in granting "duas partes decimæ bladi in Boitorp" to Whitby; and to Reginald Buscel. It is almost certain that the former was her first husband, and consequently that the grant of tithes in the demesne of Boythorpe was one among the earliest donations to the convent after it began to assume form as a religious house. The date of the gift by Alan Buscel of the Church of Hoton and Hermitage near Westcroft, also in the Memorial (p. 4)—“ex dono Alani Bucel filii præd. Aalizæ, neptis Willelmi et Serlonis Prioris ecclesiam de Hotune in Pickeringelit,” etc., is settled as having taken place in king Stephen’s presence [No. 582. Inspex. of Edw. II., rehearsing among other confirmations that by Stephen]. That donation probably preceded the grant recorded and conveyed in the present charter.

<sup>2</sup> Aza, Aze, or Ace, filius Wymundi de Lockinton is described in the Memorial, when his gift of this half carucate in Hoton and two bovates in Middeltune is noted, as “nepos Willelmi Abbatis” (p. 4). He must consequently be a blood relation of Alan Buscel’s—if his mother was a sister of Aaliza de Percy, Alan’s mother, of course his first cousin. It is, however, but a conjecture, and perhaps even not so probable as to exclude others, that Abbot William de Percy, Aaliza de Percy, wife of Boitorp and Buscel successively, and Wimund’s wife, were brother and sisters. That the latter was sister to Abbot William there can be little or no doubt. But it is difficult to see a good reason, assuming that so much is made good by the mention of his specific relationship to the Abbot, why the same relationship, if it existed, should not have been alleged in the case of Aaliza de Perci, who, so far from being spoken of as soror Willelmi, is simply described, and in two places, as “neptis Willelmi et Serlonis Prioris.” She may have been, and, so far as the preceding consideration has weight, probably was, the daughter of another brother, and consequently cousin to Abbot William.

<sup>4</sup> M. Hundred. “The union of a number of townships for the purpose of judicial administration, peace and defence, formed what is known as the hundred or wapentake.”—(Stubbs’s Const. Hist. i. 96.) The occurrence therefore of dues arising out of both hundred and wapentake seems to claim a measure of attention. “The terms wapentake and hundred,” continues Professor Stubbs, “are both, in Anglo-Saxon records, of somewhat late occurrence. The wapentake is found only in the Anglian districts, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Rutland, and Leicestershire. To the north the shires are divided into wards, and to the south into hundreds. Hence the wapentake may be a relic of Danish occupation. . . . The Norman lawyers explained the word in reference to the formal recognition of the local magistrate by touching his arms; but this is very questionable, and the exact origin of the term cannot be ascertained, although it unquestionably has reference to the armed gathering of the freemen, and so to the assembly rather than to the district which it represents. The name of the hundred, which, like the wapentake, first appears in the laws of Edgar, has its origin far back in the remotest antiquity, but the use of it as a geographical expression is discoverable only in comparatively late evidences. . . . It is very probable . . . that the colonists of Britain arranged themselves in hundreds of warriors; it is not probable that the country was carved into equal districts. The only conclusion that seems reasonable is that, under the name of geographical hundreds, we have the variously sized pagi or districts in which the hundred warriors settled, the boundaries of these being determined by other causes, as the courses of the rivers, the ranges of hills, the distribution of estates to the chieftains, and the remnants of British independence. The fact that the hundred appears first in the laws of Edgar, and with an adaptation to a particular police institution, the pursuit and capture of thieves, might seem to mark the definite application of the name to the territorial area, which may have been called wapentake, ward, or even shire at an earlier period. But the particular measure then adopted seems rather to imply the previous existence of the district name. . . . The tradition preserved by William of Malmesbury that Alfred devised the arrangement into hundreds and tithings, although, as it stands, irreconcilable with facts, may embody a portion of a historical truth. Alfred may have adopted the hundred as a basis for rating, as Edgar did for police, or may have anticipated the measures of his descendants. . . . The wapentake in all respects of administration answers directly to the hundred, and no attempt can be made to account for its origin on the principle of symmetrical division. Nor is it easy to determine the origin of the variety of systems into which the hundred jurisdiction is worked. . . . Yorkshire and Lincolnshire were divided into Trithings or Ridings, subdivided generally into wapentakes; but in Domesday the East Riding is divided into hundreds only, and in Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire, and Rutland, the wapentake and the hundred are arranged side by side. Of the Yorkshire subdivisions two, Borgheshire and Craveshire, the latter of which is never called a wapentake, retain the name of shire; and it is given in later documents to Richmondshire, Riponshire, Hallamshire, Islandshire, Norhamshire, and probably other similar districts. Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, and Leicestershire are, in Domesday, arranged in wapentakes, but in one place the term 'hundred' is used in reference to a division of the last-named county." We observe that throughout Professor Stubbs writes in the sense hundred or wapentake, or that the one, "in all respects of administration, answers directly to" the other. In our present instance we have the service, exaction, or due denoted by the use of the word "wapentac," coincident and collateral with that denoted by the word hundredz; these are as distinct from each other as each is distinct from the county dues (comitatus) mentioned immediately before them, and the circumstance is worthy of note.

<sup>7</sup> In the Memorial (p. 7) is the entry, "Ex dono Unfredi de Hotun et Susannæ uxoris suæ l mans' in Hotune;" and from No. 83 (which is repeated in No. 352) it is made certain that the grantor of the present charter is son of Unfredus, or Humfridus, as he is written in the deeds past named. It also appears from the same source that he had issue, by Petronilla, a son named Richard. Also from a memorandum occurring among the valuable collection of original family charters preserved at Yarm Frierage, it appears that he had issue by his wife Margaret. The memorandum is to the effect that Hugo de Hoton gave the manor of Hoton to Sir Stephen Roselles and Osbert, the Chaplain of Newton subtus Ossebergh Toppyng, in trust, who gave it back to the said Hugo and Margaret his wife and their heirs. Said Hugo and Margaret had issue, John and Sibyl. John, son of Hugo de Menill de Hilton, married a Sibyl, and as the document, now quoted, with its predecessor, is headed "Hilton-Hoton" in their place in the collection, it is probable that this lady is the person in question.

<sup>2</sup> Son of William de Percy i. de Kildale. There is no question whatever of the independence of the Kildale family from the outset, and as little that they were connections of the main stem. Ernaldus (or, as he is written in one or more of the Gysburne deeds, Ernulfus) de Percy is witness, with Archbishop Thomas of York, to the Foundation Charter of William de Percy Oht les gernuns [No. 27] before 1097; in 1119, or before, he gives to Gysburne Priory the church of Ormesby, with the mill of Caldecotes, being styled in the Foundation Charter one of the "homines" of Robert de Brus. He is a witness to No. 111, and also "cum duobus filiis ejus" to No. 271 (the "conventio" between Gysburne and Whiteby). These two sons were Ernaldus (or Ernulfus) and Rodbertus, the former of whom confirms, "Rodberto fratre meo ejusdem donationis concessore et teste," the above-named gift of his father to Gysburne, a carucate of land being also specified as a part of the "donatio" (Gysb. Chart. f. 215). The descent of the Kildale family is continued through Robert, whose son William grants and confirms to Gysburne all his right in the churches of Crathorne and Ormesby and the mill of Kaldecotes, "sicut in cartis Ernulfi de Percy avi mei, et Ernulfi avunculi mei continetur" (f. 215<sup>b</sup>). The Walter de Percy, witness to the present charter, is this William's son, who, in a deed dated 1224, confirms to Rievaulx the mill of Poker at Friton, "sicut carta Hugonis (de Cammeril) avunculi mei testatur."—Burton, Mon. Ebor. p. 360.

man, as there is no reason to think this charter is much if at all before Abbot Roger's time (see No. 83). Reginald de Rosel's name, however, occurs two or three times in deeds of Abbot Roger's time, e.g. in Nos. 102 and 348, in the latter of which moreover he is co-witness with the grantor of this charter, Hugo de Hoton. After R. de Rosel's name follows Walt. de Camera, and after him the following are found in No. 351:—Ric' (probably Ricardus and not Richerus) de Fielinga, Willelmo de Whiteby, Waltero de Hoton (identified as frater Hug. de Hoton in No. 255, early in the thirteenth century, as also in a deed on f. 292, Gysb. Chart., in another of Mr. Meynell's, etc.) Willelmo de Toccots, Willelmo de Hankysgarth.

<sup>4</sup> William FitzHerbert, afterwards known as St. William of York, elected 1143, deprived 1147; restored 1153, died 1154. He was in York but thirty days after his restoration. "Either because, as was asserted, court influence had been strongly brought to bear on his election, or for some other reason, the election of William was violently opposed by the party of reformers in the Church, and especially by the Cistercians. The accusations against William were heard at Rome by Pope Innocent, and a judgment was so far given in his favour that his consecration was permitted, provided the Dean of York would state on oath that no undue influence had been exerted on the part of the king. This was done, not by the dean, Hugh de Puiset, himself, who meanwhile had become Bishop-elect of Durham, but by the Bishop of Orkney and the Abbots of St. Mary's and Whitby on his behalf, and William was consecrated at Winchester, September 26, 1143." Afterwards the charges were revived, and the archbishop suspended until the late Dean of York should himself take the required oath. Ultimately, at a council held at Rheims in 1147, William was deprived by the Pope, Eugenius III., of his see.—(Murray's Northern Cathedrals, Part I. p. 114.) In No. 200 we have his confirmation of various donations to the convent of Whitby, and among them that of the church of Englebi "quam Adam, advocatus ejusdem ecclesiæ, me præsentē, meisque . . . super sanctum altare . . . dedit et optulit." Taking into consideration the friendly offices of the Abbot of Whitby named in the preceding extract, it is nearly if not quite certain that the gift specified in the present charter must have been bestowed not long after 1143; for it is impossible to suppose that such a matter would form part of the transactions of the brief interval of thirty days between the restoration and the death of this persecuted prelate.

<sup>3</sup> Gald'. It may be a contraction for Galfridus,—but is hardly likely to be so.

<sup>4</sup> In the Memorial is this entry, nearly at the end (p. 7):—"Ex dono Rob. de Livertun dimidiam carucatam t'ræ, sine Danegeld, cum additamentis quas Willelmus Decanus nobis adquisivit." This, as well as the confirmation by Henry II. (No. 192), wherein the 18 acres of the present deed are also specified, and which must belong to the "additamenta" of the preceding extract, mark the donations of Robert de Liverton as of early date, the latest of them being probably made not much, if at all, after 1180. Another grant will be found in No. 97, with William de Herlesay also, as in the present case, among the witnesses. In No. 192 the grantor is described as "Robertus filius Nigelli de Livertona." Also again in No. 229 we have a deed by Robert de Livertun, with William de Herleseie one of the witnesses.

Radulf de Lascelles quitclaims to Abbot Peter all the tenement in Liverton hitherto held by him of the Abbey, and also the homage and service of Steph. de Roselles.

LXXXII. CONFIRMATIO ROGERI DE MUBRAY DE II. CARUCATIS IN TOULESTONA.

Rogerus de Mulbrai, omn. S. M. [Ecclesiæ] filiis, præs. et fut., qui visuri vel aud. estis has litteras. Scia[ti]s me indulsisse et quietam clamasse (19<sup>b</sup>) Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hýldæ de Wyteby in elemosinam, pro animabus patris et matris meæ et pro salute mea, et filiorum meorum, omne servitium quod ad me pertinebat de illis duabus carucatis terre de Tollestun quas Fulcho Dapifer<sup>8</sup> dedit eidem Ecclesiæ de Wytebi. Quare mando atque præcipio omnibus hominibus meis, Francis et Anglis, ut, sicut me amant, manuteneant hanc elemosinam meam, quam ita volo esse liberam et quietam, sicut aliqua elemosina potest esse liberior et quietior. Insuper prohibeo et Roger de Moubray quitclaims to Whitby all his right in the two carucates at Thouleston the gift of Fulcho Dapifer, and remits all services and customs due out of said land.

LXXXIII. DE TOFTO IN HOTON JUXTA GISBURNIAM.<sup>2</sup>

Abbot of Whitby lets to Richard, son of Hugo de Hoton, a toft and croft, the gift of his grandfather, Humfridus, for an annual

Omnibus has litteras vis. vel aud., Rogerus D. G. Abbas de Wyteby et ejusdem loci Conventus, salutem. Noverit univ. v. nos dimisisse D'no Ricardo, filio D'ni Hugonis de Hotona,<sup>3</sup> toftum cum crofto quod dominus Unfridus, pater dicti Hugonis, dedit Ecclesiæ nostræ de Wyteby, pro s. a. suæ, et antecess. suorum et success. suorum:—reddendo nobis inde annuatim xii. denarios, medietatem ad Pentecosten, et med. ad f. S. Martini. Si vero dictus Ricardus hæredem de se non habuerit, dictum toftum cum crofto, et ædificiis super-ædificatis prius decessum ipsius, quietum nobis remanebit. Et in hujus r. t. præ. scr. sigillum Capituli nostri ap[p]osuimus; et dictus Ricardus transcripto cirograff[at]o sigillum suum apposuit. Hiis testibus. <sup>12</sup> M. omits "Robertus," but writes "pater," which is clearly wrong, notwithstanding the fact that the same reading is found in the present deed in A. also. No. 243 shows that it was Robert, brother of Durand de Kayton, and consequently uncle of the present grantor, who sold the land in question to the Abbey, so that "avunculus" is the proper reading.

in carta patris mei testis et concessor sum scriptus; et unam three bovata[m] in eadem villa, quam pater meus in pur. et perp. elem. bovates dedit, cum terra de Stikewalbut,<sup>1</sup> tantum in vita mea de bought of Mona[c]his præfatæ Ecclesiæ tenenda:—Reddendo inde eis his uncle, annuatim x. solidos ad duos terminos, scil. quinque ad Pent. and one et quinque ad f. <sup>3</sup> Angelby. This is very nearly the same document as No. 78. The only difference is in parts of the phraseology employed. The witnesses also are the same, save only there is one short here.

LXXXVII. DE UNA ACRA IN UPLIUM. [M. 24.]

Universis S. M. Eccl. filiis, tam pr. quam fut., Robertus, filius Roberti Clerici, salutem. Noverit univ. v. me, pro s. a. meæ et hæ. meorum, conc. et dedisse, et hac pr. c. m. conf., Deo et S. Petro et S. Hýldæ,<sup>1</sup> et Sacristæ de Wýteby in pur. et perp. elem. unam acram t'ræ in territorio de Huplium;<sup>2</sup> scil. dimidiam acram ad Helewaldessceld, et dim. acram juxta viam de Lium, lib. et qu. ab omni servitio et sæc. exactione. ## LXXXVIII. DE II. CARUCATIS TERRÆ IN TOULESTONA.

Fulco
with consent of Osbert de Arches, grants to Whitby two carucates in

Notum sit omn. aud. et vid. has litteras, quod ego, Fulco,<sup>5</sup> concedente domino meo, Osberto de Arches,<sup>6</sup> dedi et super altare S. Petri et S. Hýldæ de Wyteby optuli Deo, et monachis ibid. Deo serv., (20<sup>b</sup>) duas carucatas t'ræ in Tholestun, pro s. a. me[æ] et pro animabus parentum meorum, et omnium successorum meorum, lib. et qu. ab omni serv. et ab omni cons. sæc., in perp. elemosinam. Huic donationi interfuerunt hii testes. Arundel.<sup>7</sup> Gaufridus de Arel'. Odo Capellanus. Ricardus de Lindesei; et alii.

<sup>7</sup> There is no Christian name given in this instance. That the charter was granted in Alan de Percy's time, or before 1133, there can be little or no doubt. Between 1139-1148, in other words in Abbot Benedict's time, the advowson of Sneton was granted to John Arundel (see next charter, No. 89, and No. 101), who, it is at least probable, was son of this witness, and not this witness himself. In one or two other instances in this Chartulary the ordinary Christian name is omitted, as e.g. in No. 173, where "Fossard, prece mea" is found at the head of the witnesses, William Fossard of No. 92 being almost certainly the person meant. A second instance of the occurrence of the present witness's name without a distinctive (or "Christian") name prefixed, is in No. 253, where he appears as "Harundel."

LXXXIX. DE DUABUS CARUCATIS IN TOULESTONA.

Sciunt omnes aud. et vid. litteras has, quod ego, Robertus, Robert fitz-Fulco Dapifer, with consent of Will. de Arches, confirms to Whitby the two carucates in Tolestun, his father's grant. filius Fulconis,<sup>1</sup> una cum consensu et licentia D'ni mei, Willelmi de Arches,<sup>2</sup> concessi, et per unum bacillum super altare optuli Deo et fratribus Wýtebyensis Ecclesiæ duas carucatas t'ræ in Tolestuna, pro s. a. meæ, et pro animabus parentum meorum, et omnium amicorum meorum, ita liberas et quietas sicut pater meus, Fulco, easdem carucatas præd. Ecclesiæ et fratribus diu ante donaverat in elemosinam. Huic dono interfuerunt et sunt testes, videl. isti — Willelmus Canonicus de Perci.<sup>3</sup> Alanus filius Alani de Perci. Johannes Arundel; et alii.

Notum sit omn. S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, tam præ. quam fut., Rob. Chambord confirms to Whitby quod ego, Robertus Chambord, pro s. mea,<sup>5</sup> et pro animabus patris et matris meæ, omniumque prædecess. meorum, donavi, et hac pr. c. m. confirmavi Deo et S. Petro, Sanctæque Hildæ de Wýtebi, monachisque usque in finem sæculi ibid. Deo, serv., the Church of Slingsby. in lib. et perp. elem., ecclesiam de Singelbi,<sup>6</sup> cum omnibus libert. et pert. suis, salva tenura Samsonis Clerici quamdiu

XCI. MASCI DE CURCI DE ECCLESIA DE SLENGESBY.

[M. 122.]

Notum sit omn. S. M. Eccl. [filiis], vid. vel aud. has litteras, tam præf. quam fut., quod ego, Masci de Curci, Matilda, conjuge mea et sponsa, et Ricardo, filio meo et hæc., concedentibus et assensum præbentibus, d. et conc. et hac c. m. conf. Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hildæ de Wýtebi, et monachis ibid. Deo serv., ecclesiam de Selingasbi,<sup>3</sup> cum omn. pert. suis, in lib. et quiet. et perp. elem., sicuti Willelmus Haii<sup>4</sup> eam præd. Ecclesiæ dedit et concessit. Hii sunt testes—Radulphus Sacerdos. Rogerus Sacerdos. Godwinus Sacerdos. Robertus Diaconus. Idem Willelmus Haii, a quo prima facta est donatio. Willelmus de Friebois. Willelmus de Houkesgart, et Rogerus, frater ejus. Normannus Mon[e]tarius; et alii.

Masci de Curci, with assent of his wife and heir, confirms to Whitby the Church of Slingsby.

Sciant tam præf. quam fut., quicumque has litteras viderint vel audiverint, quod ego, Willelmus Fossardus, concedo et præf. c. m. confirmo donationem quam fecit Aze filius Wimundi de Lochintona<sup>7</sup> Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hýldæ de Wýteby, et monachis ibid. Deo serv., scil. tres solidos annuatim eis reddendos, in pur. et perp. elem., de illa bovata t'ræ quam Raghanaldus tenuit de præd. Aze in Mideltona. XCIII. DE DIMIDIA CARUCATA IN WICHAM. [M. 100.]

Omnibus Sanctæ Dei Ecclesiæ fidelibus, Paganus, filius Osberni, salutem. Sciant omnes aud. vel videntes litteras has, quod ego, Paganus, pro s. a. meæ, et pro domino <sup>3</sup> meo, Roberto de Brus, et ejus conjuge Anneis,<sup>4</sup> et omn. pueris illorum, et pro a. patris mei, Osberni, et filii mei, Thomæ, et pro omn. parentibus,<sup>5</sup> tam pro vivis quam pro defunctis, donavi Deo et Fratribus de Wyteby,<sup>6</sup> et per unum baculum, in die festivitatis S. <sup>1</sup> Probably William, son of Alan de Percy. In M. no other witnesses are given after Will. de Percy.

<sup>2</sup> A probable suggestion as to the locality here indicated is difficult to make. The third letter is so much like u, and so little like n, or else Bainton might be assumed to be the place.

<sup>4</sup> In No. 176, Hugo, filius Gerardi de Atona, gives to Whitby four acres, odd roods, etc.; Roger de Stutevill and Roger de Bosco, one of his "milites," being the two first witnesses, as in the present instance also. Probably the Hugo de Aton is the same in either charter.

<sup>5</sup> It is perhaps not altogether difficult to identify this witness. In No. 73, William de Stutevill confirms the Church of Ayton in Cleveland to Whitby, and clearly in the latter part—probably the last ten or twelve years—of the twelfth century. The present deed as certainly dates within the first part of the thirteenth century, as is clear from the names of several of the witnesses met with in the duplicate copy in No. 348, and again, in the same manner, in a charter of Robert Falconarius de Thormonby, given in the Percy Feodary, to which Stephen de Meynell, still a minor in 1206 (if not in 1217 also), John de Bulmer, Adam de Hilten, Ingram de Bovington,

William
Boye

S. Mary of

Robert de Pothow, and others of like date, are co-witnesses with Robert de Stutevill. What the relationship, however, between the said Robert de Stuteville and the William de Stuteville of No. 73, may have been, though nowhere hinted at in the present series of documents, is apparently a matter of tolerably direct inference. According to Dugdale, Robert de Stuteville I. was living in 1080 and 1107; his son, Robert de Stuteville II., was at the battle of the Standard in 1138, was assessed to an aid for marrying the King's daughter in 1166, was Sheriff of Yorkshire 1170-1175, and was still living in 1177, if not, inferentially, for some time after that. Robert III., son of Robert II., is merely mentioned, without any dates, as a benefactor of Rievaulx; but his son William is named as taking an active part in public matters as early as 1173, and as dying in 1204. Passing by the various difficulties and perplexities involved in this statement, and especially as collated with the statements made in reference to these same noblemen by Orderic Vitalis, as not of great (if any) interest to the present inquiry, and merely hinting in relation to them that it is more than probable that in more than one of the references the second and third Roberts are confounded together, it remains to be noticed that the William de Stuteville last mentioned as dying in 1204—a date which tallies well enough with that necessarily given to No. 73,—a direct lineal descendant, moreover, of the Robert de Stutevill named by Graves as grantor of Ayton, had two sons, Robert and Nicholas, by his wife Berta, niece of Ranulph de Glanville. Of these, Robert died s.p., leaving his brother Nicholas his heir. This Robert appears certainly to be the witness to the present deed, and the others already noted as attested by him and Roger de Bosco. Moreover, it was through Johanna, the granddaughter of Nicholas just named, that the Ayton property passed into the Wake family.

<sup>2</sup> The dedication of Goathland Church is to S. Mary, and the probability is that the "Eremitorium" of the Fratres endowed by Henry I. (No. 195), and who eventually commended themselves to Whitby with that king's sanction, in order to become a cell of the Abbey of like order and habit, was closely connected with the ancient parochial church. This deed must probably precede the commending of the Eremitorium to Whitby.

Sciunt omnes tam pr. quam fut. quod ego, Johannes Arundel,<sup>6</sup> conc. et pr. c. mea confirmavi Monasterio de Wýteby, et monachis ibid. Deo serv., duos solidos, annuatim percipiendos de me et de hæ. meis in perpetuum, scilicet. xii. den. ad Pent., et xii. den. ad f. S. Martini, pro proprestura illius t'ræ quæ jacet inter Buscohoved<sup>7</sup> et Brusegarth, quam scil. t'ram circu[m]jivi occurs. In the Memorial (p. 7) there is the following entry:—"Ex dono primi Willielmi Wirfaud, dim. carucatam t'ræ in Hilderwelle, cum una mansura." No. 426 [from M. f. 28] conveys half a carucate in Hilderwell, with a toft in the same vill, to Whitby "concedente filio meo Willelmo." The latter is doubtless the grantor of the present charter, which, as is evidenced by the names of the two first witnesses, both cotemporaries of Peter de Brus 1. (the latter especially being a frequent signatory to charters by that baron), Alan de Wilton, etc., belongs to quite the early part of the thirteenth century. It is nearly certain from Nos. 428 and 429 (a confirmation of the same donation by Osbert Wirfauch, and a deed of further gift by his son William Wirfauc de Hilderwell) that the said Osbert was son of the second William.

<sup>2</sup> M. Snetona. The lady here named is probably a granddaughter of John Arundel, grantor of the last charter, though her father Reginald is nowhere mentioned as the son of the said John. Still, by inference from the descent of the lordship of Sneton and the succession of dates, such a conclusion is quite consistent with reason as well as probability. There was also an Osbert Arundel, who may have been brother to Reginald, or even uncle; but this is merely hypothesis. Johanna Arundel was at least twice married. In No. 460 she speaks of one Richard Vertdos as her "D'nus et sponsus," while in No. 134 she describes herself as, when she grants that charter, "Uxor Rogeri de Bayuse," one of the witnesses to the charter, moreover, being Roger Arundel, her brother. I am disposed to think the Baius marriage was the first; and that she granted the present charter, and No. 457 also, during her widowhood, is apparent from the terms of either. Probably Agnes de Beyus, who, in 1252, enters into a convenit with the Abbey (No. 461), was her daughter by the Baius marriage. As to the probable descent of Roger de Baius see under No. 134.

<sup>3</sup> This must necessarily, as William de Fortibus died in 1179, and Richard, the second abbot of the name, succeeded only in 1177, be the first of the two Richards (1148-1175). Some reference is made to the Earl of Albemarle in No. 572, which may possibly have some connection with the cession by that Baron in the present charter.

CVII. DE TERRA IN SCARDEBURG, QUAM RICARDUS DE FOLKETONA TENET.

John, Abbot of Whitby, leases to Richard de Folketon land in Scarborough belonging to the Abbey, lying beyond the mill-dam, with condition in case of non-payment of rent when due.

Omn. Christi fidelibus has litteras vis. vel. aud., Johannes,<sup>4</sup> D. G., Abbas de Wyteby, et ejusdem loci Conventus, salutem in D'no. Noveritis nos ded. et conc., et hac. c. nostra conf. Ricardo de Folketona t'ram nostram in villa de Scartheburg ultra stangnum:—illam, scil., quæ jacet inter t'ram ejusdem Ricardi et t'ram quæ fuit Grimkilli:—tenendam et hab. illi et hæ. suis, de nobis, in feodo et hæreditate, lib. et quiete, reddendo inde annuatim nobis decem solidos pro omni serv. ad nos pertinente, med. at Pent. et med. ad f. S. Martini, et faciendo servitia domini Regis. Et si forte præd. Ricardus firmam præd. nuntio nostro, quem ad præd. firmam recipiendam destinaverimus, terminis statutis non persolverit, ipse eundem nuntium nostrum in domo sua, sumptibus suis, honorifice retinebit, donec eidem plene præd. firmam persolverit. Teste Capitulo nostro.

<sup>4</sup> There are no means of identifying this abbot. John de Evesham, 1214-1222; John de Steyngrave, . . . -1258. If an inference may be made from such a name as Grimkil, it would necessarily be in favour of the earlier of the two. See note on Arne Grimsune under next charter.

<sup>6</sup> This name is noteworthy, not only as the only one in this Chartulary which has escaped the usual translation by "filius," but from its unmistakable Norse form. In Landnamabok there are three Arngrims named, viz., Argrimr Godi Helga sun, Arngrimr Gudmunds sun, and Arngrimr Thorsteins sun. In Dugdale's Mon. iii. p. 550, Ulfe Fornesson is named as giving a carucate of land in Skirkubek to St. Mary's Abbey, York, and also Uctred Ulfson, as the giver, to the same foundation, of the Church of Middelton in Richmondshire. Another remark which may fitly be made, as of undoubted interest in the early history of the nascent monastery, is that, from the description of the witness who stands third on the list, building operations were undoubtedly being pushed forward at the time this document was executed. The provision made as to the admission into the number of regular monks of the grantor, if so he elected at any future time, is also to be noted.

CX. DE TERRA IN EBORACO. [M. 124.]

Audoen, Romilda
his wife,

his heir,

Whitby a mansura in Walmgate, York.

Sciant omnes audientes has litteras quod ego, Au[d]oene,<sup>3</sup> et uxor mea, Romilda, atque hæc. meus, Hugo, dedimus Ecclesiæ S. Petri de Wytebi, pro salvatione animarum nostrarum, cunctorumque nostrorum parentum, unam mansuram t'ræ in Walbagata,<sup>4</sup> liberam et immunem ab omni servitio in perp., exceptis quatuor denariis, qui dabuntur ad servitium Regis per annum; et illam obtulimus per unum baculum super altare S. Petri, multis intuentibus, quorum hii testes sunt. Aschethilus de Osgarth.<sup>5</sup> Reginaldus de Eboraco. Osbernus Goldel; et alii.

whom and his family see notes to No. 220) was a contemporary of Abbot William de Perci, who is supposed to have died about 1127 (No. 263), and with Abbot Benedict, who resigned in 1148 (No. 220), which would make him to be a very old man in 1170. Moreover, he was, with his father, a witness to Alan de Perci's confirmation to Whitby of the Fyling vills bought of Tancardus Flandrensis by Abbot William de Perci (Nos. 28, 405), which carries us still further back towards the beginning of the twelfth century.

Robertus de Brus,<sup>1</sup> omn. S. Ecclesiæ fidelibus, salutem. Scitote quod ego et Agnes, uxor mea, filiusque noster, Adam de Brus, pro s. D'ni nostri, Henrici, Regis Angliæ, animarumque nostrarum et hæc. nostrorum remedio, ecclesiam Sanctæ Hýldæ Abbatissæ, de Midlesbured, cum omnibus rebus quæ ad eandem eccl. pertinent, et duas carucatas et duas bovatas t'ræ in Nehuham, in perp. elem., Ecclesiæ et fratribus S. Petri et S. Hýldæ de Wýteby, dedimus et conc. et confirmavimus;—ea conventionem, ut in præf. ecclesia de Midlesburg quidam monachi sint, qui Deo et S. Hýldæ de Wýtebi deserviant, et qui de stipendiis præf. ecclesiæ large et sufficienter vivere valeant, et ut mater Ecclesia de Wýteby semper valeat habere proficuum. Hii sunt testes:—Willelmus Capellanus. Arnaldus de Perci.<sup>2</sup> Umfridus de Elthot. Willelmus de Fugeris; et multi alii.

Robert de Brus, his wife Agnes, and son Adam, grant and confirm to Whitby the church of Middlesburgh and two carucates and two bovates of land in Newham, to found a cell in the said church, and the surplus to go to Whitby.

CXII. WILLELMUS MALEBYSE DE MIDELESBURG.

Cunctis Christi fidelibus ad quos hoc scr. perv., Willelmus Malebisse,<sup>3</sup> salutem. Noverit univ. v. me d. et conc. et hac c. mea conf. Deo et Eccl. S. Hýldæ de Midelesburg, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., in pur. et perp. elem., totam terram quam habui in dominico meo in Brachanhoc, cum omn. pertinentiis. Alano Malechac; et multis aliis.

Will. Malebisse grants to Middlesburgh all the land he has in his demesne of Brachanhoc.

CXIII. WALTERUS DE COLLEBY DE MIDELESBURG.

<sup>4</sup> There can be little doubt that this should be Hugone. The other witnesses to No. 141 are the same as in the present charter, and Hugone is the reading there. There are two families of the same name, as is also apparent in the said charter.

Walter de Colleby, at the instance of his wife and heirs, gives to the cell of Middlesbure three acres in Colleby, with pasturage for two beasts, a horse, and six sheep.

præs. et fut., Walterus de Collebi,<sup>1</sup> salutem. Noverit univ. v. me, divinæ pietatis intuitu, assensu etiam et voluntate ac petitione Margaretæ uxoris meæ, et hæc. meorum, conc. et ded. et hac præs. c. mea conf. Deo et S. Hyldæ de Middlesbure, ac mon. ibid. #### CXIV. MARGARETA DE COLLEBY DE MIDELESBURG.

Margaret de Colleby, in her widowhood, confirms the donation of her late husband to the cell of Middlesbrough and the monks of Whitby, with free exit and ingress.

Noverint omnes ad quos hoc scr. pervenerit, quod ego, Margareta de Collebi, tempore viduetatis meæ, in libera potestate mea, d. et conc. et hac pr. c. m. conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Hyldæ de Midelesburg, et Monachis de Wyteby, in lib. et pur. et perp. elem., illas tres acras t'ræ, cum pert., in campo de Collebi, quas ex concessione Walteri de Ribbestain,<sup>4</sup> quondam mariti mei, tenuerunt in lib. et pur. elem., cum omn. pert et pasturis et asiamentis ad eas pertinentibus, infra villam de Colleby et extra. Insuper etiam<sup>5</sup> liberum exitum et introitum ad eas colendas et habendas eis concedo. Et ego Margareta, et hæc. mei has donationes præfatæ Ecclesiæ warrantizabimus c. o. h. in perpetuum. Hiis testibus. Waltero Galicien. Willelmo, tunc temporis Capellano de Middlesburg. Willelmo, Clerico de Martona. Nicholao de Atona; et aliis.

Et ego, et hæc. mei prænom. t'ram, cum omn. aisia-mentis præd. t'ræ pertinentibus, c. o. h. et f. war. et defendemus. Hiis testibus. Gregorio de Levinethorp. Thoma de Martun. Nicholao de Atuna. Willelmo Thosti; et aliis.

Walter Galicien grants to the Cell of Middlesburgh and the monks of Whitby half an acre in Tollesbi in Swarthouethwait.

CXVI. ROBERTUS GALICIEN DE MIDELSBURG.

Universis S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, ad quos pr. scr. pervenerit, Robertus Galicienus, salutem in Domino. Noverit univ. v. me, pro s. a. meæ et antecess. meorum, d. c. et pr. c. mea conf., Deo et Ecclesiæ (24) S. Hyldæ de Middlesburc, monachisque de Wýtebý ibid. Deo serv., t'ram quæ vocatur Houenam,<sup>2</sup> quæ jacet inter Westbec et Crossebydale, cum prato ei adjacente, in pur. et perp. elem., cum pert. suis, lib. et qu. ex omni exactione sæculari, de me et hæc. meis in perpetuum. Ut autem hæc mea donatio in perp. inconcussa et illibata permaneat, illam sigilli mei munimine roboravi. Hiis testibus. Gregorio de Levinc-thorp. Thoma de Martun. Nicholao de Atuna. Henrico Ruffo; et aliis.

Robert Galicien grants to the Cell at Middlesburgh and the monks of Whitby the land called "Houer-am," lying between Westbeck and Crossbydale.

CXVII. ROBERTUS GALICIEN DE MIDELESBURG.

Noverint omnes ad quos hoc scr. pervenerit, quod ego, Robertus Galicien de Martuna, d. c. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ<sup>3</sup> de Middlesburc, et monachis de Wýtebý, in lib. pur. et perp. elem., vii. acras t'ræ et dimidiam in campo de

<sup>2</sup> This is a word of frequent occurrence, and by no means in any one particular district or locality, and it is usually introduced much in the same way as in the text here, with the words "quæ vocatur." What the meaning or derivation, or even orthography, may really be, is obscure. The word might be "ownam," or "hownam," were it not that "Ofnam" in the heading of No. 165 makes it "Ovenham" or "Hovenham."

<sup>8</sup> William de Foxton was Seneschal of Whitby in Abbot Roger's time, to which nearly all the present series of charters may be referred. There was an extraordinary impulse leading on to these donations for Church work, not only in special connection with the Middlesburgh cell, but with the general aggrandisement of the Abbey. And it is to be noted that contemporaneously with this the Abbey Church was newly commenced, and was being most energetically pushed forward. It would hardly be rash to assert, after a careful inspection and consideration of what is left of the Abbey Church, that the first great building effort, commencing with the eastern end and terminating with the first three bays of the nave, is synchronous with the incumbency of Abbot Roger (1122-1144), and does not extend much beyond it.

CXVIII. ROBERTUS GALICIEN DE MIDELESBURG.

Omn. S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, præ. et futuris, Robertus Galicien, salutem. Noverit univ. v. me d. c. et hac pr. c. mea confir(24<sup>b</sup>)masse Deo et S. Hýldæ de Midlesburc, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., in lib. et pur. et perp. elem., unam acram t'ræ et dimid. in Bracanhoc, cum tota pastura quæ ad me vel ad hærede[s] meos pertinet in eadem Brachanehoc, desicut forera quæ [fuit] Radulphi Longi extenditur—scil. de aqua versus orientem usque ad aquam versus occidentem, et omnibus aliis aisiammentis ad præd. t'ram pertinentibus. Præterea, eisdem monachis dedi et conc., et præ. c. mea conf. dimid. acram t'ræ in Brachanhoc, illam scil. quam Radulphus,<sup>1</sup> avus meus, dedit Deo et S. Hýldæ de Midlesburc in pur. et perp. elemosinam. Ego et hæ. mei præd. t'ram, cum præf. pastura, in perp. warentizabimus. Hiis testibus. Gregorio de Levinthorp. Thoma de Martuna. Hugone de Colleby. Willelmo filio Line; et aliis.

Robert Galicien grants to the Cell of Middlesburgh an acre and a half of land, with all the pasture belonging to him in Brackenhoe, within the given boundaries.

CXIX. ROBERTUS GALICIEN DE MIDELESBURG.

Omn. Christi fidelibus, ad quos pr. c. pervenerit, Robertus Galicien, salutem. Noverit univ. v. me d. et conc., et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et S. Petro et S. Hýldæ de Wýteby, et mon. ibid. Deo. serv., tres rodas t'ræ in Simundholm, quæ jacent inter t'ram Thomæ Clerici, quæ est ex australi parte, et t'ram Rogeri de Estures, quæ jacet ex boreali<sup>2</sup> parte, in lib. pur. et perp. elem., pro a. mea, [et] antecessorum, et omnium succ. meorum, cum omn. libertatibus et aisiammentis, in pratis, pascuis, et pasturis, infra v. et extra, ad tantam terram pertinentibus. Robert Galicien grants to Whitby three roods of land in Simundholm as defined.

<sup>1</sup> Two deeds in the Gysburne Chartulary (ff. 243, 244) enable us to supply the descent of Robert Galicien, the grantor of this and the three preceding charters. Radulphus, here named as Robert's grandfather, is himself son of Ernaldus Galicien and father of Walter, of Nos. 115, 120. In No. 136, also, Robert is specially named as son of Walter. Robert's wife was called Geretrudis, as appears from the second of the two Gysburne documents named above.

CXX. WALTERUS GALICIEN DE MIDELESBURG.

Walter le Galicien grants to the Cell of Middlesburgh, and the monks of Whitby three acres in Tollesby fields, in his culture called Swarthouethwait; if any excess over three acres, still to belong to Whitby.

Universis S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, tam præ. quam fut., ego, Walterus Galicien, in Domino salutem. Noverit univ. v. me, divinæ pietatis intuitu, conc. et d. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et Eccl. S. Hýldæ de Midlesburc, et mon. de Wýtebý, in lib. et pur. et perp. elem., tres acras t'ræ in campo de Tollesbi—scil. in cultura mea, quæ vocatur Northsuarthouedwath; et si quid in illa cultura plus fuerit de tribus acris, præd. Ecclesiæ et monachis de Wýtebý in pace remaneat, (25) cum omn. pert. et aliis aisiamentis, in v. de Tollesbi et extra, ad eandem t'ram pertinentibus, pro s. a. meæ, et antecess. et succ. meorum. Et ego, Walterus le Galicien, et hæ. mei, præd. t'ram, cum pert. suis, præd. Monachis warentiz. et def. c. o. h. in perpetuum. Hiis testibus. Gregorio de Levingthorp. Henrico Ruffo. Willelmo de Wýtebý; et aliis.

CXXI. STEPHANUS DE BLABY DE MIDELESBURG.

Stephen de Blaby, with Avicia his wife, grants to the Cell of Middlesburgh the homage of Fitz-Thomas, with his sequela, for ever.

Omn. S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, ad quos pr. scr. pervenerit, Stephanus de Blabý,<sup>2</sup> et Avicia, uxor ejus, salutem in Domino. Noverit univ. v. nos, pro s. nostra, et antecessorum nostrorum, ded. et confirmasse Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Hýldæ de Midlesburc, monachisque ibid. Deo serv., in pur. et perp. elem., humagium filii Thomæ, cum tota sequela sua, in perpetuum: Ita quod in quocumque terrarum pervenerint, liberi a nobis et hæ. nostris perpetuo remanebunt Deo et præd. Ecclesiæ. Ut autem hæc nostra donatio perpetuam optineat stabilitatem, illam sigilli nostri appositione roboravimus. Hiis testibus. D'no Engelram

CXXII. WILLELMUS DE MARTONA DE MIDELESBURG.

Sciant omnes, tam pr. quam fut., quod ego, Willelmus de Martuna, concedente Roberto hæ. meo, d. et conc. et hac c. mea conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Hýldæ de Midlesburc, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., in lib. et perp. elem. duas acras t'ræ et dimid.— duas, [s]cil., super Crossebidale, et dim. super Bracanhil; et si quid pertinuit ad feudum meum in pastura mea de Bracanhil, quam Hugo Malebýs<sup>1</sup> dedit præd. Ecclesiæ, toftum illum quietum clamavi præd. Ecclesiæ de Midlesbur[c] et mon. ejusdem loci in perpetuum. Et ego et hæ. mei war. et def. præd. Monachis omnes præd. t'ras et pasturas c. o. homines. Hiis testibus. Rogero de Malesart. Gordano Diacono. Willelmo Ruffo. Galfrido de Aresum; et aliis.

William de Marton grants to the Cell at Middlesburgh two acres and a half of land in Crossbydale and Brackenhill, and any claim he might have on the land given by Hugo Malebys.

CXXIII. GALFRIDUS DE ARUSUM DE MIDELESBURG.

Notum sit omn. vid. vel audientibus has literas, quod ego, Galfridus de Aresum, filius Matildis,<sup>2</sup> dedi et hac c. mea confirmavi Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hýldæ de Wýtebý, et præcipue Ecclesiæ de Midlesbur[c], monachisque ibid. Deo serv., unam acram t'ræ et dim. in Midlesbur[c], super quam t'ram præd. Johannes Herwaltd mansionem suam ædificavit,<sup>3</sup> in pur. et perp. elem., pro animabus omnium prædecessorum meorum. Hujus donationis sunt hii testes:—Robertus Ravenchil. Baldricus filius Matildis.<sup>4</sup> Jurdanus Diaconus, Johannis filius;<sup>5</sup> et alii.

Galfrid de Arusum, son of Matilda, gives to Whitby, and more especially to the Cell at Middlesburgh, an acre and half in Middlesburgh, built upon by John Herwald.

CXXIV. HENRICUS RUFFUS DE MIDELESBURG.

Henry Ruffus de Arusum
grants to the Cell of Middlesburgh and the Monks of Whitby all his

Notum sit omnibus aud. vel videntibus literas istas, quod ego, Henricus Ruffus<sup>1</sup> de Arusum, d. et conc. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ S. [Hyldæ] de Midlesburc, et mon. de Wyteby, in lib. et pur. et perp. elem., totam culturam meam quæ jacet extra villam de Midlesburc, juxta Crucem, quam Rogerus Harald quondam tenuit de me, præter unum sulcum tantummodo, qui est propinquior soli, quem Goscelinus, homo meus, tenet de me jure hæreditario, quæ cultura computabitur pro. vi. acris t'ræ, sive majus sive minus; et ego Henricus Ruffus et hæ. mei warentiz. et def. præd. Ecclesiæ et prænom. mon. præd. t'ram c. o. h. in perpetuum. Hiis testibus. Ada Capellano. Gregorio de Levingthorp. Willelmo Cusin; et Rogero Harald; et aliis.

CXXV. WILLELMUS DE ACLUM DE MIDELESBURG.

William de Aclum grants and confirms to Whitby a toft containing four acres, the gift of his mother Cecilia.

Sciant omnes, tam moderni, quam futuri, quod ego, Willelmus de Hacclum, assensu uxoris meæ et filiorum meorum, conc. et hac mea carta confirmavi Ecclesiæ S. Petri et S. Hyldæ de Wyteby, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., in pur. et perp. elem., et ab omni servitute lib. et quietam, toftam iiii<sup>or</sup> acrarum, quæ fuit Goduini Salv[ain] in Midlesburc, quam mater mea, Cecilia, dedit præf. Ecclesiæ. Hiis testibus. Roberto de Coyneris. Willelmo, filio Odonis. Arnulfo filio Muriel; et multis aliis.

CXXVI. ROBERTUS FILIUS BALDRIC DE MIDELESBURG.

Richard,
son of Baldric de Arusum, grants to Whitby two acres of land situate at the exit from
thorp.

nostrarum, et universorum antecessorum nostrorum. Hanc etiam donationem, ut rata sit et stabilis, sig. nostri munitione corroboravimus. Hiis testibus. Willelmo filio Odonis; Gregorio; Johanne; Roberto; Gaufrido, filiis suis. Willelmo Ruffo; et aliis.

CXXVII. ROGERUS ESTURS DE MIDELESBURG.

Omnibus ad quos hoc scr. perv., præ. et futuris, ego, Rogerus<sup>1</sup> de Estures, salutem. Noverit univ. v. me d. et con(26)cessisse, et hac præ. c. mea conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Hýldæ de Wýteby de Middlesbure, et Mon. de Wýteby, in lib. et pur. et perp. elem., quicquid ad me vel ad hæ. meos pertineat in pastura et terra illa de Brachanhoc, quam Willelmus Malebisse<sup>2</sup> dedit præfatæ Ecclesiæ, et totum jus quod in eadem terra et pastura de Brachanhoc habui, illud de me et de hæ. meis in<sup>3</sup> perp. remitto et quietum-clamo. Et ego et hæ. mei hanc donationem warent. et def. c. o. h. in<sup>3</sup> perpetuum. Hiis testibus. Gregorio de Levi[n]gthorp. Willelmo de Foxtun. Waltero Galicien, et Roberto filio ejus; et aliis.

CXXVIII. ROBERTUS DE CLIVELAND DE MIDELESBURG.

Sciant pres. et fut. quod ego, Petrus, filius Roberti de Clivelande,<sup>4</sup> conc., et hac c. mea conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ S. Johannis

Peter, son of Robert de Clive-

<sup>4</sup> It will be observed that there is a discrepancy between the name in the heading and the name as actually given in the body of the deed. The family of de Cliveland meets with repeated notice in both the Gysburne and Whitby Chartularies. The earliest mention is probably in the Foundation Charter of Gysburne Priory, wherein the founder says—"de terra autem . . . Uctredi de Cliveland liberum habeant servitium," and this is no doubt the person named in the following extract from the Memorial (p. 6): "ex dono Uctredi filii Thorkil de Cliveland ii. car. in Brinistun et molend. ejusdem villæ." Yet again, in the same document, but near the end, we have this entry:—"ex dono Roberti de Cliveland unam acram et unam perchatam t'ræ in Ormesbi." It is not possible to say that this Robert is son of Uctred, or any other relation in particular. It is nearly certain, however, that he was of the same family, and may, it is not unlikely, have been his son. But from him the descent for five generations is quite clear, as obtained from documents in the two Chartularies above named (several of the originals of the Gysburne deeds in question being preserved, it may be said in passing, in the York Museum). In No. 132, dating early in the 13th century, Robert de Cliveland, beyond doubt the donor of the acre and perch in Ormesby, is named as the father of Radulfus and Robert de Cliveland, the former of whom gives a part of the land in Ormesby which he had of the gift of the latter. In the present charter, Peter, son of Robert de Cliveland, speaks of the Radulfus whobestowed that gift as his uncle. In one of the Gysburne deeds the same Peter names his brothers Radulfus and Henry. In another his son Robert is named; and in a third John, son and heir of Robert fitzPeter, confirms all the donations of his ancestors who held of Ernald de Percy. But he is the last of the family named in the documents referred to.

CXXIX. THOMAS DE MARTONA.

Omnibus ad quos hoc. scr. pervenerit, præd. et futuris, Thomas, filius Rogeri de Martona,<sup>2</sup> salutem. Sciatis me conc. et d. et pr. c. mea conf. Deo et S. Hyldæ de Midlesburc, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., in lib. et pur. et perp. elem., iiiior acras t'ræ et dim.—duas scil. acras et dim. in Brachanhoc, et duas in Crossebidale, quas præd. Et ego et hæc. mei præd. t'ram, cum præfata pastura, prænom. Mon. warentizabimus. Hiis testibus.

John Yngelram,

<sup>1</sup> The name is almost certainly Sauntou. There was a family of that name in 1285, taking its local appellation from Sauntou in Harthill Wapentake, holding in the same place, and in Traneby, and elsewhere.

<sup>2</sup> In the Memorial (p. 7) is the following entry:—"Ex dono Johannis Ingeram, ut frater specialiter fieret ejusdem loci, in orationibus et elemosinis Monachorum, ii. thoftz in eadem villa [i.e. Middlesburch] et ix. acras t'ræ in Brigeflat, et communam pasturæ in Merse Fittis." Merely premising that this is the donation conveyed by No. 133, it is to be remarked that there is some uncertainty as to the parentage and immediate connections of the grantor of this charter, No. 133 and No. 137. The entry in the Memorial of course gives a limit downwards to the date of the donation. It must have been before 1070; it may have been very many years earlier. But the "Conventio" between the houses of Whitby and Gyseburn, No. 271, mentioning the "feudum" of John Ingelram as it does, leaves no doubt that he was in the position to make such donations even before 1135. In other words, if he had succeeded to the fee in question by inheritance, his predecessor had deceased at least some sensible space of time before the date of the "Conventio." Now it is apparent from the final clauses of the Gysburn with his daughter and son-in-law, grants to the Cell of Midlesburgh ten acres in Moresdale, which Robert Ravenkill and his son William had released to them.

Robertus filius Ernisi, et Adelina, filia mea, dedimus et conc. Deo et S. Hýldæ de Midelesbur[c], x. acras t'ræ—scil. CXXXII. RADULFUS FILIUS ROBERTI DE EODEM. [M. 10.]

Endowment charter, appearing moreover in both copies of the said charter at the commencement of the Chartulary, that in 1119 the fee in question was in the hands of William Engelram, and the presumption is that he was the father of John, who, in the confirmation by Peter de Brus II. of all the donations which the men of his fee had made to Gysburn, is named as the giver of the carucate specified in the Foundation charter. Probably this implies more than merely a subsequent confirmation by John Yngelram—rather that he united with his (?) father in the gift, or that the father died so soon after the Foundation charter was executed that John Yngelram became de facto the donor of the carucate in question. Contemporary with John Yngelram, at or about 1130-1135, was Walter Ingelram, sub-feudatory of Brus, as John was at Arusum and Middlesburgh, at Ingelby Arncliffe, and the question of relationship between them, as to its existence and its degree, naturally suggests itself. Quite possibly they were brothers, a view not discredited by the fact that Walter's son and heir was also called William. That there was some connection between John and Walter, whether that of brotherhood or not, is rendered more probable by the fact that Robertus filius Ernisi, John Yngelram's son-in-law, is a witness to a charter to Rivaulx by Walter Ingelram of Arncliffe and his mother Holdiarda.—(Cott. MS. Julius D. 1, No. 77.)

<sup>6</sup> M. Tanton. There are certainly two persons with this name, of frequent appearance, especially as witnesses, in this series of deeds, and in Brus deeds, and others in the Gyseburn Chartulary; for the period of time covered by such appearances is too long to permit it to be supposed that only one and the same person is intended. Thus it is to be assumed that the date of the present charter may be as early as 1140, or perhaps earlier, and that it cannot possibly be later than 1160 or 1165, while William de Tameton, Seneschal to Peter de Brus I., continues to be met with years after that Baron's death; or, in other words, the period of time involved must be seventy years, may be ninety. Probably the William de Tameton here named is the father of William de Tameton, the Seneschal, and the donor who is named in the Memorial (p. 7) as giving two acres of land in Marton.

<sup>9</sup> These local names are of great interest, many of them from a philological point of view, and all of them as of possible aid in identifying the ancient property of the Abbey, in at least those cases where surviving designations help the inquiries of the antiquary. The alterations on the face of the country, made by the extensive enclosures of last century, and by the still more recent substitution of new and wider divisions between the fields of the various farms under the exigencies of improving agriculture, have destroyed for ever the opportunity of recovering many of these old names; but how many still remain may be seen in the sheets of the Ordnance Survey, and still more in the estate-books of the various owners, and learnt from the mouths of their different tenants. It would indeed be strange if it were not so; for, to give but one illustration, and that from the township mainly concerned in the present charter, the Gisburn charters per se afford a list of scarcely less than ninety local names in the township of Ormsby alone. All the local names mentioned in this deed are found there, once, or several times. Laddegate is in Marton; Buirtrekelde, Buirtrekeldehirst, Northlangpeselandes, Westlangpeselandes, as well as Peselandes simply, are also found in that township, and the 150 names of the kind given for these two townships only might afford material for an interesting and instructive essay. Buirtrestub—in the present vernacular “Bo’ttrestub” (elder-stub)—tells its own tale; but it is comparatively silent beside such names as Buirtrekeldehirst, Elvescarebrec, Uverneudic, Uverblalandes, Bradderbremwith, Milemerke, and numbers of others; while such a word as Markemot—met with in two charters once belonging to Wykeham Priory, and lent to the editor by the Dowager Viscountess Downe—connected with the parish of Wykeham, is of singular interest, and that of interest in divers connections.

<sup>2</sup> Nicholas, it is nearly certain, was Abbot still in 1132 (see Mr. Hodgson Hinde's Preface to Symeon of Durham, vol. i. p. xxxi), but how long after there are no means of ascertaining. Young (p. 259) says of him—"He appears to have governed the monastery about ten or twelve years," but he assigns no reason or ground for such an assumption. But as the date of Benedict's resignation—viz., 1148—is known, the date of the present confirmation lies between 1145 and 1148.

<sup>3</sup> Thingwala in the Memorial. One of the most remarkable, if not actually the most remarkable, of all the words or names in the Chartulary. It remained for the editor of the present volume to be the first to call attention to it. In the Glossary of the Cleveland Dialect, Introd. p. 12, note, he writes—“This name is so marked that it is difficult to conceive it should never have attracted attention from any local historian or antiquary before. ‘Tingwall, hvor, som navnet (þinga völlr) antyder, Öernes Hovedthing gjennem Aarhundreder blev holdt,’ as Worsaae says of the famous Thingwal of Shetland, are words fully as expressive, beyond doubt, and as capable of application in the case of the Whitby Thingwala, as in Chester, Orkney, Ross-shire, or Shetland itself. It was, as surely as in these other cases, the hovedthing, or principal political and judicial meeting-place for the district; and it speaks very intelligibly of the extent to which the district was not only under the influence of, but inhabited by, men of Northern or Danish origin, that such a place of meeting should have existed in Cleveland.”

<sup>3</sup> If this refers to a reality, and is not a mere figure of speech, it testifies to a strangely different condition of temperature and atmosphere from that which prevails in the nineteenth century. It is by no means impossible that it may have been so, when one reflects on the present denuded condition of the district, and what used to be the order of things when more than half of the present area, exclusive of the moors, was covered with dense forest, and when, besides this, large pine-growing tracts, every here and there, prevailed where there are now merely peat-producing swamps.

<sup>1</sup> Charlton, p. 201, construes this phrase "half of a soaring sparrow-hawk" without further comment. Young, p. 305, note, adverting to this, says :—"Sparverius, or rather spervarius, is indeed used in old charters to signify a sparrow-hawk; but half a sparrow-hawk could be of no value, unless we understand the term to mean half the price of one. Perhaps 'dimidium spervariumsorum' may denote half a flight (or set) of sparrow-hawks. After all, as the original word is much contracted, and may be read various ways (!), it very probably has another meaning which remains to be discovered." The meaning is clear; sorus simply bearing reference to the prevailing colour of the plumage of bird in its first year, while the dimidius merely implies that the service for the whole carucate in question had originally been one young sparrow-hawk.

<sup>1</sup> M. Hornegard. Both Young and Charlton deal with the absurd fable—for it can hardly be called legend—which professes to explain the origin of the service called Horngarth, the former at pp. 308-314, the latter, pp. 125-132, and both of them expose the historical misstatements and contradictions involved in it; but both of them are equally at a loss to assign a reasonable explanation of either origin or object in its place. Young says—“What was the use of this garth it is not so easy to ascertain. Perhaps it was the Abbot's coal-yard, where the coals for the monastery were delivered and laid up; or it might be, as Charlton conjectures, a kind of store-yard, where goods were landed and deposited.” Charlton's guesses, or some of them, will be found at p. 128. There is no need to deal with any of them in detail; they are all equally unsatisfactory, not to say absurd. There can be no question as to the antiquity of the service, inasmuch as in No. 265 Abbot Benedict, in renewing to William de Percy, son of Richard de Percy de Dunsley, the plenary grant of that territory as previously enjoyed by his father, specifies a yearly payment of two marks in lieu of all other services, “excepto Hornegarth quantum ad terram suam pertinet.” This carries back the existence of the service in question to the times of the Founder, the aforesaid Richard de Percy being his son. There can be equally little in the way of question as to the comprehensive nature of the obligation to render the said service; it seems clearly to have been compulsory on all the “homines,” or sub-feudatories, of the Abbey. Charlton notes this, p. 130, specifying, and quite correctly, those who held Dunsley, Sneton, Everley, Uggelbardby, Sleights, Fylingdales, and inferring the same of all the homagers in the Liberty. The only real questions are as to the nature and extent of the service itself. That it was the making up of a fence of some sort may be assumed as a matter of course. That the fence was a very real one, and of considerable extent, is sufficiently indicated by the fact that enough wood was required for making the part allotted to only one of the tenants or homagers, to make it worth the while of the men employed, to do a bit of peculation with the surplus, and, more inferentially, that it required the labour of a number of men to complete such part. See No. 380, fourth article, wherein both of these positions are amply supported, Sneton being the place, and Alexander de Percy the person, in question; and wherein, moreover, the question of the personal service of the various “homines”

who had to render the service of making the Horngarth is effectually disposed of. It was Alexander de Percy's "men" (homines), and not himself, who had to do the work. That the hedge or fence, whatever its object, and substantially made, as we have seen, began or ended near the place where the present farcical sticking in of small sticks is performed is not at all improbable; and that it was of dimensions and extent adequate to the purposes for which hedges made of strong stakes, with wattled brushwood between, are usually constructed, is quite beyond doubt. Taking into consideration the time of year at which the work had to be done, there can, it seems, be but little doubt that it was the customary annual restoration of the fence of the common arable lands of the Abbey, after the completion of the spring-sowing, and that the fence was one designed to resist the incursions of horned cattle as well as of sheep, goats, and swine. It is reasonable to suppose that in the vicinity of such a town as Whitby undoubtedly grew to be under the Abbey, and particularly when we bear in mind the many special permissions conceded to the Abbey to enclose the land granted to them, if so they desired, the need for such annual restoration would grow less and less, and disappear long before it did in more country places. But the service itself, and its name, would still remain (as is the case to this day with not a few feudal services in many parts of the kingdom), and notwithstanding the formal relaxation which evidently took place, or perhaps because of that very relaxation, at some time in the sixteenth century probably, a myth would be invented to account for both one and the other. As to the name itself, as a name only:—of course the Abbot's bailiff may have formally summoned the service-bound builders of the hedge by sound of horn, and the old horn itself remains to attest the antiquity of the custom, in its existing form, by its frail and battered condition; albeit there is nothing about the said horn to suggest a greater antiquity than, if so great as, that assigned a few lines above to the legend itself. It may possibly be a sixteenth century, it certainly is not a twelfth century, relic. If the Abbot's bailiff did thus formally summon the builders—although there is no reference to the fact in the record of the settlement with Alexander de Percy, and although it is quite certain from the same record that the actual, or de facto, summons or warning was otherwise made—for de Percy's men often made a claim to have a three days' warning—the name might so originate. But it is not likely. And certainly it is at least as likely that its first element came from the horned stock—and the great quantities of horns that have been dug up in the Monastery kitchen-midding, at the foot of the bank on the Abbey side of Church Street, amply show that, and how, the said stock were horned—which pastured over the stubbles after harvest was gathered in, and the hitherto protecting hedges pulled down, and which were again excluded on the return of spring from the newly-sown lands by renewed or repaired fences in each returning year.

<sup>3</sup> Some notice has been already taken (No. 109, note) of the origin of this family, which, besides its connection with the Abbey, as shown in No. 220, in this, and the following charter, and many others, also furnished an Abbot about the middle of the fourteenth century. It may however be found more convenient to give a more detailed notice at a future page. (See No. 220.) At present it may suffice to say that the grantor of this charter is grandson of Aschetin or Aschetil, who first took the territorial designation of de Haukesgarth.

Will. de Haukesgarth, with consent of his wife and heir, grants to Whitby a bovat in Haukesgarth, also two other bovates there, an acre of meadow, and eight acres of arable land in Little Bothem, two acres in Northmanby, eight and a half acres in Brackenflat; also gives the homage of Ric. de Fyling with <sup>1</sup> The existing abbot's own name was Roger, and as the name stands so in both copies, it may at first sight be presumed that the said brother, taken as brother of the reigning abbot, was either illegitimate or brother on one parent's side only. No. 166, however, by the insertion of the name Johannis after Abbatis, puts a very different face on the matter. This witness, Roger, was brother of Abbot Roger's predecessor, John de Evesham.

<sup>2</sup> Cousin of Thomas de Haukesgarth, grantor of the last charter, being son of Roger, and grandson of Ascatin or Aschetil. Reginald and Adam were his brothers. See notes to last charter and to No. 220.

Nos vero v. bov. præd., cum earum pert., dicto Rogero et hæ. suis varantizabimus quamdiu advocati nostri nobis dictam t'ram varantizare poterunt. Et in hujus concessionis nostræ test. sig. Capit. nostri pr. scr. apposuimus. Hiis testibus. Gilberto de Atona. Willelmo Buscel.<sup>2</sup> Roberto de Irtona. Willelmo filio suo; et aliis.

Abbot Roger grants to Rog., son of Francals de Irton, five bovates in Irton, to be held for ever by the payment of half a mark annually.

CLXXIII. CONFIRMATIO ALEXANDRI DE MIDELTONA
DE III SOLIDIS.

Sciant tam pr. quam fut. quod ego, Alexander de Mideltona, concedo et, præ. cartæ testimonio, confirmo donationem quam Aze filius Wýmundi<sup>3</sup> donavit S. Petro et S. Hildæ de Wýtebi, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., scil. iii. s. redditus de feudo meo in Midelton, de bov. illa quam Raghanaldus tenet, pro me et pro a. patris mei et matris meæ, et pro a. antecess. meorum. Hujus confirmationis testis est Fossardus, prece mea. Willelmus Aguil'. Warinus, filius Hugonis. Willelmus filius Walteri. Ricardus de Evesham; et alii.

Omn. S. M. Ecclesiæ filiis, tam pr. quam fut., Robertus, filius Willelmi de Aýketuna,<sup>4</sup> salutem. Sciatis omnes quod ego, Robertus, filius Willelmi de Ayketun,<sup>4</sup> hac mea carta conc.<sup>5</sup> et conf. cartam avi mei Roberti de Aýketuna,<sup>4</sup> et carta[m] patris mei, Willelmi de Aýketuna,<sup>4</sup> quas fecerunt Ecclesiæ de Wýteby<sup>6</sup> super adquietatione<sup>7</sup> villæ de Suthfeling.<sup>8</sup> Et ego totum clam[i]um de Suthfeling,<sup>8</sup> cum omn. pert. suis, et quicquid juris in eadem villa videbar habere, quietum clamavi de me, et de hæ. meis, Eccl. de Wýteby<sup>6</sup> in perp. et lib. elemosinam.<sup>9</sup> Itaque nec ego, nec aliquis hæ. meorum aliquam calumpniam vel vexationem monachorum præd. Ecclesiæ, Robert, son of Will. de Ayketon, confirms the donations of his grandfather and father, and releases all South Fyling to Whitby.

de eadem villa amplius faciemus: et ad hæc firmiter et fideliter tenenda juravi et affidavi quod, nec per me, neque per alium consilio meo, præd. Ecclesia dampnum de præd. villa sustinebit; sed si aliquis præd. Monachis calumpnia[m] de præd. v. fecerit, non tenebor warentizare contra aliquos, nisi de me et de hæ. meis. Hiis testibus. Waltero, Capellano de Wýtebi.<sup>1</sup> Thoma Capellano. Johanne, Capellano de Ugelbardebi. Waltero de Duneslei; et aliis.

CLXXV. CARTA MATILDIS DE GALMETONA. [M. 110.]

<sup>2</sup> See No. 182, which, saving only the difference as to name and quality of grantor, is word for word coincident with this. There it is Ricardus de Boshale, here Matilda de Galmeton. The witnesses also, so far as given in this deed, are the same as in No. 182, in which six more are specified. Beyond doubt they were also witnesses to the present document—in other words, the two deeds were executed at the same time. It is almost imperative to suppose that one is the original concession, and the other the confirmation; but from the wording of the two it is not possible to distinguish the one from the other. The deed, of which I proceed to give a copy, and which is one of the Wykeham series, will probably be seen to afford reasonable proof that the present deed is the confirmation:—"Anno Incarnationis m<sup>o</sup>cc<sup>o</sup> tricesimo quarto, ad festum Omn. Sanctorum, omnibus hoc scr. vis. vel aud., Matilda de Galmetone, salutem. Noveritis me, in vid. mea et lib. potest. mea, d. etc. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Matildæ, filiæ Ricardi de Bozhale, et Mabillæ, uxori suæ, quæ Mabilla fuit filia Roberti de Steitevilla, ii. toftas in Staxtone—scil. Charne'ckes et propinquoires versus occid., cum omn. pert. suis i. v. et extra. Dedi etiam dictæ Matildæ totam t'ram meam quæ mea est, et dare possum, inter Fordum et Staxtone, quæ vocatur Depedale, sine ullo reten., cum omn. pert. suis, etc. . . . salva tanta pastura Conventui de Bridlington quantam cartæ Ricardi de Gaumeton et Henrici filii sui continent, pro hom. et serv. suo. Tenend. et hab. . . . de me et de hæ. meis, etc. Reddendo inde ann. . . . michi et hæ. meis unam libram cymini, etc. Et ego, dicta Matilda et hæ. mei war. tam dictas toftas quam dict. t'ram dictæ Matildæ, filiæ dicti Ricardi, ut dict. est superius, c. o. h., et defendemus. Et ego Ricardus de Bozhale, hæres primo-dictæ Matildæ hanc donationem animo benevolenti bene concessi, et sig. meo confirmavi. Hiis testibus. Rob. de Acclum. Henr. fil. Radulphi. Ricardo de Bozhale. Henr. de Binigtone. Henr. de Bromtone. Ricardo de Bozhale. David. Reginaldo de Langetoft; et aliis." It will be noticed there are two witnesses named Ric. de Bozhale; but there can be no doubt that the grantor of No. 182 is the "hæres" of the grantor of the present deed, mentioned in the above document.

et E. S. Petri et S. Hildæ de Wytebi, et mon. ibid. Deo serv., unam carucatam terræ in v. de Forēduna,<sup>1</sup> cum omn. pert. suis, infra v. et extra, et cum<sup>2</sup> omnibus hominibus præd. t'ram tenentibus, et cum omni sequela eorum—scil. Roberto filio<sup>3</sup> Walteri, cum omni sequela sua; Willelmo filio ejus, cum omni sequela sua; Thoma filio Willelmi, cum omni sequela ejus; Johanne filio Suuani, cum omni sequela sua;<sup>4</sup> Willelmo filio Levine,<sup>5</sup> cum omni sequela sua; Agnete vidua, cum omni sequela sua; in lib. et perp. elem., faciendo forinsecum serv., quantum pertinet ad unam carucatam terræ, unde x. carucatæ faciunt feodum unius militis. Et ego, præd.<sup>6</sup> Matildis, et hæc. mei waurantizabimus præd. car. t'ræ, cum omn. pert. suis, præd. Domui de Wytebi et mon. ibid. Deo serv., c. o. h. in perpetuum. Hanc cartam optuli ego Matilda, A. G. m<sup>o</sup>cc<sup>o</sup>xxxii., super altare S. P. et S. H. de Wyteby die Sanctorum Cosmo' et Damiani. Hiis testibus.<sup>7</sup> Johanne de Eketon, Johanne de Rudestaine, militibus. Galfrido de Thorni; et aliis.

Sciant omnes, pr. et fut., quod ego, Hugo<sup>8</sup> filius Girardi de Atona, d. et c. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et Ecclesiæ<sup>9</sup> S. P. et S. Hýldæ de Wyteby, et mon. ib. Deo serv., pro s. a. meæ et antecess. meorum, in lib. et p. et perp. elem., iii<sup>or</sup> acras t'ræ, et unam rodam et dim., et duas percatas t'ræ, cum pert., in Atona, lib., solutas et quietas ab omni sec. serv. et exactione, sicuti aliqua elem. liberius et quietius possit dari—scil. quartam

Hugh, son of Gerard de Aton, grants to Whitby 4 acres 1½ rood and 2 perches in Aton, specifying the same.

partem crofti mei, et quartam partem t'ræ meæ in Larelandis,<sup>1</sup> et quartam partem t'ræ meæ in Whitflat,<sup>2</sup> et quartam partem t'ræ meæ in Gretlandis,<sup>3</sup> cum omn. pert. suis in bosco, in plano, in viis, in semitis, in pratis et pasturis, et in omn. aliis libert. et aisiis. ad præd. t'ram pertinentibus. ## CLXXVII. DE QUINQUE BOVATIS IN YRTONA. [M. 109.]

Sciant omnes hanc cartam vis. vel aud., quod ego, Johannes de Atona,<sup>4</sup> conc. d. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et mon. S. Hildæ de Wýtebi, pro s. a. <sup>2</sup> Two or three other Standards will be found mentioned in these documents—as the pertica of Pickering, etc.

<sup>3</sup> This locality, under the spelling Leke, is found in two or three of Lady Downe's Wykeham deeds; in two especially as comprising, if not consisting of, meadow—"pratum." "Una placia prati, in prato de Wycham quod vocatur Leke," is one instance; "totum pratum meum in Leke, . . . quod quidem pratum fuit aliquando Alani de Preston, patris mei" another. Elena de Preston is the grantor, but it is not possible to make out the relationship with Gervase de Preston, of the above deed.

Abbot Benedict re-grants to John Arundel the advowson of the Chapel of Sneton, with certain

Sciunt omnes, videntes et audientes has litteras, quod ego, Benedictus,<sup>1</sup> Abbas Witebyensis Ecclesiæ, assensu Capituli nostri et consilio, reddidi et concessi Johanni Arundel,<sup>2</sup> et hæc. suis, in feudum et hæreditatem, advocationem Capellæ de Snetona; ita quod Johannes et hæc. sui, descendentibus vel morientibus personis Capellæ de Snetona, congruam personam Archiepiscopo præsentabunt. Persona vero de Snetona Ecclesiæ S. Petri de Witeby decem (45) solidos per annum reddet—scil. quinque sol. ad f. S. Martini, et quinque s. ad Pentecosten. Corpora <sup>1</sup> In No. 458 we have a charter by Abbot Benedict, dated 1148, stating at the outset that "motu proprio, irrequisito consensu Capituli mei," he has instituted, that same year, a rector in the chapel of Sneton, "ista conventionem ut quilibet rector ejusdem, qui pro tempore fuerit in posterum reddet Ecclesiæ S. Petri de Whiteby decem solidos annuatim etc." The document then continues: "Corpora vero defunctorum," etc., exactly as in the present deed, to the end. That deed must, of course, have preceded this, and probably with no great space of time intervening. Possibly the presentation was made with some definite view as to the arrangement now made touching the advowson of Sneton church or chapel. It should be remarked, moreover, that the expression "reddidi et concessi," carries with it the certainty that in some sense or shape this advowson in question had already been in the grantee's possession. It would almost seem as if the Abbot had taken previous steps with the intention of transferring the advowson to John Arundel, but those steps had proved abortive, and that now, the hindering causes having been removed, the said transference was finally and legally made. It is at least open to surmise, that his first attempt had been made during the vacancy of the living, and that finding he could not legally convey the advowson under such circumstances, he had made a rather hurried presentation, and then had proceeded to re-transfer the advowson according to his first intention.

vero defunctorum eidem capellæ pertinentium in cimiterio B. Mariæ de Witebý sepelientur. Nullus vero ad cimiterium B. Petri deferetur, nec quicquam<sup>1</sup> illuc ducet. Dominus vero villæ, et Clericus, absque omni licentia Personæ capellæ attributæ, in cimiterio S. Petri sepelietur, si in vita sua elegerit, vel amici post mortem p(e)tierint. Missam vero Snetonæ Persona non celebret pro sepeliendo, nisi prius Personæ de Witebý mandetur; et idem si venire neglexerit, vel non poterit, Persona de Snetona fideliter pro communi utilitate servitium faciat. Quicquid<sup>2</sup> vero in die sepulturæ pro aliquo defunctorum offeretur sive in capella de Snetona, sive in Ecclesia S. Mariæ de Witebý, et quicquid<sup>2</sup> aliquis moriturus capellæ, vel Ecclesiæ B. Mariæ de Witebý in vita sua convenienter diviserit, ita ut terra ipsius non vastetur, in duo dividatur, et dimidium capellæ remaneat, et dim. Ecclesiæ de Witebý. Et similiter, quicquid<sup>2</sup> pro orationibus vel celebrationibus missarum sacerdos percipiet, similiter dividatur. Et servitium pro defunctis inter eos dividatur. Persona vero de Snetona præsens, et omnes successores ejus, fide astringentur se nulla arte quæsitueros ut Ecclesia de Witebý [ratione]<sup>3</sup> conventionis hic inscriptæ detrimentum incurrat.

Omnibus has litteras vis. vel aud. Rogerus Burrigan<sup>4</sup> salutem. Noverit univ. v. me, de voluntate et assensu Matildis, uxoris meæ, et hæ. meorum vendidisse D'no meo Rogero, Abbati de Witebý, totam t'ram, cum ædificiis et omnibus aysiammentis, quam tenui de eodem D'no meo in villa de Filing, pro quatuor marcis argenti, quas mihi dedit in magna necessitate mea, sol(ut)am et quietam de me et hæ. meis in perpetuum. Ego vero, dictus Rogerus, una cum uxore mea, tactis sacro-sanctis, juravi et affidavi in manu dicti D'ni mei, pro me et dicta uxore mea, et hæ. meis, quod nunquam in præd. t'ra aliquam faciemus calumpniam unde Domus de Wýtebý aliquam possit incurrere jacturam. CLXXXIII. (No heading.)<sup>3</sup>

Omnibus hoc scr. vis. vel aud. Willelmus,<sup>4</sup> Abbas de Whiteby, et Conv. ejusdem loci, æternam in D'no salutem. Noverit univ. v. nos d. c. et hac pr. c. conf. Radulfo de Midelsburh', filio Willelmi de Foxtona, pro hom. et serv. (suo), unum toftum et croftum, cum pert. suis, in v. de Midelsburh'—illud, scil. quod Robertus filius Benedicti quondam de nobis tenuit in eadem v.: Tenend. et hab. dicto Radulfo et hæ. suis in feudo et hæred. de nobis, lib. qu. et pacifice, cum omn. pert. suis et aysiam. suis. i. v. et e. ad dictum toftum et croftum pertinentibus: Reddendo inde ann. nobis duos sol., med. ad Pent. et aliam med. ad f. S. Martini in hyeme, pro omni serv., exact. et open to question that this is a later Will. de Percy de Dunesley. Richard de Percy de Dunesley, son of William hote lesgernuns, died before 1148. William de Percy, his son, in a charter (No. 74) executed, it is likely, not long afterwards, mentions his heir, but not by name; although among the witnesses Bartholomew and Hugo are named, and described as his "hæredes," there is nothing in the charters to indicate who was this William's heir, but there is some reason to believe it was Hugo; and if so, the present witness is the head of the family in Abbot Roger's time.

<sup>2</sup> The reading of this word is uncertain. It may be Kethon, or Kethou. The former might be a bad orthography for Kayton, but Kethou is more reasonable.

demanda sæculari. Et ut hoc nostrum donum stabile permaneat in perpetuum, pr. scriptum appositione sig. Capit. nostri roboravimus. [Folio 46 is blank on both sides.]

Willelmus, Rex<sup>1</sup> Anglorum, omn. fidelibus suis, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et carta mea confirmasse Ecclesiæ de Wýteby, et Serloni Priori, et mon. ejusdem loci, in perpetu[u]m, super omnes t'ras suas, adquisitas et acquirendas, et super omnes homines suos ubilibet habitantes, omnes libertates et liberas consuetudines, quas Regia potestas alicui ecclesiæ dare potest liberiores. Concedo etiam et confirmo ipsis et omn. hominibus suis, ubicunque vadant et emant vel vendant aliquid, omnem quietantiam de omn. consuetudinibus et demandis Regum et Comitum et Baronum, Dominorum et omnium ballivorum suorum. Et prohibeo, super forisfacturam regiam, ne ullus aliquis hominum aliquo modo se intromittat de terris eorum; nec de hominibus suis ubicunque fuerint; nec de forestis; nec de silvestribus bestiis infra terminos suos; nec de aquis eorum in Portu de Wýteby, vel alibi; nec de possessionibus aliis, ecclesiasticis vel laicis; ne de aliqua re quæ pertineat ad Ecclesiam de Wýteby, nisi ipsi Monachi, et ballivi sui, et ministri, quos ipsi providerint. Teste, Willelmo de Perci. Westmonasterium.<sup>2</sup>

Henricus, Rex Angliæ et dux Normanniæ et Aquitanniæ, et Comes Andegaviæ, Archiep'is, Ep'is, Abbatibus, Comitibus, Baronibus, Justiciariis, Vicecomitibus, Ministris,<sup>4</sup> Præpositis, et omn. fidelibus suis, Francis et Anglis, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et confirmasse, Regia auctoritate, Deo et Ecclesiæ

S. P. et S. Hyldæ de Wýtebý, et Abbati et mon. ibid. Deo serv., omnibusque hominibus eidem Ecclesiæ pertinentibus, omnes libertates et consuet. quas habet Ecclesia S. Johannis de Beverlaco et S. <sup>2</sup> M. ascribes this confirmation to King John, but, it would almost seem, wrongly. In A. it is coincident with the last as far as it goes, and is dated at the same place, but one day earlier, and attested by the same witnesses. There is a copy of a charter of confirmation by King John in Dodsworth (120, f. 2), which however is by no means coincident with this, although describing the boundaries as this does. It is dated March 1, 5 John, at York. This will be found below in No. 580, and it will be observed that it, save differences of spelling, is coincident with the corresponding part of No. 191.

<sup>6</sup> There can be little doubt that the initial T. given in this and the two following deeds is for Thomas rather than for Thurstan, for in No. 190 we find Archbishop Thomas's name associated in a confirmation by the same monarch with those of Nigel de Albin and the Sheriff Osbert. This would place the date of the present charter and its successors between 1108 and 1114.

Aug.). The former date may be taken to mean December 31, 1131; and if so, his presidency was a very short one indeed. It is clear that this confirmation must date in either 1131 or the first half of 1132.

1184. Assuming our Robert to be identical with Le Neve's R . . ., he must have been archdeacon a little before Le Neve's first date. It may be observed also that in No. 296, in which this charter is recapitulated, after Ailred's name comes in "Bernardus, Prior de Bridlington," who was prior "c. 1145." I append here abstract of a deed from Dodsworth, vii. p. 11, headed "Carta Henrici Archiepi Ebor.," which is of interest not only as being by the same archbishop, but addressed to the same dean, and witnessed, to a great extent at least, by the same dignitaries as the present deed:—"Henr. D. G. etc. R. Decano etc. . . . Hac itaque consideratione ecclesiam de Kerandbi Canonicis regularibus de Berlintonæ, salvo jure Eborac. Ecclesiæ et consuet. Episc. in perp. elem., cum omn. pert. et capellis ejus, confirmamus. Hii sunt testes. Savaricus, Abbas Ebor. Ailredus, Abbas de Rievall'. Rodbertus, Archidiaconus. Cuthbertus, Prior Giseburniæ. Gaufridus, Prior de Kirkeham. Ricardus, Abbas de Witebi. Radulfus, Canon. Beverlacensis." Of course, Abbot Richard I. (c. 1130-48). The two deeds may have been signed at the same time.

<sup>1</sup> William de Gray, consecrated 1143, deprived 1147; restored 1153, died 1154. He was but thirty days in York after his restoration, and then died. According to Burton, Ranulf, Cuthbert's predecessor, was still Prior of Giseburne in 1144, and as Cuthbert is a witness to the present deed, it must consequently have been granted 1145-1147, or in the short interval succeeding the restoration. Odensberg or Othenesberg is without doubt the true form, and of course bespeaks an old Danish origin. Whether Odenberg or Odensberg replaced an older Anglian name cannot now be known, but it is worthy of note that a possible Anglian form, Hreosabeorh or Hreosebeorh, which is at least a possible origin for Roseberry, would be exactly synonymous with Otheneberg or Odensberg, either word meaning “the berg, or precipitous hill, of the rushing one.” It is very difficult to account for the change from Othenesberg, Oonsbergh, etc., to Roseberry on any supposition. Not the least probable may be that there is in the latter the popularly preserved recollection of the old Anglian name.

His son Walter, temp. Stephen, gave a fine of £15 for leave to marry whom he would (Rot. Pipe). Insuperque quinquaginta acras t'ræ, quas pater meus præd. CCIII. AMFRIDUS DE CANCI DE DIMIDIA CARUCATA T'RÆ.

Notum sit omnibus, tam pr. quam fut., vid. vel audientibus has litteras, quod ego, Amfridus de Canci, d. et conc. Ecclesiæ S. P. et S. Hýldæ de Wýteby, monachisque ib. [Deo] serv., in perp. elem., dimid. carucatam t'ræ in Scirpincbec, cum toftis et croftis, et pratis et pascuis, et pastura cum propriis anima[li]bus domini per totum, communique pastura<sup>1</sup> villæ et cæteris ad eandem terram pertinentibus, lib. et quietam ab omni servitio seculari et exactione et consuetudine, tam ad Regem quam ad me pertinente, in pur. et perp. elem. a<sup>2</sup> me et de hæ. meis possidendam. Istam vero prænominatam t'ram dedi Ecclesiæ de Wýteby, et hac carta mea confirmavi, pro me et uxore mea, et pro liberis meis, et pro animabus patris et matris meæ, et animabus<sup>3</sup> antecessorum meorum, et pro quinquaginta acris restaurandis quas injuste subtraxi de centum acris<sup>4</sup> quas pater meus eidem Ecclesiæ jam antea dederat. Hujus donationis testes sunt:—Helyas Presbiter; Nicholaus Clericus;<sup>5</sup> Gervasius Clericus; Johannes Clericus; Gosfridus Brito de Buketorp, dapifer Anfridi; Serlo de Joltorp; Willelmus Burdun; Hugo filius Fulconis.<sup>6</sup>

Anfrid de Canci grants to Whitby half a carucate of land at Scirpenbec, with extensive pasturage rights, and confirms the same, towards the restoration of fifty acres unjustly taken from the Abbey.

<sup>4</sup> No gift of precisely 100 acres by Walter de Canci is anywhere specified. The Memorial entry (p. 5) is "Ex dono Walt. de Canci et Anfridi filii ejus, eccl. de Scirpenbec, et in eadem villa l. acras t'ræ," which is the number specified and localised in No. 361. But in the confirmation by Henry II. (No. 193) six bovates of land, belonging to the Church, are named, together with other four bovates in Scirpenbech, and besides them four score acres of land and five cultures in Scirpenbec, all the gift of Walter de Canci and his son Anfrid. It appears that at Skirpenbeck sixteen carucates went to make up a knight's fee (of 640 acres), which, with eight bovates in a carucate, limits the extent of a bovat to five acres. (See Kirkby's Inquest, pp. 442-445.) On this computation the ten bovates just named would make up fifty acres, besides which were eighty acres and five cultures. It is therefore to be supposed that these five cultures made up the eighty acres to one hundred, and that the present deed makes good the diminution of that number to fifty by Anfrid's deed, now repented of. But see No. 381, and last note.

<sup>9</sup> M. Houkesgard. The author of this deed, whose name appears under the varying forms Ascatinus, Aschetinus, Ascheutinus, Astinus, Aschetillus, Astillus, etc., is the founder of the not unimportant local family de Haukesgarth. In No. 263 he has grant, subject to certain conditions, from Abbot William de Percy, of Haukesgarth and Normanby, "in feudo et hæreditate," in exchange for Newham, and as he is described as "filius Willelmi," it was open to inference, if other means of information had been wanting, that his father was William de Newham. In No. 405, however, the inference is proved to be entirely correct, inasmuch as among the witnesses to No. 28, according to the Inspeximus copy in the deed named, are "Willelmus de Newham et filius ejus Aschetinus de Houkesgarth." In the present deed he obtains licence from the Abbot—though not from him who immediately succeeded Abbot William—to build a chapel at Haukesgarth, and to endow it. In No. 240, among the witnesses are "Astinus de Houkesgart et duo filii ejus." It is not clear if this means two of his sons, or his two sons; probably the latter. But there is nowhere in these charters any absolute identification of these two sons. Yet William de Haukesgard and Roger de Haukesgard are both so named, or rather named under such circumstances that there can be no reasonable doubt as to the fact of their being Asketil's sons; and probably William, as named after his grandfather, would be the eldest son and heir. From William de Haukesgarth springs a son Thomas, who again has issue, by his wife Juliana, of a son Thomas. (See No. 163.) Roger, Aschetin's second son, has issue, Reginald de Haukesgarth, Adam, and William de Haukesgard. Reginald's wife is named Eufemia (No. 164), while William's wife is Cecilia, their son being Adam (ib.). These two deeds bring us down to c. 1230-1240. In No. 475, as witnesses to a grant by Reginald de Haukesgart, Adam de Haukesgart and his son Thomas appear. This is no doubt Reginald, son of Roger, as above. In Nos. 476, 478, 479, deeds dating in the early part of the fourteenth century, we have a Nicholas de Haukesgarth, son of Thomas, who speaks of "Manerium meum de Haukesgarth," which makes it nearly certain that Thomas, son of Thomas, and grandson of William, the assumed eldest son of Ascatine, is the Thomas named as the father of the said Nicholas. In No. 480, also dated, like one of those last cited, in 1308, we have Adam, son of Nicholas de Haukesgarth, quitclaiming to Whitby all his right and claim in and to the aforesaid manor. At this time Thomas de Haukesgarth, who became Abbot in or immediately after 1322, must have been a monk at Whitby; and it is not unreasonable to assume that he was brother of Nicholas and uncle of Adam last named. That he was closely connected there can be no doubt.

<sup>3</sup> M. reads here "Ormesgr[r]iue inter dinteles," which is probably corrupt, and certainly throws no light on the suspicious word "Dhutelet." A "griff" in the Cleveland vernacular is a "deep narrow glen or valley, a ravine on a small or gentler scale" (Cleveland Glossary), but it is not possible to identify either Ormesgrif or Sitdregrif.

CCXXIII. QUIETA CLAMATIO RADULFI NUUEL DE REDDITU

Rad.

York, quit-claims to Whitby a rent of 5s.
at Whitby in exchange
rent at

Omn. Christi fidelibus has litteras vis. vel aud., Radulfus Nuuel de Eboraco, ætern. in D'no salutem. Noveritis me conc. et qu. clamasse de me et hæ. meis in perp. Deo et Eccl. S. P. et S. CCXXIV. DE DECIMA DOMINII DE WILTONA.

Alan de Ferlington, son of Rad.

bendarios Ecclesiæ et dividendam elemosinam Canonicorum,” and also a carucate of land, on certain conditions (somewhat curious in themselves), Robert de Brus, Agnes his wife, Adam his elder son, William son of the latter, and Robert de Brus, Juvenis, being among the witnesses. The latter, as well as William de Brus, Adam’s son, is a grandson of Robert de Brus, then of Danby, the founder of Gysburne, and this fact throws the date of the charter towards the latter part of Robert’s life, or to about the time alleged by Charlton. The present charter brings both Alan de Ferlington and his father Radulfus into connection with Wilton as lords thereof—the alienated tithes were the tithes of the “dominium;” and beyond doubt their connection with Wilton originated in their connection, as sub-feudatories, with the Fossards, who held of the Earl of Mortain, not only at Wilton but at Bulmer, Ferlington, Welburne, Lilling, etc., and were succeeded by the Mauleys in the seignory. As to the descent and connection of the Bulmers and Ferlingtons, in a Quo Warranto Roll of 21 Edw. I., is a record of a suit in which John de Bulmer is plaintiff, and the Prior of Helagh Park defendant, touching the advowson of the Hospital of S. Nicholas, Yarm. De Bulmer claims “quod quidam Alanus, antecessor suus, fuit in seisinâ de præd. advoc., ut de feodo et jure hæred., tempore D’ni Regis Ricardi, etc. . . . Et de ipso Alano, quia obiit s. h. etc., descendit jus cuidam Thomæ ut fratri et hæredi . . . et de ipso Thoma, quia obiit s. h. de se reforciabatur jus cuidam Stephano, fratri cujusdam Alani, avi præd. Alani, ut consanguineo et hæredi. Et de ipso Stephano descendit jus cuidam Johanni, ut filio et hæredi; et de ipso Johanni descendit jus cuidam Johanni ut filio et hæredi; et de ipso Johanne desc. jus isti Johanni qui nunc petit, ut filio et hæredi, etc.” We have thus Alan, the grandfather of Alan and Thomas de Wilton, identified as brother of Stephen de Bulmer, the great-grandfather of John de Bulmer, son of John de Bulmer, who, as “consanguineus et hæres,” succeeded to the Wilton inheritance on the decease of Thomas de Wilton (a priest), s.p. But Alan de Wilton’s father was Radulfus de Wilton. Dods-worth gives several extracts from the Chartulary of Helagh, and one three times over (vol. 116, f. 78<sup>b</sup>, etc.):—“Alan’ de Wilton pro animabus Mariæ uxoris suæ, et Radulfi patris sui, et Cecilie matris suæ,” his sisters, ancestors, and others, makes grant in Hutton Rudby, etc. We thus have Radulfus (de Bulmer) de Ferlington, father of the grantor of this charter, presumably by his wife Anfrida, and also of Stephen de Bulmer, immediate ancestor of the future John de Bulmer de Wilton. Alan de Ferlington, the said grantor, is succeeded in the lordship of Wilton by his son Radulfus, who drops the title de Ferlington in order to take that of de Wilton, and who in turn is succeeded by his son Alan de Wilton. As to Radulfus de

Johanna,
his wife, release to
lands in

CCXXVI. STEPHANUS DE ECCLESIA DE ATONA. [M. 16.]

Notum sit omnibus auditoris litteras istas, quod ego, Stephanus de Bolemer,<sup>5</sup> concedo et, monumento cartæ meæ, Wilton, we hear of him in the certificate of fees sent in to Henry II. on occasion of the marriage of his daughter in 1165 (Black Book of the Exchequer):—"Carta Bertram' de Bulmer:—Venerabili D'no meo, etc. Regi Angliæ . . . Radulfus de Wilton, feod. dim. militis tempore avi vestri et modo similiter." This date corresponds precisely with the date affixed to the present deed from other data. It is of course apparent on the face of it, that the Percy fee at Wilton was united with the Bulmer fee in the person of Radulf de Ferlington.

in a position to grant a confirmation of a benefaction by Robert de Mainill, or to make a further concession of property within the limits of the Mainill barony. As already noticed (Notes to No. 34), Cuthbert, who stands first among the witnesses, had ceased to be prior of Gysburne before 1181, having become prior between 1147 and 1153. All the information we have about Prior Hervisius in Burton, is that he ruled before 1196. His Priory was founded by Bertram de Bulmer, the last named among the witnesses except Ernald de Percy. He was still living in 1163. Ernald de Percy was living in 1165, but, as there is reason to believe, was dead before 1170, for "Adam de Brus r. c. de ccl. marcis pro hæredibus Roberti de Percy, quos habet in custodia sua, pro habenda terra Ernardi de Percy, avunculi eorum" (16 Henry II.). Robert de Percy and Ernaldus were the two sons of Ernald de Percy, who, with him, were witnesses to the Conventio between Gyseburne and Whitby [No. 271]. This would bring the date of the present deed between 1154 and 1170. Now Stephen de Meinill, probably grandson of Robert de Mainill primus — if not, his son — married Sibilla, sister of Stephen de Bulmer, and is said to have died in 1191. There is some uncertainty in the Meinill pedigrees as to which Stephen it was that married into the Bulmer family. But a charter of Robert de Meinill II., on f. 263 of the Gysburne Chartulary, settles the question, inasmuch as the first of the witnesses is "Stephano de Bulmer, avunculo meo." But still, in the absence of any special explanation of the fact, it is difficult to account for the powers involved in the present deed as possessed by merely a brother-in-law of the then baron. Neither is the identification of the Stephen de Bulmer under mention with the Stephen in the notes to No. 224 a matter of certainty. It is probable, perhaps; as also, assuming Dugdale's data to be verifiable and trustworthy, that Bertram and Stephen were contemporaries, possibly brothers. Dugdale makes Bertram de Bulmer Sheriff of Yorkshire in 1140, 115 $\frac{2}{3}$  and 116 $\frac{2}{3}$ , and he makes return of his fees in 1165 as above noticed. Stephen, heard of in 1161,-2,-3, also makes like and independent returns in 1165, and makes payment on them in 116 $\frac{7}{8}$ , but is succeeded by his son Thomas before 117 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The whole question requires investigation.

<sup>4</sup> M. Scinnergrive. It seems to be impossible now, owing to the change of local names during recent times, to identify the streams here named, or indeed any of the places specified, with rare exceptions. There are two becks which meet at the northern limit of Liverton, one of which is now called Kilton Beck, and the other White Cliff Beck, and which with their united streams flow on to Skinningrove. Scalebeck is probably Kilton Beck, but it is impossible to decide.

<sup>7</sup> M. Duncilghales. The reading in A. is uncertain. The last letter is inadequately formed: it may be meant for f, but, according to the reading in No. 247, no f is wanted. The last letter but one is c, as also in No. 247. The name is of interest as having the same final element as Streoneshalc.

releases to Whitby the
Fyling

Omn. S. M. filiis, tam pr. quam fut., Robertus filius Willelmi de Echetun,<sup>3</sup> salutem. Sciatis omnes quod ego Robertus, filius Willelmi de Eichelun,<sup>4</sup> reddidi, et optuli super altare de Wýteby, Deo et S. P. et S. Hildæ, monachisque ib. Deo serv., villam de Fieling, cum omn. pert. suis; et quicquid juris in eadem villa videbar habere quietum clamavi de me et de hæ. meis Eccles. de Wýteby in perp. et lib. elem., concedente et assensum præbente Willelmo filio meo. Insuper, vero, juravi super altare et super omnes sacrosanctas reliquias ejusdem Ecclesiæ me numquam aliquod rectum reclamaturum in prænominata villa de Fieling, neque aliquem per me; et ita renuntiavi juri meo quod videbar habere in illa villa. Et abbas Ric[ardus],<sup>5</sup> ex petitione mea, ibidem coram altari excommunicavit omnes qui antedictam [villam] a dominica mensa alienaverint, vel Ecclesiam de Wýtebi inde vexaverint, et maxime hæ. meos, si umquam contra hoc meum factum venire præsum[s]erint. Monachis de Wytebi. Ego vero et hæc. mei warentizare debemus præd. t'ram præf. Mon. c. o. h. et defendere, et adquietare ab omnibus servitiis, consuet. et exactionibus, ut lib. elem. nostram: et [ut] hoc ratum et stabile perseveret, pr. scriptum sig. nostri appositione, et testium subscriptione roboravimus. Hiis testibus. Thoma Capellano, et Mauritio Capellano,<sup>4</sup> de Wýtebi: Rogero de Houkesgard: Johanne Arundel; et aliis.

CCXLVII. CARTA DE TERRA DE LIVERTONA. [M. 23<sup>b</sup>.]

Liverton
grants to Whitby specified

<sup>5</sup> These are necessarily the two carucates in Briningeston (or Burniston) given to the nascent monastery by King William, and repeatedly confirmed by his successors, and which, of equal necessity, had been granted in fee to the author of this deed at a very early period, inasmuch as the present deed of release must date as far back as 1150-1160, or thereabouts, at the latest, the names of the witnesses being a sufficient attestation to that fact.

<sup>6</sup> Dugdale throws no light upon the identity of the grantor. He speaks of Peter, "the ancestor of the great and noble family" of Ros or Roos of Hamlake, and of his benefaction to St. Mary's Abbey at York, his marriage, etc., and then proceeds to his son Robert, who, as he states, in 3 Henry II. (1156<sup>6</sup>), gave to the King 1000 marks for livery of the lands of Walter Espec, of his mother Adeline's inheritance. Naming Robert de Ros' wife, Sibylla de Valoines, he simply says he left by her a son and heir, Everard, who was a minor at his father's death, and a ward of Ranulph de Glanvill in 12 Henry II. He held of the King eight knights' fees and a half, and in 22 Henry II. paid a fine of £526 for his lands, etc. This, of course, throws him much too late to admit of identification with the present grantor. The most probable assumption is that, besides Robert, Peter had another son, Everard, and that the Everard and Robert of the present deed are the said two sons. The probable, or rather approximate, date of the deed, so far from being inconsistent with such a theory, lends much probability to it.

tibus et amicis suis, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et reddidisse, et liberas et quietas concessisse de me et omnibus meis hær. illas duas carucatas t'ræ in Brunieston quas tenebam de Deo et Eccl. Wýtebiensi, fratribus(que) in eadem Eccl. Deo serv., in perpetuo possidendas; et unum hominem, nomine Normannum de Brochesseie, cum tribus bovatis t'ræ, et cum eodem servitio quod michi facere solebat, ita libere sicuti eum tenebam. Et ea conditione et conventionem illam suprafatam<sup>1</sup> t'ram Ecclesiæ reddidi, ut nullus a dominica mensa illam auferret. Et insuper dedi maledictionem meam omnibus hiis qui de illa t'ra injur(i)am et violentiam Ecclesiæ et fratribus facient. Et Abbas et totus Conv. similiter fecerunt. Hujus rei testes sunt—Aschetillus de Houkesgard. Reginaldus de Snetuna. Robertus de Livertun; et Godefridus frater ejus; et alii.

CCXLIX. CECILIA PUNCHARDUN DE TERRA IN EBORACO.

Omnibus has litteras vis. vel aud., Cecilia<sup>2</sup> de Punchardun,<sup>3</sup> salutem in D'no. Noverit univ. v. me d. et c. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Deo et Eccl. B. P. et S. Hildæ de Wýtebi, et mon. ib. Deo serv., totam t'ram meam de Fiskergate<sup>4</sup> in Eboraco, cum omn. pert. suis et libertatibus, quam ego et antecessores mei tenuimus de eisdem Monachis. Ego vero, Cecilia, et hær. mei, præd. t'ram præfatis Mon. warrantizabimus c. o. h. in perpetuum: et ut hæc mea donatio firmitatem habeat perpetuam, pr. scr. sig. meo signatum<sup>5</sup> sæpedictis Mon. tradidi in testimonium. Hiis testibus.<sup>6</sup> Laurentio, quondam Priore de Gisebur(nia). Radulfo Nuuel de Eboraco. Henrico de Pusat. Helia Flur. Benedicto filio Arnaldi; et aliis.

CCL. HELYAS, SERVUS DECANI, DE REDDITU VI DENARIORUM.

<sup>3</sup> A Roger de Punchardun is witness to a release of the hermitage, situate in Helagh Park, by Prior Henry of Marton, dated 1203. Laurence was Prior of Gysburne c. 1211, says Burton, and he was "quondam prior" 1219-1223. Cecilia of this deed was probably connected with the said Roger.

(64) Robertus Fossarth,<sup>1</sup> omn. fidelibus Dei, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse S. Petro de Wýtebi, cunctisque fratribus ib. Deo serv., illam carucatam t'ræ de Butteruic, quam Durandus,<sup>2</sup> homo meus de Butteruic, dedit S. Petro de Wýtebý, liberam et immunem ab omni servitio quod ad me pertinet. Hæres autem Durandi omne servitium pertinens Regi pro illa faciet, absque danegeld: et illud donum optuli per unum baculum, una cum Geffrido, hærede Durandi, super altare S. Petri in Wýtebý. Et hujus doni sunt testes—Ricardus de Perci,<sup>3</sup> et Alexander filius ejus. Ascheutinus de Houkesgard; et alii.

Sciant omnes, tam pr. quam fut., quod ego, Laurentius, filius Daniel de Atona,<sup>4</sup> et hæ. mei tenemur solvere annuatim Firmariæ Abbatiæ de Wýtebý quinque solidos ad f. S. Martini, per assignationem Radulfi filii Baldewini, d'ni mei, de illis x solidis quos ego solebam reddere annuatim eidem Radulfo pro vii bovatis t'ræ in Atona, quos v sol. idem Radulfus dedit præd. Firmar[i]æ in perp. elem., percipiendos annuatim ad præd.

CCLIII. FULCO FILIUS RAYNFREDI DE II CARUCATIS TERRÆ IN THOULESTONA. [M. 120.]

Sciant omnes aud. et vid. has litteras, quod ego, Fulco filius Revnfredi,<sup>1</sup> una cum consensu et licentia d'ni mei, Osberni de Arches, concessi et per unum baculum super altare optuli Deo et fratribus Wytebiensis Ecclesiæ duas carucatas terræ in Tolestuna,<sup>2</sup> pro s. a. meæ et pro a'abus omnium parentum meorum, liberas et quietas ab omni servitio, in perp. elemosinam. Quare præcipio omniibus hominibus meis ut manteneant hanc elemosinam meam, quam ita volo esse liberam et quietam sicut aliqua elemosina potest esse liberior et quietior de omni forinseco servitio. Huic dono interfuerunt, et sunt testes—Willelmus Canonicus de Perci.<sup>3</sup> Harundel, et Johannes filius ejus. Hugo Archidiaconus; et Picot de Perci; et alii.

CCLIV. CARTA WALTERI, CAPELLANI DE SNETONA.

Walter, chaplain of Snetun, engages to indemnify Whitby in case of any loss consequent on their grant of certain lands in Sneton to him.

Omn. Christi fidelibus has litteras vis. vel aud., Walterus, Capellanus de Snetona, s. in D'no. Noverit univ. v. quod, si ego vel atornati mei, aliquo casu contingente, t'ram quam domini mei, J[ohannes]<sup>4</sup> Abbas de Wytebi et Conv. ejusd. loci michi dederunt et concesserunt de eis tenendam pro annua firma vi d.—scil. t'ram quam Johanna<sup>5</sup> filia Reginaldi Arundel dedit Ecclesiæ de Wyteby (64<sup>b</sup>) in puram elemosinam, amiserimus, nullum ab eis petemus<sup>6</sup> exscambium; et ne ipsi possint aliquo tempore super hoc, vel per me vel per meos successores,

Notum sit omnibus ad quos hoc scriptum perv., pr. et fut., ita convenisse inter P[etrum]<sup>5</sup> Abbatem et Conv. de Wytebi, et G[uarinum]<sup>6</sup> Abbatem et Conv. de Rievalle—scil. quod præd. P[etrus] Abbas et Conv. de Wyteby, intuitu karitatis et fraternæ dilectionis, concesserunt et carta Ecclesiæ suæ confirmaverunt præd. G[uarino] Abbati et Conv. [de] Rievalle illam dimidiam toftam quam Willelmus Cordarius filius Lessing, de Ecclesia de Witebi tenuit in Fischergate, tenendam de Eccl. de Wyteby in perpetuum pro xiiii denariis annuatim inde solvendis Abbati de Wyteby vel ejus ballivis, apud Fischergate, pro omn. serv., consuet. et exactionibus, et ii. d. de husgable Regi, ad hos terminos—ad Pentecosten scil. vii. d. et ad f. S. Martini vii. d. Et hoc scriptum in duas partes dividitur, dependente sigillo Abbatis et Conv. de Wyteby in partem Abbatis et Conv. [de] Rievalle, et depend. sig. Abbatis et Conv. [de] Rievalle in partem Abbatis et Conv. de Wyteby. Hiis testibus. Elia, Capellano de Edestona. Magistro Augustino. Galfrido Cardun; et aliis.

CCLVI. ROGERUS MUBRAY DE VI BOVATIS TERRÆ IN TORP.

Rogerus de Moubrai,<sup>7</sup> omn. hominibus suis, Francis et Anglis, salutem. Notum sit vobis et omnibus vid. vel aud. has litteras,

(65) Archiepiscopo Eboraci. et Capitulo S. Petri, et omnibus qui has viderint vel audierint litteras, Rogerus de Mulbrai,<sup>5</sup> salutem in Christo. Sciatis omnes me dedisse et per hanc meam c. conf. Deo et S. Hýldæ de Wýteby, et mon. ib. Deo serv. t'ram quam Reginaldus Poer de me tenuit in Thorp—scil. vi bovatas t'ræ, cum prato ad eas pertinente, et cum communi aisiamento ejusdem villæ; et iii<sup>or</sup> mansuras in Eboraco—tres, scil., in Sceldergate,<sup>6</sup> et unam super ripam fluminis Usæ; [pro]<sup>7</sup> a. mea et pro a'abus hæ. et parentum meorum, in lib. pur. et perp. elem., ab omni servitio et consuet. et exact. sæculari quietam, ut with the Conqueror. He married, first, Maud, daughter of Richard de Aquila; second, Gundreda, daughter of Gerald de Gournay, in 1118. By her he left issue Roger, who was still in his minority in 1138, but yet was present at the battle of the Standard. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Lincoln in 1142. In 1148 he went in crusade with King Lewis. In 1166 he was certified as holding eighty-eight knight's fees, together with one third, and one fourth, "de vetere feoffamento," and eleven and three quarters "de novo." The date of his death seems to be uncertain. By his wife Alice de Gant he left two sons, Nigel and Robert.—(Dugdale, i. 122 et seq.) See Nos. 257-259, 149, 82, 281, 282.

Rogerus<sup>3</sup> de Molbrai, constabulariis suis et dapiferis et baronibus, et omn. hominibus et amicis suis, Francis Anglicisque,<sup>4</sup> de Eborascira, salutem. Sciatis me dedisse et conc. Reginaldo Pouherio mansuram quam Herbertus Pincerna in Eboraco tenebat, et dimid. caruc. t'ræ in Thorp, quam præd. Herbertus tenebat in feudo et hæreditate, et hæ. suis, sol[ut]am, lib. et quietam, cum omn. rebus t'ræ præd. pert., et cum omn. consu[e]tudinibus liberis, et per servitium unarum caligarum de scarlet annuatim reddendarum. Teste. Willelmo de Archis. Herberto Quonigbur.<sup>5</sup> Willelmo Malebisse;<sup>6</sup> et aliis.

CCLIX. ROGERUS DE MUBRAI DE TERRA IN EBORACO.

Rogerus de Molbreio et Gundrea, mater ejus, omn. fidelibus S. Ecclesiæ, salutem. Sciatis nos dedisse et conc. Cœnobio S. P. et S. Hildæ de Wýtebi, unam masuram t'ræ in Eboraco—scil. illam quam Willelmus Plantepholia tenet, reddentem unoquoque anno redditum iii s., in perp. pro s. a. nostrarum et amicorum nostrorum, et propter calumpniam quam habebant apud Ecclesiam S. Willelmi de Hod,<sup>7</sup> libere et quiete et honorifice. Teste—Turstino Archiepiscopo;<sup>8</sup> et Radulfo Ep'o;<sup>9</sup>

CCLX. PAGANA DE TERRA IN EBORACO.

(65<sup>b</sup>) Sciant omnes audientes has litteras, quod ego, Pagana,<sup>1</sup> dedi, concedente filio meo, Willelmo Canonico, unam t'ram in Blaicastret<sup>2</sup> juxta Monast. S. Wilfridi in Eboraco, in perpetuum, Ecclesiæ S. P. et S. Hildæ de Wýteby, eo pacto ut essem particeps omnium beneficiorum ejusdem Ecclesiæ, et ut haberem procurationem unius monachi, et unius famuli, cunctis diebus vitæ me[æ]; et ut Abbatia ejusdem loci michi inveniret vestimenta necessaria in primis duobus annis, et Willelmus filius [meus] in sequentibus duobus annis, et sic alternatim, per binos et binos annos, cunctis diebus vitæ meæ. Sed si filius meus Willelmus moriretur<sup>3</sup> ante me, vel mutaret vitam, tunc ex toto a præd. Eccl. vestirer. Hujus conventionis testes sunt—Willelmus Decanus, et Capitulum S. Petri;<sup>4</sup> et ad istud donum, et ad saisionem hujus doni fuerunt testes:—Thomas Sottaygina. Outhen. Vocabrus. Ramchil. Rogerus Clericus; et alii.

his brother's attention by Nigel de Albini in the remarkable deed printed in Surtees' Durham, iii. 395, part copy of which is here appended:—"Karissimo fratri suo Willelmo, Nigellus de Albini, salutem et fraternam dilectionem. Ex quo nati fuimus utque vos de mea necessitate et auxilio, et me de vestris fatis exoratos existimo. Precor, igitur, frater karissime, ut cum, per Dei misericordiam, naturali et carnali vinculo cuncti simus, hoc alter ad alterum, cum necessitas evenerit, in op(er)ibus ostendamus. Ecce, frater karissime, peccata mea maxima et iniquitates Dei misericordia diutius tolerare non valens, flagella justitiæ suæ carni meæ miserrimæ misericorditer admovit, ne per peccatricem insolentiam anima mea æternam mereretur Gehennam. Ego siquidem, qui in prosperitate mea melius facere potuissem, vos, quam super omnes diligo, honoris mei et rerum meorum constitui hæredem—eo videl. tenore, ut redditiones terrarum quas ego Eboracensi et Dunelmensi feci Ecclesiis, pro salute animæ meæ et redemptione peccatorum meorum, et quia ipsæ terræ Ecclesiis illis jure adjacent, reddidi et concessi, et donationes terrarum quas ego S. Becensi Ecclesiæ, et Abbatia S. Albani, et monasterio S. Pancratii, et Abbatia S. Mariæ de Ebor, et Abbatia S. Germani de Salebi, et redditiones terrarum quas hominibus meis quos exhæreditaveram feci, et escambia quæ pro terris illis hominibus meis quibus eas dederam reddidi, nullo modo violare presumatis, set ut donatio mea firma sit et stabilis nostris juribus et omnium amicorum nostrorum faciatis." He then proceeds:—"Terræ autem quas ego reddidi Ecclesiis hæ sunt: Ebor' Ecclesiæ, Helprebi, . . . Hospitio pauperum fratrum ejusdem Ecclesiæ, ii car. t'ræ in Hameseie," and then after specifying a number of others, he comes to "Sarloni Monacho dimidiam caruc. t'ræ; Abbatia S. Mariæ Ebor. molendina illa," etc., while lower on he proceeds to take order about the lands to be given in lieu of the said restored lands to their present holders:—thus, "Willelmo filio Warini dedi Torntun, cum iii car. t'ræ et dim. et cum hominibus qui in eis sunt, propter illas ii. car. t'ræ et dimid. quas ipse reddidi elemosinariæ S. Petri et Sarloni Monacho." From the coincidence of the name Sarlo or Serlo, mentioned in connection with the York restorations, the quantity restored, and the fact of the "redditio," there can be no doubt that the present deed is the formal instrument of the said restoration. Unfortunately, nothing remains to testify to the original grant, or the mode or occasion of the alienation. The brother William, to whom the deed extracted from is addressed, is, it is needless to say, Nigel's elder brother, William de Albini Pincerna.—(Dugd. i. 118.)

CCLXIII. CARTA ASCHATINI DE HOUKESGARTH.

Willelmus,<sup>7</sup> D. G. Abbas Wýtebyensis, ej(us)demque Ecclesiæ Conv., univ. Ecclesiæ filiis, salutem. Sciatis nos, communi consilio totius Capituli nostri, concessisse Ascatis, filio Willelmi,<sup>8</sup> et hæ. suis, in feudo et hæ., Houkesgarth (66) et Normaneby pro Neweham<sup>9</sup> in escangia, cum omn. suis pert., in bosco, in plano, in pratis, in aquis, in pastura: Eo pacto dedit Ascatinus duas carucatas boum, et unum hercatorium ingressum,<sup>10</sup> reddendo unoquoque anno xxiiii s. et duas precesiones—

<sup>10</sup> Neither Young nor Charlton is able to throw any real light on the nature of this concession. It would appear that Ascatin was in some shape, or to some extent, benefited by the transaction, and that the "ii carucate boum et i hercatorius ingressus" were an acknowledgment on his part, rendered at once, and unconnected with the two yearly "precesiones" or

Notum sit omnibus aud. et vid. has litteras, quod ego, secundus Ricardus,<sup>3</sup> Abbas de Wýteby, assensu totius Capituli nostri, concessi et reddidi Willelmo [d]e Everle<sup>4</sup> et hæc. suis, in feudum et hæreditatem, Ugelbardebý et Everlay,<sup>5</sup> cum omn. pert. suis, de nobis tenendas—Reddendo annuatim xi s. et unam precationem in Augusto de vi decim hominibus in Ugel-

“boon days.” Under the circumstances—an exchange of lordship—Charlton’s supposition (p. 78) that the former term means “two ox-gangs of land” is clearly inadmissible, and his gratuitous supposition that “hercatorium” is a mistake for “hermitorium” (ib., note) no less so. Young (p. 302, and note) supposes carucata boum may be a team of oxen, and hercatorius ingressus a gang or set of harrows, but he is not satisfied with either suggestion.

<sup>4</sup> There is some uncertainty as to the connection of this lord of Everley with his predecessor or predecessors. There is reason to believe that Radulphus de Everlay, some notice of whom, in connection with the legendary story of William de Percy’s alienation of the lands of Everley from the new monastery, in order that he might bestow them on his esquire, is taken in the Introductory Chapters, was the first lord of Everley under the restored abbey. His name appears as that of a witness to several of the earliest documents in the Chartulary (Nos. 224, 240, 242, 405), and in the second of these the name of “Hugo ejus filius” follows his, and is itself followed by that of Alanus de Everlaie. Certainly it does not follow that Hugo was his eldest son, any more than does the relationship of Alanus de Everlaie. Assuming 1130-5 to be the probable date of the charter in question, it is possible, though not perhaps altogether probable, that the William de Everlay of this deed is the grandson of Radulfus. Be that as it may, he is the first of a series of Williams de Everley. A second, probably his son, is a cotemporary of Abbot Roger (1220-1244). In Nos. 20, 21, dated 1311, we meet with another William de Everley, with a son and heir, also William de Everley. Between the cotemporary of Abbot Roger and the elder of these two there is room for an intermediate generation, possibly two. M. reads Everley for our Everle.

CCLXVI. CARTA DE LIBERTATIBUS BURGENSIIUM DE WYTEBY.

<sup>2</sup> Richard de Waterville. Young's remarks (pp. 477, 478) on this charter and the subsequent withdrawal of it, are, on the whole, so much to the point, historically, that it may be as well to introduce the substance of them here in preference to giving another account:—The privileges thus conferred were soon after confirmed by a Royal Charter (No. 472). . . . But the liberties of Whitby were of short duration; the monks repented of their liberality to the town; and Peter, the next abbot, procured from King John a repeal of the charter which his predecessor had granted. In 1 John "Abbas de Whitebi debet c. marcas, ut burgenses de Whitebi non possint uti libertatibus suis concessis ab Abbati et Conv. de Whitebi et carta D'ni Regis confirmatis, donec judicatum sit in curia Regis si Abbas et Conv. eis dare potuerunt illas libertates." "Willelmus Clericus, et Radulfus filius Sudof, et Simon de Keseburn debent quater xx. marcas, pro se et pro tota villata de Whitebi, pro habenda confirmatione de libertatibus suis, sicut Abbas et Monachi de Whitebi eis confirmaverunt et concesserunt."—(Mag. Rot. 1 Joh. r. 4 b. Everw.) After a short delay, the King granted a charter to the Abbot Peter, dated Jan. 13, 1201, declining to confirm the charter of Richard de Waterville, which, as alleged, was against the dignity of the Church of Whitby (No. 538). Notwithstanding this defeat, the burgesses renewed the contest, for it appears from the rolls of the Exchequer that, 3 John, "Abbas de Whitebi debet c. marcas ne carta Ricardi de Waterville quondam Abbatis de Whitebi et Conv. confirmetur a Rege. . . . Idem Abbas debet c. l., ut loquela inter ipsum et Burgenses de Whitebi, de carta Ricardi de Watervill et Conv. de Whitebi, audiatur coram Rege et discutiatur ibidem, utrum Abbas et Conv. de Whitebi potuerunt dare hujusmodi libertatis burgensibus de Whitebi."—(Magn. Rot. 3 Joh. r. 12b. Everw.) The result of this trial is not particularly recorded, but we are certain it went against the burgesses.

<sup>2</sup> In the Inspeximus by Henry de Percy (No. 405) will be found a charter, also by Alan de Percy, which, although dealing with some of the details of donation named in the present document, and attested by almost exactly the same witnesses, is yet distinguished from it by great and most material differences and omissions. The verbal and other minor differences in the enumeration of witnesses will be found in the following notes.

prædictam Eccl. de Whitby pertinentia, sicuti umquam melius, plenius et liberius ego et pater meus ea habuimus et possedimus. Hæc autem omnia dedi Deo et S. P. et S. Hildæ, et mon. de Whiteby Deo serv., ad Abbatiam prædictam construendam, et hac carta mea confirmavi, [et] ita libere, quiete, ac solute concessi ex omni [ex]actione et consuetudine sæculari, quod nichil omnino nisi ipsius Abbatiae defensionem michi retinui. Ego vero et hæ. mei præd. Abbatiam de Whiteby et totam prænom. elem. meam defendemus et adquietabimus ab omni equitatu, et ab omni forensi servitio, et exactione, et consuetudine sæculari. Hiique sunt testes et concessores. Walterus,<sup>1</sup> Ricardus de Percy, fratres mei. Picot<sup>2</sup> de Percy. Fulco Dapifer, Raynfridi filius,<sup>3</sup> et Willelmus filius ejus; et Everardus; et Malgerus;<sup>4</sup> et Willelmus Terri filius; et Ricardus de Hulmit;<sup>5</sup> et Arundel; et Maumardus de Londona;<sup>6</sup> et Alemannus Presbiter.

HABENT DE TERRIS SUB HARDALEHEDE. [M. 91.]

William, son of Robert de Dales, grants to Whitby thirty-four acres of land in Langdale.

(71<sup>b</sup>) Sciant pr. et fut. quod ego, Willelmus, filius [Roberti] de Dales,<sup>8</sup> d., c. et hac pr. c. mea conf. Willelmo filio Moriel de Wispodale, et hæ. vel assignatis suis, totam t'ram, boscum, pratum et pasturam quæ habui inter Hardalhede et Langdalekeld,<sup>9</sup> et continet in se triginta iii<sup>or</sup> acras, cum omn. pert. suis, in villa et t'itorio de Dales—Tenendum et hab. prædicto Willelmo et hæ. vel assignatis suis, de capitali d'no feodi, lib., qu., integre, bene, et in pace, imperpetuum: Reddendo inde annuatim michi et hæ. meis unum den. argenti tantum ad Natale

Domini, et faciendo capitali domino feodi servitia debita et consueta, pro omnibus sæculariis officiis, servitiis, exactionibus et demandis. Et ego, vero, præd. Willelmus, filius Roberti de Dales, et hæc. mei totam præd. t'ram, boscum, pratum et pasturam, cum omn. pert. suis, ut prædictum est, præd. Willelmo, filio Moriel de Wispodale, et hæc. vel assignatis suis, c. o. h. et f. warantizabimus, acq. et ubique defendemus imperpetuum. In cujus rei test. sig. meum pr. cartæ apposui. Hiis testibus. <sup>9</sup> In No. 491, he is "Johan' de Newere, tunc official. Clyveland'."

d'ni de Tameton, ipsis Abbate et Conventu medietatem dictarum decimarum tunc (75<sup>b</sup>) percipientibus, possidentibus, parte vero dicti Laurentii ipsas decimas ad eccl. de Stokesley integre pertinere asserente, ratione juris communis—scil. eo quod domus de qua dictæ decimæ proveniebant sita fuit infra limites parochiæ de Stokesley. Tandem, facta inquisitione diligenter, tam super possessione, quam jure dictorum Abbatis et Conv., quod habebant in dictis decimis ratione pasturæ territorii de Atona, in qua averia d'norum predictæ domus de Tametona pascebantur, decretum fuit prædictos Abbatem et Conv. medietatem dictarum decimarum juste [possidere],<sup>1</sup> et ad eccl. suam de Atona de consuetudine approbata et optenta pertinere. of some few years earlier date. It is apparent that “Will. dominus de Tamton” is the earliest, though only by three to five years, at most, in point of time, for Archdeacon Serlo and John are placed by Le Neve in 1231, 1230 respectively (Roger not being named at all by him), while Matthew is in office in 1225. Still it is very difficult to make out what the connection between the several persons named really was, or to account for the rapid succession in the tenentes of the Tampton “domus” or “manerium,” that among the Archdeacons being, strange to say, equally rapid. The fraternal tie between William de Mubray de Tampton and William de Tampton is also, to say the least of it, noteworthy. Is it possible that the William de Tameton, Seneschal of Peter de Brus I. was a Mowbray, and also the William “dominus de Tampton” in Archdeacon Matthew’s time, and that Radulfus succeeded him, giving place almost immediately to Joh. Medicus, and the latter as speedily to Walter de Mubray and his son William, by reversion to the original family?

s. in D'no sempiternam. Visitantes nuper ecclesiam et diocesim nostram Karliolensem,<sup>1</sup> inter cætera visitationis nostræ officia contingentia, comperimus quod Religiosi viri, Abbas et Conv. de Whiteby, Eborac. dioceseos, ecclesiam de Crosseby Ravenswarth parochialem, nostræ dioceseos, cum pertinentiis suis, in usus suos proprios de facto detinent, et de jure speciali sic vendicant optinere. Vocatis igitur super hoc dictis Religiosis, et procuratore sufficienter comparentibus coram nobis, diebus et locis congruis ad hoc datis, propositum fuit ex parte eorundem quod ipsi præd. ecclesiam de Crosseby Ravenswarth ab antiquo eis canonice appropriatam optinuerunt et possederunt, et ad huc optinent et possident in præsentī cartas et documenta prædecessorum nostrorum, Episcoporum Karliol., et patronorum, et confirmationem Capituli Ecclesiæ nostræ Cathedralis Ka[r]liol. prædictæ super hoc in medio exhibendo. Nos igitur, inspectis et intellectis propositis et exhibitis suis in hac parte, quia invenimus eos sufficienter munitos in prædictis, ipsos sicut possessores canonicos, et sufficienter munitos ab impetitione officii nostri, absolvimus, et per decretum dimittimus absolutos. CCCXIII. CONFIRMATIO ECCLESIAE DE CROSSBY.

Universis S. M. Eccl. filiis ad quorum notitiam pr. scr. pervenerit, Officialis Curiae Eborac. s. in D'no sempiternam. Noverit univ. v. quod nos quoddam scriptum Venerabilis patris D'ni Radulphi,<sup>1</sup> D. G. Karleolii Ep'i, non cancellatum, non abolitum, nec in aliqua sui parte vitiatum, inspeximus in his verbis:—Universis Christi fidelibus ad quos pr. scr. perv. Radulphus, miseratione divina Karleonensis Episcopus, s. in Domino sempiternam. Universali Ecclesiae tanto nos vehementius credimus proficere quanto viros Religiosos, quos S. Ecclesiam orationum suarum instantia potissimum fulcire supponimus, ad orandum incessabilius atque sincerius nostra sollicitudine reddiderimus expeditos. In quo haud<sup>2</sup> dubium convalescimus si ipsos bona sibi caritate collata optinere inconcussibiliter, quantum ad nos pertinet, procuremus. Ut igitur sanctam congregationem Monachorum de Whiteby, quos ab ineunte ætate cognovimus in orationibus et religiosis operibus extitisse sollicitos, quantum ad ecclesiam de Crosseby Ravenswarth, nostræ dioceseos, quam in usus proprios possident, faciamus inconcussibilem in posterum et immunem, instrumenta prædecessorum nostrorum, et metropolitanorum, et Capituli nostri Karleolensis, et Thorphini<sup>3</sup> patroni, quorum auctoritate ad possessionem ejusdem ecclesiae pervenerint, et ejusdem possessioni ad præsens incumbunt, quæ nos oculata fide perspeximus, in præ. scripto (95) duximus recitanda, ac nostræ confirmationis adjectione roboranda pariter et juvanda. Litteram quippe bonæ memoriæ Etelwalddi, prædecessoris nostri, inspeximus hiis verbis:—Ethelwaldus, D. G. Karleolensis Ep'us, Eliæ Archidiacono et Capitulo S. Mariæ [etc., as in No. 32.]<sup>4</sup>

Cartæ litteram bonæ memoriæ Bernardi, prædecessoris nostri, super hoc eodem inspeximus in hiis verbis:—Omnibus S. M. filiis, Bernardus, D. G. Karleolensis Episcopus, salutem. Noverit univ. v. quod nos, divini amoris intuitu, dedisse et concessisse et in usus proprios confirmasse [etc., as in No. 36].<sup>2</sup>

Litteram etiam bonæ memoriæ Hugonis, prædecessoris nostri, inspeximus in hiis verbis:—Omnibus ad quos præsens scriptum pervenerit, Hugo, D. G. Karleol. Episcopus, s. in D'no. Noverit univ. vestra [nos], divinæ pietatis intuitu, de consensu et assensu Capituli nostri [etc., as in No. 40 to] (96) instituisse in eadem, salva vicaria centum solidorum de proventibus ipsius ecclesiæ, per manus Abbatis et Conv. de Whiteby annuatim percipiendorum vicario in eadem perpetuis temporibus ministraturo, qui nobis [etc., as in No. 40].<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> The variations here are that "A. . . . Persona de Stretford" comes in second in the list instead of much lower down; "Wederaul" is written for "Wederhala," "Johanne Sacrista" for "J. Sacrista," "A. officiali" for "Ada officiali," and "A. . . . Decano Karleol" for "H. Dec. Karl." In connection with Wederhala or Wederaul, it may be noted that Wetheral is in the eastern division of the county of Cumberland, on the banks of the Eden, four miles and three quarters south-east of Carlisle. Touching the Priory there, Bishop Tanner justly says, "there seems to be great confusion in the memorandums and charters printed in the Monasticon"—that is, the first edition—"out of the Register of this Priory, concerning the time of its foundation. First, there is a charter of King William I. confirming this cell to St. Mary's and its Abbot Richard: whereas St. Mary's was not founded under William the Conqueror, nor was Richard Abbot until 12 Henry I., and among the witnesses, Lucia, his wife, and Henry, his brother, being Item litteram Capituli nostri Karleol. præmissorum ratificativam inspeximus in hiis verbis:—Omn. Christi fidelibus ad quos pr. scr. perv., Bartholomæus Prior et Capitulum Canonikorū<sup>1</sup> Karleol. s. in Domino. Noveritis nos ratas et gratas habere, quantum ad nos pertinet, donationes [etc., as in No. 42].

Cartam insuper Torphini, ejusdem ecclesiæ patroni, inspeximus in hiis verbis:—Sciant omnes videntes et audientes has litteras quod ego Torphinus, et hæres meus, dedimus ecclesiam de Crosby Ravenswarth cum duabus carucatis t'ræ [etc., as in No. 29].<sup>2</sup>

Item taxationem vicariæ sæpeditæ ecclesiæ per bonæ memoriæ Walterum,<sup>3</sup> prædecessorem nostrum, factam inspeximus in hiis verbis:—Omn. Christi fidelibus, p. litteras inspecturis et audituris, Walterus, miseratione Divina Karleol. Ecclesiæ Minister humilis, s. in D'no. Ne ea quæ ad pacem perpetuam et tranquillitatem Religiosorum proinde sunt statuta alicujus arbitrio seu voluntate facile<sup>4</sup> dissolvantur, ad vestram volumus pervenire notitiam quod, cum viri Religiosi, Rogerus Abbas de Whiteby et ejusdem loci Conv., taxationem vicariæ ecclesiæ suæ de Crosseby Ravenswarth ordinationi named, show plainly that this could not be a grant of the Conqueror. Second, this Priory is said to have been founded tempore Will. Rufi, and we are referred to the charter of Ranulf for proof, which charter, with the same witnesses, and inscribed 'Carta prima de Wetheral,' being printed in the other, that is, the next column, mentions expressly the giving of this manor of Wederhall to St. Mary's, 'pro anima D'ni mei Regis Henrici.' In fact, the first charter alluded to, though called the Conqueror's, must be ascribed to King William Rufus, in whose reign, or early in that of King Henry I., Ranulph le Meschin, Earl of Cumberland, must have founded the Cell of Wetherall, which he appears to have annexed to the Abbey of St. Mary's at York, while Stephen de Whitby, the first Abbot, was at the head of that Monastery."—(Dugdale, Mon. Angl. iii. 581.)

REGEM ANGLIÆ.

Henricus, Rex Angliæ, Eustacio filio Johannis, et W[altero]
Espec, et Bertram de Bolemer, et ministris suis et omnibus

<sup>1</sup> In the small parish of Hilton, which lies three or four miles a little to the south of west of Yarm, there were in Domesday times two territorial divisions, one a manor of three carucates extent in "Terra Regis," and the other, of six carucates, of the soke of Tameton, or Semer and Tameton. The latter was in the fee of the Earl of Mortain, and passed early in the twelfth century into the Meinell fee. The former became part of the original Brus fee shortly before 1087. An offshoot of the Meinill family was subinfeuded in the one rather early, while the small manor gave its name to the subinfeudatory of de Brus. Adam de Hilton (or Hylton) was the last male representative of this family, and his sister, Alice, marrying Hugo de Meinell de Hilton, carried both lordships of Hilton into the same family. Among the deeds in Mr. Meinill's collection at the Friarage, Yarm, is one by Robert FitzMeldred, granting "Roberto fil' Walt. de Mainill de Ingeltona et hæ. suis totam villam de Snoterdune, etc. . . . sicut continetur in carta quam idem Rob. fil' Walteri de Meinell habet de Ada de Hilton, salvo tamen michi, Rob. filio Meldredi, et hæ. meis homagio et servitio Adæ de Hilton et hæ. suorum," from which it appears that there was already a connection between the Hilton Meinills and Adam de Hilton. His name is of very frequent occurrence as a witness in the Gysburne deeds, and also as that of a holder (under John fitzWilliam de Bernaldby) of lands in Barnaby, which he gave eventually to Gysburne. He is the representative of Peter de Brus in 1242 in arranging a fine between the latter and John Prior of Gysburne touching the Brus grants to the Priory in Glaisdale, at which time he must have been well advanced in years.

<sup>2</sup> Handale, in the parish of Lofthouse, on the borders of Liverton. William, son of Richard de Percy, says Burton, "founded a small Priory here for Benedictine Nuns, to the honour of the Virgin Mary" in 1133. The landed endowments seem to have been but small, lying mainly in Handale itself, and in Hilderwell, Dunsley, Marton, Scaling, Waupley, Deepdale, and, from the testimony of this deed and the next, in Aton. From the testimony also of the Percy Feodary "Priorissa de Handale tenuit in Ugthorpe nos, pro nobis et success. nostris, concessisse, remisisse, et omnino quietum clamasse viris Religiosis, Abbati et Conv. de Whiteby, et eorum successoribus, Johanni de Thorp et Aliciæ uxori ejus, et eorum hæredibus et executoribus, omnimodas actiones, calumpnias, et querelas quas versus eosdem habere poterimus, ratione cujuscunque dimissionis eisdem factæ ad terminum annorum de terris et tenementis nostris in Aton in Cliveland. Ita quod nec nos, nec successores nostræ, nec aliquis per nos, nec nomine nostro, eosdem Abbatem et Conv. aut successores suos, Johannem de Thorp et Aliciam uxorem ejus, hæ. et executores suos, ratione dimissionis terrarum et tenementorum prædictorum, aut quacunque deterioratione eorundem, ab initio sæculi usque (115<sup>b</sup>) ad diem dationis præsentium calumpniare seu inquietare poterimus in futurum. In cujus rei test. sig. commune Capituli nostri præsentibus apposuimus. Datum apud Grendale alias Handale, die Mercurii<sup>1</sup> proximo ante f. Sancti Botulphi, A. The Prioress Mariott de Herleseey seems to have been appointed in 1315, and to have been succeeded by Alicia de Horton in 1318. The former would thus be prioress at the date of the present deed.

CCCXLVII. ALIA CARTA DE ATON IN CLIVELANDE.

Omnibus aud. et vid has litteras, Ricardus filius Angoti, salutem. Sciatis omnes quod Willelmus, filius Angoti, coram me dimisit et dedit Eccl. S. Hildæ de Whiteby [etc.].<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> D'nus Will. Malebisse is a witness to a deed by Robert Engram of Arncliffe, dated 1246 (in Mr. Douglas Brown's collection at Arncliffe Hall), to which also Joh. de Kereby is a witness, thus, independently of the date, giving a safe inference as to his identity; and this again helps in the identification of Abbot John as John de Steyngrave, Abbot Roger's successor. See notes to No. 346.

<sup>3</sup> This name is read by Charlton (p. 232) as Enyri. It is, it is needless to say, merely an awkward form of Euri or Eure. "Hugh, a younger son of the Barons of Warkworth, did seat himself at Eure in Com. Buck. temp. Henr. III. To which Hugh succeeded John, his son and heir; who in 35 Edw. I. obtained charter of free warren in all his demesne lands at Easby in Cleveland. In 8 Edw. II. he took part in the expedition to Scotland. In 1317 he was made a commissioner to treat for peace with the Scots. See Kirkby's Inquest, pp. 237, 328.

CCCLVII. ALIA CARTA.

Sciant omnes, tam pr. quam fut., quod ego, Matildis, filia Henrici de Percy<sup>2</sup> de Batersby, quondam uxor (119) Willelmi Grundi, reddidi et quietam clamavi totam dotem meam de tota t'ra præfati Willelmi domini mei, quam habuit in Yngwall', D'no Johanni Abbati, et Conventui de Whiteby, pro decem solidis quos michi præ manibus dederunt. Et ut hæc concessio rata permaneant et stabilis huic scripto sig. meum apposui. Hiis testibus. Helia Capellano. Thoma Capellano. Willelmo filio Ukkil. Roberto de Bedingham. Richero de Ffylynge. Thoma de Haukesgarthe. Willelmo de Walden. Luca de Dales. Alano de Everley. Andrea de Dunsley. Ada Coco. Rogero de Midilburghe. Gilberto Burgeis; et multis aliis.

CCCLVIII. ALIA CARTA EJUSDEM.

Omn. S. M. Eccl. filiis, has litteras vis. vel aud., Rogerus. D. G. Abbas de Whiteby, salutem. Noveritis nos conc. et hac pr.

c. nostra confirmasse Willelmo Nunde<sup>1</sup> unum toftum cum crofto in villa de Bradesby<sup>2</sup>—scil. illum toftum qui jacet juxta t'ram Nicholai de Aton versus orientem; tenendum et hab. de nobis tota vita sua lib. et quiete, pacifice et honorifice:—Reddendo nobis annuatim pro omni servitio decem et octo denarios ad duos terminos—scil. med. ad Pent. et med. ad f. S. Martini in yeme. Prædictus vero Willelmus Nunde ædificabit prædictam<sup>3</sup> et in ea manebit: finito vero termino vitæ dicti Willelmi Nunde t'ra prædicta redibit quæta Abbatiæ de Whiteby, cum omnibus ædificiis suis. Et si ita contigerit quod aliquis ex parte nostra voluerit nostræ concessionem et donationem contraire, præd. Willelmus, sine ulla perturbatione omnia ædificia secum asportabit. Et ut hæc concessio rata sit et stabilis sig. nostri impressione pr. scriptum corroboravimus. Hiis testibus. Willelmo,<sup>4</sup> tunc Senescallo tunc Domini Abbatis de Whiteby. Nicholao de Aton. Willelmo de Walden. Willelmo de Reimeswel. Roberto Crisp. Johanne de Yrton; et multis aliis.

CCCLIX. ALIA CARTA.

Omnibus has litteras vis. vel aud., Rogerus, D. G. Abbas de Whiteby, et ejusdem loci Conv., æternam in Domino salutem. Noverit univ. v. nos conc. et hac pr. c. nostra confirmasse Adæ Cannatori<sup>5</sup> de Batersby, et hæc. de se exeuntibus, unum toftum <sup>1</sup> It may perhaps suggest itself to some readers that there is a clerical error either in this name or that of the late husband of Matilda de Percy mentioned in the last deed. But it is somewhat gratuitous to assume that it is so. The more probable conclusion is that after the surrender of dower noted in the last deed, the land out of which it had been payable was definitely let to a totally new tenant, viz. the William Nunde of the present document, and that probably the said release of the dower was purchased, late in Abbot John's time, for the very purpose, and that the transaction was completed at the very outset of Abbot Roger's time.

cum crofto in villa de Batersby,<sup>1</sup> qui jacet juxta t'ram Nicholai de Aton, versus orientem, tenend. et hab. de nobis hæreditarie—Reddendo nobis annuatim decem et octo den. ad duos terminos—scil. med. ad Pent. et med. ad f. S. Martini in yeme. In hujus rei testimonium pr. scripto sig. Capituli nostri apposuimus. Hiis testibus. Rogero, Vicario de Kirkeby. Waltero Clerico. Petro de Atona. Nicholao Marchand; et aliis.

CCCLX. ALIA CARTA.

Johannes,<sup>2</sup> D. G. Abbas de Whiteby, et ejusdem loci Conv. omnibus has litteras vis. vel aud., s. æternam in Domino. Noverit univ. v. nos teneri warantizare Rogero de Hyrtona et hæ. suis omnes t'ras quas tenuit de Andrea de Haukesgarthe, de quibus terris idem Andreas nobis homagium et servitium ejusdem Rogeri et hæ. suorum dedit per cartam suam, sicuti dictus Andreas et hæ. sui dicto Rogero et hæ. suis warantizare deberet, secundum tenorem cartarum quas idem Rogerus habet de dicto Andrea et antecessoribus suis. Concessimus etiam dicto Rogero et hæ. suis ut omnes dictas t'ras de nobis teneat adeo libere et quiete sicuti eas unquam de dicto Andrea liberius tenuit, vel de antecessoribus suis, et per idem servitium, prout cartæ suæ testantur. Concedimus etiam eidem Rogero et hæ. suis molere bladum suum ubicunque eis placuerit. In cujus rei test. sig. Capituli nostri apposuimus. Hiis Testibus. Domino Roberto I[n]geram.<sup>3</sup> D'no Willelmo de Everley. Thoma de Haukesgarthe. Ric[ardo] de Filynge, tunc tempore<sup>4</sup> Senescallo. Richero<sup>5</sup> filio suo. Johanne (120) de Newham. Petro de Aton. Andrea de Dunsley. Nicholao Wybarne, tunc Præposito de Whiteby. Symone Janitore. Roberto de Lithe; et aliis.

INGELBY. INCIPIUNT LIBRI DE SCRIDENBECC.

Sciant omnes vid. vel aud. has litteras quod ego, Walterus de Cancy,<sup>1</sup> assensu et consensu Alfridi filii mei et hæredis, conc. et dedi Eccl. S. P. et S. Hildæ de Whiteby, monachisque ib. Deo serv., in lib. et qu. et perp. elem., advocacionem et donationem eccl. de Scripenbec, cum omn. pert. suis, et præterea de domini[c]is culturis meis l acras t'ræ in campis ejusdem villæ—scil. xvi acras et dim. in Blaland, et octo et dim. in Stoches, et tres in cultura quæ fuit Turaldi; et, ex altera parte villæ, xxii acras ad Wlvehand, et in eadem villa totam illam terram pro una tofta quæ jacet inter toftam ecclesiæ et toftam Willelmi Nores, et communem pasturam villæ. Ista dedi in æternum Ecclesiæ præfatæ de Whiteby pro s. mea, et filiorum et antecess. et succ. meorum, libera, soluta et quieta ab omni servitio et exactione et consuetudine sæculari. Hanc præfatam donationem meam dedit etiam Alfridus filius meus propria manu sua supradictæ Ecclesiæ de Whiteby. Hiis testibus. ## CCCLXIV. ALIA CARTA DE SCRYTENBECC.

CCCLXVII. ALIA CARTA DE SCRITENBEC.

A. G. mill<sup>o</sup> ducentesimo septuagesimo, ad Natale Domini, ita convenit inter D'num Robertum,<sup>1</sup> Abbatem, et Conv. de Whiteby, ex una parte, et D'num Thomam de Chanci, dominum de Scripenbek, ex altera:—Videl. quod cum Adam de Chanci de Scridenbek detulisset quoddam breve novæ dissaisinæ super præd. Abbatem de communa pasturæ cujusdam culturæ jacentis inter fraxinum<sup>2</sup> et villam de Ponte Belli, per assensum et procuracionem ipsius D'ni Thomæ, idem D'nus Abbas et Conventus concesserunt quod cultura præd., quæ dudum fuerat terra arabilis, jaceat ad pasturam prout consueverat tempore aliorum Abbatum, prædecessorum suorum, (122<sup>b</sup>) quamdiu culturæ et seliones libere-tenentium, vel aliorum de villa prædicta, prope jacentes, jaceant ad pasturam. Et si contingat quod prædicti tenentes t'ras suas coadjacentes vertant in terram arabilem, quod præd. Abbas et Conv. culturam præd. in terram arrabilem vertant sine alicujus contradictione vel impedimento; salva eisdem Domino Roberto Abbati, et Conventui, vestura bladi crescentis in cultura prædicta. Et pro hac concessione prædictus D'nus Thomas de Chanci concessit et manucepit quod salvabit vesturam illius culturæ anni præsentis ad opus prædictorum D'ni Roberti, Abbatis, et Conventus absque detractatione vel calumpnia vel aliqua diminutione, et faciet retrahere<sup>3</sup> illud breve novæ dissaysinæ quod prædictus Adam impetravit super

Omn. hominibus has litteras aud. vel vis., Willelmus filius Hugonis de Ebor, salutem. Noverit univ. v. [etc., as in No. 105].<sup>3</sup>

CCCLXIX. ALIA DE SCRIDENBEK.

Sciant omnes, ad quos pr. scriptum pervenerit, ita convenisse inter Abbatem<sup>4</sup> et Conv. de Whiteby, et Michaellem Norensem de Scripenbek—videl. quod præd. Abbas et Conv. relaxaverunt eidem Michaeli totum clamium quod habuerunt in quadam domo in Scirpenbek, pro qua prædicti Abbas et Conv. implacitaverunt eundem Michaellem per breve de nova dissaisina. Et pro hac relaxatione et quietaclamatione prænom. Michael dedit et concessit præd. Abbati et mon. suis liberum transitum per t'ram suam per parvum mariscum versus aquilonem juxta terram Ecclesiæ, secundum quod via determinata fuit per terminos eo tempore quo pax facta fuit inter eosdem Abbatem et mon. et Michaellem. Et notandum quod præd. Abbas et mon. de Whiteby, vel sui, non vendicabunt sibi jus transeundi per curiam prædicti [Michaelis], nec idem Michael, vel sui, sibi jus

<sup>1</sup> See No. 371, of several years' later date than this deed, wherein "Radulphus quondam Rector" is spoken of as lately dead, and law proceedings by Thomas de Chanci are also made mention of.

<sup>2</sup> The name of William de Pothow occurs as that of a witness in three deeds in the Yarm Friarage collection, cotemporary with Stephen de Meinill son of Robert, and with Adam de Hilton. The latter was still living in 1245. This may be the same man, or, if not, his son.

<sup>3</sup> There are five additional witnesses specified here, viz.:—(123) Radulfo Burdon. Michaelle Norrays. Petro Britone. Benedicto, filio Arnaldi. Henrico Puset; et aliis—the last two of whom are met with in No. 249, the date of which is indicated within a few years by the name of the first witness specified.

vendicabunt transeundi per curiam præd. Abbatis et mon. de consuetudine. Convenit etiam inter prænom. <sup>3</sup> No. 367, dated in 1270, makes it certain that the present deed is of a still later date, but whether the W. here stands for Walter or William is altogether uncertain. Walter Giffard was Archbishop 1266-1279, and William de Wickwaine from 1279 to 1285; but which of these two Archbishops is intended cannot be decided.

CCCLXXVI. (No title.)

(129) Memorandum quod A. D. millesimo sexagesimo septimo, Hugo, Comes Cestrensis, et Willelmus Percy, venerunt in Angliam cum D<sup>no</sup> Willelmo, Duce Normannorum, Conquestore. Et idem Willelmus Conquestor dedit prædicto Hugoni villam de Whytteby, cum omnibus suis membris. Et idem Hugo dedit præd. Willelmo de Percy omnia prædicta terras et tenementa, sibi et hæc. suis, ita libere et quiete sicut præd. Hugo ea habuit ex dono Regis. Et præd. Willelmus de Percy fundavit Abbathiam de Whytteby, et dedit præd. villam, cum suis membris, Deo, S. P. et S. Hyldæ de Whytteby, et Serloni, fratri suo, et monachis ib. Deo servientibus, tempore d'ni Willelmi Regis Conquestoris<sup>1</sup> — scil. a portu Whyttebyensi totam marinam usque Blawyke, et inde usque Grenedyke, et in longitudine Grenedyke, et inde usque Swynstyschage, et inde usque Thornelay, et totam Thornelay usque Kyrkelake, et usque Coppekeldbrok, et inde in longitudine per cilium usque ultra Thevesdykes, et usque Stanecrosgate quæ est prope villam de Suffeld, et usque Grethayhevede, et usque Elsykcroft, et mosam usque dimidium mosæ, et inde usque Darwent, et dimidium Darwent in longitudine usque ubi erumpit Darwent, et usque Lillowcros et Scotgrayhows, et usque Sylhowe, et usque Lythebeck, et sicut Lythebeck cadit in aquam de Eske, et dimidium Eske in longitudine, et sicut aqua de Brokelbek [currit] in longitudine, usque Swarhowecros, et usque in Horsecroft, et usque Tordisa, et usque in mare, et per marinam ad Whytteby. Quæ quidem<sup>2</sup> bundæ continentur in quodam Quo Warranto in Comitatu Ebor. coram Willelmo de Seham.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This is rather an extraordinary document, inasmuch as the statements it makes are in some instances entirely incompatible with known facts, and even, as will be noticed below, with the direct and most distinct statements conveyed or involved in not a few of the Charters contained in the preceding parts of the book itself. This is unfortunate, as having a direct tendency and force towards rendering its statements, when more in consistency with truth and evidence, of less authority. Were it otherwise the statements involved in the sentences to which this note is appended would be of great value as well as importance. As noted in the Introductory Chapters, there is no evidence of any sort to indicate the manner in which the Whitby lands passed from Hugh of Chester to William de Percy as tenant in capite. All that we know is that they did so pass, and it is at least not improbable that they passed in the manner stated in the present sentences. Again, there is every ground, in the way of reasoning and induction, for arriving at the unhesitating conclusion that the donation of Whitby Strand to the Abbey was made in the Conqueror's time, and in all particulars as here stated. These statements then would be of great interest, and greater value, as at once removing the doubts implied or expressed by Charlton and Young, and correcting the misunderstandings of those authors, were it not for the blemishes noticed above.

<sup>3</sup> "William de Saham (son of Robert de Saham of Saham Toney in Norfolk, and brother of Richard de Saham, who was made a Baron of the Exchequer, 23 Edw. I.) founded a Chantry at Saham Toney. He was raised to the Bench on the accession of Edw. I., and continued to act for many years as a Judge of the King's Bench, and to be employed on many Itinera till 18 Edw. I. In that year, although he shared in the disgrace of many of his

Et idem Willelmus de Percy, fundator dictæ Abbathia, genuit Alanum de Percy, et Ricardum fratrem ejus; et idem Alanus confirmavit cartam patris sui, et obiit sine hærede de corpore suo,<sup>2</sup> et sepultus [est] apud Whytteby; et sic descendit brethren, and was not only removed from his seat, but fined in the sum of three thousand marks (Weever, 367; Rot. Parl. i. 52-63), he is described in a document (Bib. Cott. Claud. l. viii. p. 206) as entirely innocent—‘in quo dolus seu fraus non est inventus’—and as paying a fine to conciliate the King. He was alive in 28 Edw. i., when he was defendant in an action brought against him for damage done to property in Hemingham in Norfolk (Abb. Placit. 242).”—(Foss’ Judges of England, p. 577.) I have not been able to discover the “Quo Warranto” named. <sup>1</sup> See No. 582.

<sup>2</sup> This, in the face of such documentary evidence as is afforded in No. 1 (p. 4), “ex dono Will. de Percy, filii Alani de Perci, advocati nostri;” No. 26, by William de Perci, who in it speaks of “Emma de Port, mater Alani de Perci, patris mei,” and of Walter de Percy, “frater meus;” No. 55, “Will. de Perci, filii Alani de Perci;” No. 187, Richard the First’s confirmation of “omnes donationes Will. de Perci, fundatoris, et Alani de Perci, filii ejus, et Will. de Perci, filii Alani,” etc.; to say nothing of such other documents as Nos. 59 and 211, wherein Alan de Perci, the grantor, speaks of his father Alan, and of his brothers William, Walter, Gaufrid and Henry—and there are others like—in the face of such documentary evidence this statement in the text is simply astounding; and so is the following one, that Alan having no issue “the inheritance descended to Richard (de Perci, de Dunseley) his brother, as heir to the said Alan.” But that which next ensues, viz., that “this Richard neither gave nor confirmed anything” to the Abbey is not much less surprising, as he is the first donor mentioned in the Memorial after the founders (William and Alan) and Emma de Port, as bestowing “duas partes decimæ bladi de dominio de Stachestune” (p. 3), and from Kirkby’s Inquest it appears (p. 52) that there were six carucates of the Percy fee at this place, held of Gilbert de Gaunt.

hæreditas Ricardo fratri suo, et hæredi ejusdem Alani; et præd. Ricardus nihil dedit nec confirmavit. Et de præd. Ricardo processit Willelmus de Percy, qui quidem Willelmus de Percy, filius Ricardi, fundavit domum de Grededall'<sup>1</sup>—nunc vocatur Handall'—in honore B. Mariæ Virginis, tempore Henrici Regis Angliæ, filii Willelmi Conquestoris, A. D. millesimo, centesimo, tricesimo tertio, per cartam suam. Et idem Willelmus de Percy dedit illis monialibus duas toftas in campis de Duncceley super mare, unam scilicet Willelmi filii Ermoth, et aliam Aldewini, et alibi in campis de Staxtona—scil. in Depedale decem acras t'ræ de suis dominicis, et pasturam cc<sup>arum</sup> ovium, sicut in campis de Grededall', et in campis de Duncceley, in perp. elemosinam.

Omnibus S. Matris Eccl. filiis, tam futuris quam præsentibus, Willelmus.

<sup>1</sup> It might be almost surmised, from the misstatements just noted, that possibly the writer of this document had confounded William de Percy, son of Richard of Dunsley, with William son of Alan, and that the confusion still existed when he penned this sentence, were it not that there is confirmation from other sources that William, son of Richard de Percy de Dunsley, really was the founder of Handale. It may also be specially noted, as implied in the entry last quoted, that Staxton, as well as Dunsley, both named in the next sentence, were alike in the fee of the Dunsley Percies.

Grete hertes in the haynes

Faire bares in the playnes."

MS. Lincoln, A. I. 17, f. 130."

The present word is merely a formation from hayn, having the dialect word ing—in its first sense "low and moist meadow or pasture land," and afterwards becoming a distinctive or descriptive name as supplied to a field or portion of land—as its second element. In the Appendix will be found copy of some of the Abbey account rolls, in which the localities severally named in this document will be found identified, as far as is possible, at least.

<sup>1</sup> Semer, in all probability. No note, so far as I am aware, is extant as to any service rendered by the Abbey for the lands of Everley to the lord of the fee, who, at the date of the present deed, was Henry de Percy, Earl of Northumberland.

<sup>4</sup> A contraction occurs in all these places, the exact equivalent of which is not too evident. It is in form a long s with a curved crossing—in fact, exactly similar to the contraction which stands at the end of the word servisiæ as written in its contracted form (s'uis') where it stands for sie (= sia). There is little doubt that it is intended to denote ale and bread of an inferior description, and may perhaps represent secunde, which I have ventured in place of it, on the analogy of the word applied to flour of an inferior description as compared to fine or the best, namely, "seconds."

In all, 102 white loaves, with 10 seconds, making up the sum of 112, as stated in the document, and made out of half a quarter of corn. The ale sums up to 88 flagons, with 14 of the second quality, or a total of 102, which is four more than the number stated—iiii<sup>xx</sup> et xviii, and which are made out of three quarters of oat malt.

ALEXANDRUM DE SNETON.

TERTIUS ARTICULUS. Item cum in una Indentura inter Abbatem et antecessores dicti Alexandri habetur quod præd. antec. et pro se et hæc. suis concesserunt Abbati et (134<sup>b</sup>) Conventui dimidiam marcam per annum pro tota terra a Scalmaryg usque Katewike in longitudine, et in latitudine a veteri fossato t'ræ arabilis de Sneton, qui latus dubicatur usque Rethryg in latitudine,<sup>5</sup> simul cum affixione stagni molendini sui aquatici inter Sethelhil et Rethrig, tandem malitia prævalente, præd. molendinum aquaticum extirpantes et dissipantes gratis, et molendinum aurarium fabricantes,<sup>6</sup> dictam firmam dimidiæ

marcæ penitus subtraxerunt per annos octo vel circiter, tandem humiliter supplicarunt ut dictum molendinum in loco pristino reficere possent, et dictam firmam, prout justum erat, solverent imperpetuum :—quod eis concessum est, et areragia condonatur, ita ut ad f. S. Martini in hyeme, A. D. mill<sup>o</sup> ccc sexto decimo dictam firmam integraliter exhiberent.

QUARTUS ARTICULUS. Cum sæpe homines dicti Alexandri facientes le Horngarth plus quam necesse esset de nemore Abbatis accipere soliti sunt, et residuum sive superfluum in villa vendere solebant, et inde ad attachiamenta<sup>1</sup> citari et amerciari, sic quievit ut dicti homines liberationem sibi a ministris Abbatis gratis accipientes, plus nec minus petentes.<sup>2</sup> Et si defectus in factura dicti Horngarth occasione minus liberati inveniretur, non eis imputaretur, sed talis defectus, si defectus esset, noster erit et non illorum. Sed cum tertium diem in quo dictus Horngarth fieret sæpe vendicarent, aliter non afterwards (p. 243) :—" Among all the particulars contained in the foregoing articles, nothing to me appears so extraordinary as the building a gold-mill in that desert place where Rigg-mill now stands, the use and design of which it is difficult for us to understand. Whether some doting monk, pretending to more knowledge than the rest of mankind, deluded Sir Alexander with a notion that he had found out the philosopher's stone, and understood the art of extracting gold from some particular metal or mineral; or whether this mill was intended for the making of leaf-gold, an invention that had been discovered only about forty years before, I leave the curious to judge :—But whatever was their intention, the scheme, it seems, miscarried, and a great deal of money was wasted, little to the profit or advantage of Sir Alexander." The last sentence is peculiarly characteristic of the author, as is also the note appended, there being precisely the same amount of foundation for the one as for the other. The note is—"There is a particular kind of grey stone found in some parts of our moor, which, being fluxed, a kind of yellow metal, very much resembling gold, is extracted therefrom; and possibly some curious monk, who was not altogether unacquainted with Alchymy, after making this discovery, might think he could transmute this metal into real gold." The date of the book is 1779, and it is marvellous that an author living then, a shrewd man of business and of considerable intelligence, should bring himself to believe in the grey stone, in the unnamed "kind of yellow metal, very much resembling gold," extracted from it, and found the whole romance on no more substantial foundation than his own marvellous blunder between the Latin words for a wind-mill and a gold-mill.

QUINTUS ARTICULUS. Cum dictus Alexander quandam libertatem vendendi et emendi in villa de Whitby, absque theloneo, jure hæreditario vendicasset, et non solum sibi sed etiam hominibus suis, tandem hæc controversia sic est sopita :—quod Abbas concessit ei quod ipse fieri faciat unam mensuram sive unum modum veræ capacitatis, et afferat illud ad ballivum suum, qui dictum modum (135) signet signo Abbatis—Illud probatum et approbatum:<sup>2</sup> quem modum idem Alexander turnis committat custodiendum. Et si bladum super terram suam de manerio de Sneton proveniente[m] vendere contigerit, theloneum seu consuetudinem non dabit; aut si pro sustentatione sui et manerii emerit in portu, similiter. Sed si aliunde emptum ibidem venderit, aut ibidem emptum aliunde vendiderit, non erit liber a consuetudine prædicta. Eodem modo tenentes sui de Sneton, si ibidem emerint causa sustentationis suæ, per dictum modum mesure[t]ur, et theloneum non dabunt. Si autem alibi vendiderint aut vendidisse convicti fuerint, aut alibi quam de satis propriis ad manerium de Sneton pertinentibus, aut provenientes, emerint, et ad Whiteby venale perduxerint;—in <sup>1</sup> Again an insuperable difficulty as the passage stands. The intended sense most likely is that, whereas the homagers of the lord of Sneton frequently demanded as a right a three days summons (or “warning,” in the local phrase) before making up their portion of the horngarth, no other reply was vouchsafed to them than that they were legally warned although not formally summoned before Ascension Eve, or the very day on which the horngarth service had to be executed; that if ever a different practice had been pursued, it had only been on the special occasion originating in the coincidence of St. John of Beverley’s day with Ascension Eve, which day being a holiday the horngarth could not then be made. The construction is altogether and strangely elliptical, and postulaverint is mistakenly used for some other verb equivalent to the præmuniti fuerint of the preceding line. Perhaps postulati fuerint may have been intended. It would not be worse Latin than much of the staple of the deed.

<sup>2</sup> This may have been the legend on the said seal or stamp of the Abbot; or the words may simply denote the formal meaning of the impression of such seal or stamp.

SEPTIMUS ARTICULUS. Petit idem Alexander fidelitatem sive servitium debitum ab Abbate pro quibusdam terris in campo de Sneton:—[cum vero responderemus nos]<sup>2</sup> nullas terras de collatione antecessorum suorum nisi puratas et quietas consecutos, non credenti scripta nostra protulimus. Ipsi autem super aliqua particula hæsitantes, ut monumenta quærentes et inventa exhibentes, taliter satisfaceremus<sup>3</sup>—quod quidem difficile erat tam cito monumenta singula invenire, usque alias dilatum est.

OCTAVUS ARTICULUS. Cum semper forestarii nostri messonarium dicti Alexandri, sive nemorum suorum custodem, arcum et sagittas deferre prohiberent, ipsas ac sæpe auferentes, aliquando atthachiantes ipsum, non debere dici Forestarium sed Wodwarde asserentes;—tandem sic conquievit.

<sup>3</sup> This entire sentence again is so corrupt that emendation is very difficult. Hæsitanti, however, instead of hæsitantes, to agree with ipsi and governed by satisfaceremus, seems fairly obvious, and taking ut as substituted for cum, the sense probably intended may be extracted. Charlton's rendering is—"To which it was answered, that we had received no lands from the liberality of his ancestors but what were free and clear from every service. On their not allowing this we produced our charters, but they, scrupling some particulars, and finding fault with these records as the inventions of our own brains, we gave them for answer that every single record was not so easily to be met with, so this matter was postponed to another time;" the note being—"Probably the Abbot's book was shewed to Sir Alexander, in which copies of all their Charters were contained"—a surmise as far wide of the truth as any of those which precede it.

cadit in Rie, et inde in longum de Sivona usque ad locum ubi at once seen to be more than justifiable. The first part of the boundary in question, or from Howe Bridge along the Rye to the influx of the Seven, and thence to the source of the stream so named, is easily traced on any moderately good map. From the said source to Ralph Cross is but a short step, of under a mile. Crux Radulphi is specially named in several of the Gyseburne deeds as one among the boulder-marks serviceable in marking off certain grants by the house of de Brus to the Priory, and it is still standing, and the existing or modern boundary takes a fairly direct course to the next mere or boulder. In the document before us this is designated as West Shoner Howes, a name not recognisable now, but beyond question identifiable as the howes near White Cross in the Ordnance Survey. Lowsohowes is the modern Loose Howe; Willelmi howes is represented by William Hill in the boundary between Danby and Rosedale as it existed up to a quite recent private arrangement between the lords of these adjoining manors, and in what is practically the existing boundary of Cleveland. Est Shonerhowes is Shunner Howe on the map, and in the mouths of gamekeepers and the country folk; and from thence the Wheeldale gill and beck are speedily reached. The course of the Mirk Esk from this point is sufficiently obvious as a boundary; but a considerable difficulty presents itself in connection with the clause, “et in longum Myrke Eske usque ad locum ubi Mirk Esk cadit in Esk, et in longum Esk usque ad locum ubi Lithebeck cadit in Eske et inde ascendendo per furcam de Lythebecke versus aquilonem, usque,” etc. For Lithbeck falls into the Mirk Esk, not into the Esk itself, and the united streams flow into the Esk; neither is there any “furca de Lythebecke.” There is no way in which the delineation of this part of the boundary can be made intelligible. The only supposition is that the scribe blundered his copy unmercifully, and that he meant to say the boundary which, at the point where Lithebeck falls into the Mirk Esk—only a few dozen yards from Grosmont Church—becomes also the boundary of Whitby Liberty, after proceeding to the Esk returns again to the point at which Lithebeck falls into Mirk Esk, and, making a fork there with its former course, proceeds thence to Calverleygate, and so, forward. Now here, reference may be made to the boundary as given in the Percy Charters, and divers royal and other confirmations (see Nos. 27—the second so numbered—186, 190, etc.), only premising that the course of boundary described in the present document is in the direction opposite to that taken in the documents just cited. In the latter we go from Lithebeck back to Sylehow; in the present case from Lithebeck to Calverleygate, thence along below the brae to the Mickle Stone (possibly connected with what are now called the Bride Stones), and thence in like manner—that is, along below the brae—to Sillhowes. In the Whitby boundary, again, it is back from Sylehow to Scograineshowes; in the document before us, the course is from Sillhowes to Forsterhowes—now Foster Howes—and thence to Scotgranehowes (see Note 23 to No. 27—second so numbered), Fosterhowes not being named in the Whitby line. From Scotgranehowes to Lillehowes, in the Whitby deeds Lillacros or Lillehoweros, and from thence, in both alike, to the source of the Derwent. Then along the

Derwent to where Talebeke joins that stream. This Talebeke is, of course, the "Tyllaybeke qui est subtus Ravenclyf juxta Manerium de Semar" of No. 376, where Ravenclyf represents the modern Raincliff, so familiar to riders or carriage parties from Scarborough through the Forge Valley and along the Raincliff woods. The "syket" then reached is no doubt marked by the "New Cut," and so on by the Vetus Fossata to Elsycroft or Elfsicroft. From this latter point (as to the site of which see notes to No. 27) the boundary proceeds to Grenehede—Gretaheved in the Whitby divisæ—and thence to the dyke between Suffield Moor and Scalby Hays, and from that point along the brae to Staincroscliffe-gate—Staincrossgate in No. 190, etc.; and so on, still along the brae, to Thevisdykes (Theovesdiches, etc.), Capillgrave (Coppekeldbroc, etc.), Kirklaw (Kirkelac, etc.), Thornlaw (Thornelaye, etc.), and Swynstyshaw (Swinestischage, etc.). Between this mere and Greendyke the present document introduces three meres not named in the Whitby documents, viz.: Ingaldrake-sives, Hardallelde—presumably a corruption of Hardalehead, now Harwooddale-head—and Wolfpitts, and then Grenedyke is reached, and finally Blawyke. The boundary then runs away down to the south along the coast, and ceases to have any immediate connection with the interest of the present volume.

Everie<sup>5</sup> year the Hornegarth service ys to be doone upon Hollie Thursday evne.

Tho. Cockrill being baylyf to the abbot did meete by sonn Rise the Conieres, the Strangwayes, the Eldringtones, and Allettson, who weere bound to this service, in the Strye-head hard by Lyttell-beck, and the said Cockrill did see every one cutt downe with a knyfe, he appoynting the wood, so muche as should serve. From thence they caym not the nearest way, but brinnginge theym upon theyr backe, went a good way before they caym in to the way. So comminge to the water at the towne end they maid the hedg which should stand three tydes, and then the officer did blow owte upon they.

<sup>1</sup> This catalogue is written in apparently the same hand, and with the self-same glossy ink, the Memorial and Nos. 2 and 3. It stands in three vertical parallel columns on the first folio in the book, numbered 138 by the person—possibly Gascoigne—who re-numbered the pages of the volume. At the bottom of the page is the following entry:—"This booke was showne unto ancis Comyn, gent., at y<sup>e</sup> time of his examination, the 10th day of May 1671, before us and on the outer margin, longitudinally along it, is again the following:—

"This booke was showne unto Robert Buschell gentl' at y<sup>e</sup> time of his examination, 28th ye of September 1683, before us

"Ma. Phipson. C. Thomlinson."

THE SURTEES SOCIETY.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR MD.CCC.LXXIX.

SINCE the last Report was issued, the progress of the SURTEES SOCIETY has been marked by few changes, certainly by no diminution in its usefulness and prosperity. The effect of the limitation of the number of members to three hundred and fifty has been a decided gain to the Society in the acquisition of a settled income sufficient for the work to be undertaken, and in the avoidance of continual changes in the number of copies of our publications.

The Council have now resolved that no volume shall be sent to a member whose subscription is unpaid for the year to which that volume is appropriated.

Four volumes have been published since the last Report was issued. 1. An interesting volume of Yorkshire Biographies and Journals, which has attracted considerable attention. 2. The Charter-book of the Cistercian house of Newminster in Northumberland. 3. A Second Portion of the Memorials of Fountains Abbey, part of which was in print at the time of the decease of its lamented editor, Mr. Walbran. 4. The Household Books of Lord William Howard of Naworth, the 'Belted Will' of Border story, a work of great interest and historical importance. There is no lack of valuable materials at the disposal of the Society for coming years, as will be seen from the list of suggested publications. It may have to be considered before long whether it will not be better for the Society to begin a new series of publications under the old name and upon the old lines, but with a fresh numbering and some other token of difference. The stock of the old publications in the possession of the Society is so greatly reduced that it is by no means easy, and it will soon be impossible, to supply full sets of our works to any new members who may wish to acquire them.

In Sir Walter Calverley Trevelyan the Society has lost, it may be said, one of its founders, a gentleman who for more than half a century has been a friend of scholars, and a sympathizer and helper in literary work throughout the North of England. There are now but four names upon our list of members which stood there at the foundation of the Society in 1834.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY,

ESTABLISHED IN THE YEAR 1834,

IN honour of the late Robert Surtees, of Mainsforth, esquire, the author of the History of the County Palatine of Durham, and in accordance with his pursuits and plans; having for its object the publication of inedited Manuscripts, illustrative of the intellectual, the moral, the religious, and the social condition of those parts of England and Scotland, included on the east between the Humber and the Frith of Forth, and on the west between the Mersey and the Clyde, a region which constituted the ancient Kingdom of Northumbria.

NEW RULES AGREED UPON IN 1849; REVISED 1863.

I.—The Society shall consist of not more than three hundred and fifty members.

II.—There shall be a Patron of the Society, who shall be President.

III.—There shall be twenty-four Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and Two Treasurers.

IV.—The Patron, the Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers, shall form the Council, any five of whom, including the Secretary and a Treasurer, shall be a quorum competent to transact the business of the Society.

V.—The twenty-four Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers shall be elected at a general meeting, to continue in office for three years, and be capable of re-election.

VI.—Any vacancies in the office of Secretary or Treasurers shall be provisionally filled up by the Council, subject to the approbation of the next general meeting.

VII.—Three meetings of the Council shall be held in every year, on the first Tuesday in the months of March, June, and December; and the place and hour of meeting shall be fixed by the Council, and communicated by the Secretary to the members of the Council.

VIII.—The meeting in June shall be the anniversary, to which all the members of the Society shall be convened by the Secretary.

IX.—The Secretary shall convene extraordinary meetings of the Council, on a requisition to that effect, signed by not less than five members of the Council, being presented to him.

X.—Members may be elected by ballot at any of the ordinary meetings, according to priority of application, upon being proposed in writing by three existing members. One black ball in ten shall exclude.

XI.—Each member shall pay in advance to the Treasurer the annual sum of one guinea. If any member's subscription shall be in arrear for two years, and he shall neglect to pay his subscription after having been reminded by the Treasurer, he shall be regarded as having ceased to be a member of the Society.

XII.—The money raised by the Society shall be expended in publishing such compositions, in their original language, or in a translated form, as come within the scope of this Society, without limitation of time with reference to the period of their respective authors. All editorial and other expenses to be defrayed by the Society.

XIII.—One volume, at least, in a closely printed octavo form, shall be supplied to each member of the Society every year, free of expense.

XIV.—If the funds of the Society in any year will permit, the Council shall be at liberty to print and furnish to the members, free of expense, any other volume or volumes of the same character, in the same or a different form.

XV.—The number of copies of each publication, and the selection of a printer and publisher, shall be left to the Council, who shall also fix the price at which the copies, not furnished to members, shall be sold to the public.

XVI.—The armorial bearings of Mr. Surtees, and some other characteristic decoration connecting the Society with his name, shall be used in each publication.

XVII.—A list of the officers and members, together with an account of the receipts and expenses of the Society, shall be made up every year to the time of the annual meeting, and shall be submitted to the Society to be printed and published with the next succeeding volume.

XVIII.—No alteration shall be made in these rules except at an annual meeting. Notice of any such alteration shall be given, at least as early as the ordinary meeting of the Council immediately preceding, to be communicated to each member of the Society.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE SURTEES SOCIETY,

WITH THEIR RESPECTIVE SALE PRICES.

N.B.—Of several of these Volumes the number of copies on hand is very small; some will not be sold except to Members of the Society under certain conditions, and all applications for them must be made to the Secretary.
